

A WARRIOR UNDEFEATABLE/

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3771-Dozen or so holy maidens stood on either side. Jared was in the middle, holding Yuliya in his arms.

As Jared waved his hand, an arcane array materialized out of thin air.

This way, they could conceal their aura, making it impossible for those who were trailing behind to find them.

Observing the frail state of Yuliya, Jared started to undress her.

Seeing that, many of the holy maidens felt a wave of awkwardness wash over them.

Bianca was somewhat puzzled. "Mr. Chance, why do you need to remove Yuliya's clothes to treat her injuries?" After all, Jared was a man, and it seemed somewhat inappropriate for him to undress Yuliya.

Jared glanced at Bianca, then said, "You touch her..." Intrigued, Bianca reached out and lightly touched Yuliya, only to quickly retract her hand in the next instant.

"She's so hot..." It was as if Yuliya was on fire. She wasn't just having a fever, she was burning up.

If this continued, it would burn through her vital organs and even cause severe damage to the meridians.

"What's going on here? It's clearly quite chilly here, so why does Yuliya's body feel so hot?" Bianca asked in confusion. "Yuliya also practices frost techniques.

If she continues to burn like this, I'm afraid she might not make it." "She was injured by the snow-cloud beast, leaving her weak. She even forced herself to travel such a great distance, which is why she ended up in this state," Jared explained.

"The snow-cloud beast itself exudes frost energy. Anyone injured by it should be covered in frost, shouldn't they?" Bianca asked.

“This is due to the body’s self-regulation mechanism. Precisely because the frost energy damaged it, the body would desperately emit heat to maintain the functioning of the organs.” As Jared spoke, he undressed Yuliya until she was left with absolutely nothing on.

Even though Bianca wasn’t certain about the truth of Jared’s words, she was reassured by the presence of others. She doubted that Jared would dare to do anything to Yuliya under their watch.

Jared began to treat Yuliya. Although there was physical contact, he carefully avoided any sensitive areas.

At that moment, Leighton and his group had already ventured into the polar region. After spreading out his spiritual sense for a thorough investigation, Leighton quickly led his family members forward in pursuit.

Following this, numerous individuals from various sects and families arrived at the polar region. Immediately afterward, they transformed into streaks of light, dashing off in different directions.

Though Jared was tending to Yuliya’s injuries, he was also closely monitoring the movements in the polar region.

Upon learning that numerous individuals from various sects and families had arrived in the polar region, he furrowed his brows.

He suddenly realized that this trip to the polar region was not as simple as he had initially thought.

Besides dealing with the inherent dangers of the polar region, they also had to be on guard against the Mueller family. Now, they even had to be wary of people from other sects and prestigious families.

It was way too difficult.

However, there was one advantage to having a crowd. The more people there were in the polar region, the more chaotic it would be. It would be the best strategy if one could seize this chaos and obtain what they desired.

What needed to be done was to win over, intimidate, and suppress them.

Depending on the person, different strategies were required.

After the treatment, Yuliya gradually regained consciousness.

Luckily, Jared was well-prepared and managed to dodge it directly.

Bianca quickly stepped forward and asked, "Yuliya, are you okay?" Yuliya sensed her aura, noticing a significant improvement. Finding no major issues, she nodded. "I'm fine now. He..." "Yuliya, Mr. Chance saved your life. If it wasn't for him, you might have been dead by now," Bianca hurriedly explained.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3772-Yuliya glanced at Jared, then slowly began to dress herself.

"Do I really have to be naked to get treated?" Yuliya muttered.

Jared didn't offer any explanations. Instead, he simply said, "Let's get going..." Bianca was right behind Yuliya, explaining, "Yuliya, you were burning up just now. We had no choice but to remove your clothes to cool you down; otherwise, your body would have been scorched. I can assure you, Mr. Chance didn't do anything to you. He simply helped treat you and we all witnessed it." Upon listening to Bianca's words, Yuliya realized she might have been a bit too emotional earlier. She quietly said to Jared, "Thank you..." However, Jared did not pay her any mind and walked straight ahead.

Everyone followed Jared, heading deep into the polar region.

Several groups had already moved ahead, hence Jared and his team had to hasten their pace to search for viable resources in the polar region.

Jared walked at a brisk pace, forcing Bianca and the others to take turns supporting Yuliya in order to keep up with him quickly.

