461 Chapter 460

Nara picked up her phone in a daze, only to see a text message.

She took a deep breath, wiped away the tear stains on her face, and opened the message.

The message was from an unfamiliar number, it read. "Hello, we have received your resume. Please come to our company for an interview. Nora Research Institute."

Nara stared at the content, her expression one of shock and astonishment, Had she read that wrong?

She frantically wiped the corners of her eyes and looked at the message again, only to see the words still there, unchanged.

She suddenly stood up, staring incredulously at her phone.

What was going on?

The Nora Research Institute replied to her email?!

She was so astonished that she burst into tears of joy.

While she was shocked, a neighbor said, "Nara, what are you doing here? I just saw your older brother. He looked furious as he walked by. Did something happen.

at home?"

Nara was taken aback.

She quickly grabbed the neighbor's arm and wrote, "You said my brother just saw me from a distance?"

"Yeah, he was standing there watching you for quite some time. When I came over to say hello, I saw him. take out his phone and check your school's intranet. Then he stormed off. Didn't something happen?"

A shock went through Nara's chest as she suddenly realized what was happening.

"Thank you," she wrote.

Leaving these words behind, she immediately dashed toward the hospital where she was interning.

Her brother must have seen her crying, then looked at the school intranet and discovered everything that happened. He was on his way to stand up for her!

Damn it!

Then she remembered the bodyguards from the Gill family at the hospital. Biting her lip, she quickly took out her phone and texted Keira while running.novelbin

"Keera, my brother went to see Jackson!"

After sending the message, she got on the bus and anxiously urged the bus driver to move faster.

Indeed, even in such a tense moment, Nara never considered taking a taxi. In her mind, that was an extremely luxurious thing to do.

The bus soon reached her stop, and she ran as fast as possible, but she was still a few steps behind her brother.

In the hospital room, Jackson was humiliating Ma

"What's the use of begging me by kneeling here? Le me tell you, I don't want your apology. Your sister wa here the other day; she gave me ten loud, useless kowtows!

"How about this? Crawl under my bodyguard's crotch! Oh, and maybe pee yourself afterward and then lick it clean? Then I might consider letting your sister off the hook!"

O

Then came Matias's enraged roar. "Jackson, don't push your luck! My surname is still Gill. Aren't you afraid I'll go to the head of the Gill clan?"

The Gill clan was a major clan in Clance, with their own head and clan records.

Normally, people appeal to them for resolution of any matter, only turning to the police as a last resort.

These were deemed internal affairs of the Gill family, after all.

Jackson laughed scornfully upon hearing this. "What are you? Do you think you can just enter the clan head's residence at will? And have you forgotten.." Jackson laughed arrogantly. The current head of t Gill clan is my father! Are you going to complain ab me to my father? How hilarious! Matias, you and you sister are just distant relatives from who knows how many generations ago. Do you think my father will favor me or you?"

Nara felt as if she was struck by lightning, and she froze in place upon hearing this.

She stared fixedly at the door of the hospital room.

She was utterly baffled.

Wasn't this a society ruled by law? Why could Jackson be so brazen?

Nara clenched her fists tightly, her fingertips touching the jade pendant around her neck.

If it was a matter of status, didn't that make her the legitimate heir to the direct lineage?

She was shaking. Blood rushed to her head as she suddenly strode into the hospital room!

At the South residence.

Keira had just woken up and was looking at her Before she opened Nara's message, Lewis said, "M and Nara have gone to see Jackson."

Only then did Keira see the content of the message.

She stood up abruptly. "Why did they go to see Jackson?"

Lewis remarked coolly, "They're just making trouble for themselves."

them off just because they said a few nice words to him.

They were too naive!

Before Keira could act, Lewis had already handed over her coat, leading her outside.

Keira had long become accustomed to his meticulous care, and they left the house together.

Lewis suddenly slowed down the car as they drove out of the com neighborhood. Keira was slightly taken aback. "What's wrong?"

Lewis pointed toward somewhere not far away.

Keira turned and realized that Ellis had been silent standing there, intently Watching their gate.

Keira didn't know what to say.

So, he hadn't been waiting in front of the villa but had come here to stay all night?

His suit was still damp, and his hair seemed to have dried in the wind. His complexion was pale, and his lips were colorless. He looked exhausted as if he had caught a cold.

Keira sighed silently and then looked toward Lewis again.

Lewis watched her quietly. "Shall we leave first, or..."

Keira then said, "Let's go to the hospital first."

"Okay."