Throughout the journey, Jared was constantly on high alert. He was so attuned to his surroundings that he could detect any danger in the vicinity almost instantly.

Until the sky started to dim, Jared and his companions hadn't encountered any danger, let alone any people.

Upon noticing that Yuliya was struggling to keep going, Jared finally suggested, "Let's rest here for the night." Bianca nodded, then promptly arranged for the holy maidens to stand guard and keep watch around the perimeter.

Yuliya, on the other hand, had collapsed to the ground, gasping for breath.

“This place hardly seems like the immortal’s tomb. I didn’t feel any hint of celestial energy.” Jared glanced around, feeling somewhat puzzled inside.

If they were indeed at the immortal’s tomb, then there would undeniably be remnants of celestial energy. Moreover, the weapons wielded by the immortals and the various magical items they wore would surely be left behind.

The celestial energy here should be much more intense than in other places.

Yet, Jared hadn’t sensed even a hint of celestial energy.

This left Jared somewhat confused. Is this polar region really the immortal’s tomb, or is it all just a lie?

“This place is nothing like the immortal’s tomb!” At that moment, Vermilion Demon Lord began to speak.

Vermilion Demon Lord himself has spoken. It’s clear that this place is definitely not the immortal’s tomb.

Jared couldn’t understand why Nieva would deceive him.

“Since this isn’t the immortal’s tomb, why did we come here?” Jared was utterly astonished.

“Kid, didn’t you notice the chaotic energy here? Even the entire space seems distorted. The magnetic field here is incredibly strong. I’m afraid it will be quite difficult to take flight in such conditions,” Vermilion Demon Lord said.

Jared furrowed his brows and leaped up.

No sooner had he done so than he felt a tremendous pull, drawing him downward.

He descended rapidly and grew even more bewildered.

“Mr. Chance...” Quickly, Bianca moved in front of Jared.

“Is this place the immortal’s tomb?” Jared asked.

Bianca was taken aback for a moment, then quickly shook her head. “No...”

“Mr. Chance, please don’t be upset. Ms. Nieva did not intend to deceive you, but rather to deceive others.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3773-Bianca added, “Mr. Chance, I must be honest with you. There’s no immortal magical item hidden in this polar region. What we do have in abundance are various types of polar stones. These stones are vital resources for Lunarius Palace. Of course, for the Mueller family, these polar stones are also a crucial resource. This is because only those who practice frost techniques can benefit from these polar stones. After discovering polar stones in the polar region, the Mueller family decided to collaborate with Lunarius Palace. They wanted to jointly search for more and then distribute the findings.” Bianca continued, “It’s just that the Mueller family is more powerful than Lunarius Palace, and what’s more, a member of the Mueller family even became an elder of Lunarius Palace. It’s clear they don’t trust us. Ms. Nieva spread the rumor that the polar region is the immortal’s tomb with the intention of attracting more people to the area. It’s also a strategy to find more cultivators to aid Lunarius Palace. Only when the polar region is in chaos does Lunarius Palace have a chance. As long as we find the polar stones, we will never have to look over our shoulders again.” Jared stared blankly at Bianca. Bianca knows everything. Her readiness to reveal everything to me must have been masterminded by Nieva herself.

Now that we have reached the polar region and many sects and families have been deceived into coming here, there is no longer a need to keep things from me.

Jared understood now. Even if he hadn’t shown up at Lunarius Palace and killed Keiran, Lunarius Palace and the Mueller family were bound to clash sooner or later.

His arrival merely served as a catalyst, causing Lunarius Palace to fall out with the Mueller family ahead of time.

“What exactly is this polar stone?” Jared asked.

Bianca shook her head. “I’m not sure. I’ve never seen it before. Ms. Nieva stumbled upon it here by chance. That time, she was seriously injured and recuperated for a long time.” Jared was surprised. The head of Lunarius

Palace is a highly advanced cultivator. If she could be injured in the polar region, wouldn't it be a death sentence for cultivators like us, who are merely Tribulator cultivators, to attempt to go there?