Lewis drove past Ellis.

Ellis seemed not to have noticed them at all, his gaze fixed on the direction of the gate.

Through the rearview mirror, Keira watched him.

At that moment, time seemed to slow down, and a sep car passed by Ellis, she could him trembling slightly in the breeze.

She averted her gaze, afraid of feeling too heartbroken for him.

Lewis said, "Actually, it's not that he doesn't trust Mary..."

He had barely started speaking when he paused briefly, then cautiously glanced at Keira before saying,

"You might not fully understand what azoospermia means to a man."

Keira asked, "What does it mean?"

"It's a kind of humiliation, I guess. Men are very foolish. I remember that, in college, Ellis would come over and compete with me to see who could pee further in the bathroom."

Keira was speechless.

That was incredibly childish!

Perhaps because she didn't grow up in the best environment, she matured early mentally and couldn't understand such behavior.

But now she was suddenly very curious, "Who peed further?"

Lewis didn't know what to say.

His mouth twitched slightly, then he said, "Girls shouldn't concern themselves with these things."

Then he smiled, arrogantly adding, "Of course, it was me."

Keira was speechless.

"If you're not childish, what are you so proud of?!"

She rolled her eyes, "And then?"

Lewis continued. "His personality is very flamboyant, - and he's an exceptional man, He's always been an elite. figure in the circle, admired by people. Look at him. He didn't get married until he was at this age. It's only because he's afraid of his azoospermia becoming exposed; that indicates his pride.

"He doesn't want anyone to know about it, so he keeps all the Olsens in the dark. Everyone thinks he's just a player, which was why he refused to marry..."

After that, Lewis added, "For him, azoospermia is like devastating blow. But when Mary said she was pregnant, Ellis was willing to go for another check-up and even to other hospitals. It was in itself a kind of humiliation."

Keira frowned but didn't argue.

Lewis continued. "Moreover, he did it three times."

Lewis focused on the road ahead, driving carefully. "Each time was a humiliation for him, and he experienced it three times.

"Keira, from Mary's perspective, of course, he's in the wrong, but what if you consider his perspective?"

"I know what kind of person you think Mary is and that she wouldn't do anything rash, but the circles in Clance are messy, and Mary's reputation there is terrible. When I first came to Clance, the Davis family. wanted to ally with the Horton family, but the information Tom gathered also pointed to Mary's controversial private life... Given her reputation, when she suddenly claimed to have Ellis's child when Ellis believed he had azoospermia, it's understandable that he would doubt it."

Keira pursed her lips, turning her head to look out th car window.

Lewis carried on. "So, Ellis isn't beyond redemption."

Keira sighed deeply. "I understand what you're saying. But who can truly empathize with Mary's sorrow? You've seen her circumstances; she's helpless - her parents and uncle are not something she can say no to, and her previous bad reputation isn't truly reflective of who she is... but for whatever reason, Ellis almost caused her to lose her child, inflicting substantial harm both physically and psychologically.

And then..."

She said quietly, "Do you know what BFF means?"

Lewis shook his head.

Keira's eyes seemed a little hollow. "I never had friends as a child, so I never had a BFF. But when I put myself in my sister's shoes, who grew up with Mary, I believe she would side with Mary unconditionally."

She looked at Lewis. "Being BFFs means unconditional forgiveness. So, I won't speak any words in favor of Ellis. As long as Mary doesn't forgive him, neither will

Lewis nodded upon hearing this. "Understood."

He didn't speak further on Ellis's behalf but changed the subject. "Regarding the Gill family, we can confront them head-on today."

"That's what I think, too," said Keira, her eyes revealing a hint of resentment. "Again and again, they bully those siblings, kicking one when they're down! With such scoundrels, I really can't understand why Lady Gill would continue to protect Jackson.

Isn't Lady Gill a person who can distinguish right from wrong?"

"The answer is simple."

Lewis said, "Lady Gill has to consider the Gill family's reputation, so she won't admit they are wrong even though she knows Jackson is at fault." Keira sneered, "Is the reputation of the five great families of Clance that important? If so, our cooperation with the Gill family seems only to have two possible solutions."

"Which two?"

"Acquire the Gill family!"

Keira said decisively.

At those words, the corners of Lewis's mouth curled

1.

He was about to speak when Keira continued. "But that's not very realistic. Be it the Olsen family or my resources, even if we add the Horton family, we can't swallow such a big bone like the Gill family. So, we must resort to the second method."

Lewis paused slightly.