Bianca noticed Jared's confusion and quickly clarified, "Ms. Nieva was injured because she accidentally ventured into the border of the chaos dimension. This polar region is the border. And there are no clear features or obstacles marking this border. If one were to mistakenly enter the border of the chaos dimension, they would likely lose their life. Ms. Nieva said she merely strayed a few steps off course before she barely managed to escape." Jared finally understood. The border of the chaos dimension is so deadly that even the supreme beings at Immortal Realm who venture in will be reduced to nothing but bones.

Then there's really nothing more to say when Nieva is a cultivator at Ultimate Realm.

"Go rest. We have to continue our journey tomorrow." Jared sent Bianca away.

He found himself lost in confusion. He had no idea where the polar stones were located, nor did he have a map or any directions. In the vast, white snow, he wondered where he was supposed to start looking.

If they were at the immortal's tomb, he could still determine the exact location based on the intensity of the celestial energy present.

However, at that time, they had no idea what a polar stone was, let alone its aura. They didn't even know where to begin their search.

While Jared was at a loss, Vermilion Demon Lord said, "The polar stones must be affected by the magnetic field. To find them, you just need to search for the area with the strongest magnetic field." "Magnetic field..." Jared began to rummage through his Storage Ring.

By the time the sky was faintly lit, Jared had already acquired two metal rods in his hand.

The two ends of the metal rods had been sharpened to a fine point.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3774-Observing the metal rod in Jared's hand, Bianca curiously asked, "Mr. Chance, what is this?" "This is a detector. In places where there are polar stones, the magnetic field gets stronger, causing a reaction in this metal rod. Let's split up now. This place is too vast. If we continue searching this way, who knows how long it will take.

You guys take the detector and go your own way, and I'll go mine. But don't venture too far away. A hundred miles is acceptable. That way, if you're in danger, I can come to your aid at any moment." Jared handed Bianca a detection rod and a few communication devices.

He also taught her how to use them.

"Mr. Chance, you should also be careful. The Mueller family is searching for you everywhere," Bianca said earnestly.

Jared gave a nod, then promptly left.

Bianca and the others also began their mission, scouring every corner for polar stones.

Not long after they parted ways, there was a slight tremor in the metal rod held by Jared.

A thrill of joy surged through his heart.

"I found it..." He moved forward slowly, and the metal rod in his hand quivered more and more intensely, gradually changing its direction.

Jared began exploring again, guided by the metal rod.

He traveled more than ten miles when the metal rod ceased trembling as though some unseen force had instantly immobilized it.

Jared knew this must be the location of the polar stones.

However, judging by the frequency of the metal rod's vibrations, it seemed that the magnetic field wasn't that strong.

Jared looked around and found that apart from the small mounds of snow dotting the landscape, there seemed to be nothing else.

No one had ever seen a polar stone, and if it was small, it would have been buried under the thick snow by now.

Just when Jared had no idea what to do, those little mounds of snow moved.

Following that, a succession of massive demon beasts revealed themselves.

“What the...” Jared was taken aback. It turned out that these mounds of snow were actually formed by these demon beasts lying on the ground, their bodies blanketed by a thick layer of accumulated snow.

Jared found himself faced with a dozen or so demon beasts, each one snarling ferociously at him. From their mouths, they expelled gusts of frost energy.

These demon beasts did not launch an attack on Jared. Instead, they were merely roaring as if to intimidate him and prevent him from encroaching on their territory.

Upon closer inspection, Jared noticed that in the areas where these demon beasts lay, there were several stones, each about the size of a fist.

These stones, however, were all of a pristine white color, and one could discern the form of snowflakes embedded within them.

“Are they polar stones?” Jared’s heart leaped with joy. If he hadn’t looked closely, it would have been challenging to discover. Underneath these dozen or so demon beasts, there were stones just like these.

Jared took a few steps forward, wanting to take a closer look.

However, when the dozen or so demon beasts saw Jared continuing forward, their roars became even more piercing.

“I only want the stones beneath you. I don’t intend to harm you. You should leave now,” Jared said to those demon beasts.

A demon beast roared and bared its teeth, breathing out a gust of frost energy toward Jared.

A surge of heat instantly flared up within Jared, effectively blocking the frost energy.

The demon beast began its assault, and Jared decided to make his move.

He drew out the Dragonslayer Sword, and demonic fire began to surge.

Jared had used a metal rod to locate this place, interrupting the demon beasts' cultivation.

However, they didn't flee. Instead, they all held the polar stones in their mouths and promptly launched an attack on Jared.