Then he heard Keira say, "We'll help the Gill family find their daughter! The big fuss the Gill family made recently about looking for a piece of jade was about searching for their lost daughter. So, as long as we know the whereabouts of that piece of jade we can help them find their daughter. Judging by the affection Lady Gill and Austin have for her, we can likely resolve this issue that way."

Keira took out her phone, opened the ad, and looked at the piece of jade while frowning. "Why do I feel like I've seen this piece of jade before?"

Lewis looked at her, "How is it familiar?"

Keira touched her chin and tilted her head. "I remember that day when Jackson gave Nara a piece of jade. This one seems a bit like that one."

After that, she suddenly looked up at Lewis. "How old is Nara?"

Lewis hesitated. "How would I know that?"

Keira immediately said, "She seems about the same age. Could it be... I'll go ask Nara later!"

As they spoke, the car entered the hospital gate.

Lewis dropped Keira off at the entrance and then went to the parking lot.

Keira quickly rushed upstairs.

Before entering the ward, she heard Matias's voice coming from inside. "Nara, let go of me! I'm just going to kowtow a few times. I can't let him delay your job-hunting because of me!"

Keira immediately stepped forward and saw Nara tugging at Matias, trying to get him to stand up. She gestured with her fingers to express herself. "Brother, I don't need you to do this! Get up!"

Matias shook his head. "Don't worry about me. Let him get this anger out of his system, and we'll have an easier time afterward. You studied so hard, always waking up early and staying up late. Before the college entrance exam, I remember you only slept five hours a day and used ginger to stay awake. You even putting menthol drops in your eyes..."

Matias's voice choked up with sobs. "Just because you can't speak, you must work harder than others. To get into the same college, you had to put in more effort than everyone else... Once others get into college, they think it's easy from there on, but not you; you always work hard. In every subject, you scored full marks... You worked hard to get the same internship opportunities as everyone else, but I'm such a good-for-nothing!"

While Matias was speaking, Nara frantically waved her hands, trying to say something, but she couldn't get the words out. She gestured anxiously. "Brother, I've never despised you. I've never felt tired or bitter..."

But Matias held her hand tightly. "I know you don't feel tired or bitter, but I can't hold you back! I haven't provided you with a better living environment or medical care. Your voice could have been treated back then, but I was useless and had no money to help you... I can't be a burden to you anymore. Don't worry about it. If Jackson can vent his anger and stop making your life difficult, he can make me do anything!"

Matias looked at Jackson with red-rimmed eyes. "Tell me, what do you want me to do?"

Jackson lay on the hospital bed, smiling gleefully at him. "You're begging for mercy now? If you had obeyed initially, it wouldn't have come to this! Too bad it's too late now! Even if you kneel and lick my feet and drink my urine, I won't let you off! Unless..."

Matias asked anxiously, "Unless what?"

Jackson glanced at his own groin. "Unless you destroy your own and become a eunuch like me! Otherwise, I'll never let you off in this lifetime! I won't do anything to you. I'll just torture you slowly, letting you feel the hardships of life!"

He looked gleefully at Nara. "I suppose your sister has O already felt it, right? How does it feel to have nowhere to intern?"

Nara clenched her fists tightly, glaring at him.

Jackson spoke again. "Right, that online resume submission thing at your college website, was the one who leaked it Nara, you're shameless. How dare you apply to the Nora Research Institute? How could you be so brazen?"

Nara immediately gestured with her hand. "Why can't I? I just wanted to try. There's no shame in being rejected! I just wanted to give myself one more chance!"

Jackson couldn't understand her sign language and scoffed. "What are you gesturing for? I can't understand you, and I don't want to hear anything else from you! I'm telling you, the Nora Research Institute won't take you! None of the hospitals in Clance will take you! Just give up! You might as well suffer along with your brother and accept my fate... Oh, right, you wanted a job, right? Our family is short of a maid. Are you interested?"

Nara stared at him furiously.

Matias said, "Don't make things hard for my sister. I'll do it!"

Jackson spat and laughed scornfully. "You? What use would I have for you? Even if you came to my house, what could you do? You're a waste. I would have you. She She may gotten Keera by now if it weren't for even have my child, and I wouldn't have touched your sister!"

After saying this, Jackson looked at Nara again. "And you...people as low as you should their lives in the mud. I had sure you never become a doctor! I'll make sure all that knowledge you've learned goes to waste! Hahaha!"

As Jackson was shouting madly, Keira's voice came from the doorway. "Who says she can't become a doctor?!"
