

Married At First Sight Chapter 3102

Married At First Sight Chapter 3102-However, after decades of marriage, Matriarch Farrell had been stricter with him than with her son. It was not that she loved him much; she just didn't allow him to betray her.

Matriarch Farrell said, "Also, that woman will die because she wants to take revenge on me. She hooked up with Marco. What does this mean? Think about it for yourself. What does this mean? Your eldest daughter-in-law is filing for divorce at home with Marco! Shiloh ruined our marriage and Marco's marriage. She deserved her death. I will not conduct an investigation into her murder or suicide, and I will not permit anyone to utilize my family's connections for such an investigation. Whoever dares to use my family's connections to do that, don't blame me for being rude."

After Matriarch Farrell finished speaking, she stood up, turned around, and walked out with her head held high.

Holden watched Matriarch Farrell leave with fear, anger, and more helplessness.

From the moment he agreed to come to her home, he couldn't raise his head or straighten his back in front of Matriarch Farrell.

When Matriarch Farrell was in a good mood, his life was easier. There was also a sweet period between husband and wife.

As Matriarch Farrell got older, the relationship between husband and wife became more and more tense.

He always needed to accommodate her, accommodate her, and tolerate her.

After Matriarch Farrell left, Sage returned to the ward and saw Holden's face turn pale while sitting on the bed, crying.

Thinking of his mother leaving, his face became gloomy. Upon calling his mother, she informed him that following his father's hospital discharge, she had requested him to move his father into the small villa he had named for retirement.

Did this mean that the father was not allowed to live in the Farrell family mansion anymore?

Matriarch Farrell had never been able to forgive Holden and Shiloh from beginning to end.

“dad.” Sage came over and felt pity for Holden, so he took a tissue and handed it to his father.

“Dad, what did you say to my mother to make her angry? When my mother left, I saw that her face was extremely ugly. She also stated that upon your discharge from the hospital, you would reside in the house under my ownership. Did you have a quarrel with my mother about Shiloh? We are all sad that Shiloh died, but it’s none of Mom’s business. Why are you arguing with Mom?”

Listening to Sage’s words, Holden thought sadly that this was the sadness of the Farrell family’s son-in-law.

No matter what the conflict between the couple was, the children felt it was his fault.

They all thought that he should not anger his wife. It was his wife who was like this. He heard that the new head of the Farrell family treated her husband very well when he came to visit her. The relationship with her husband’s family was also very harmonious, and the family lived happily.

Unlike his wife, the Janzen family always treated him like an almsgiver.

Every time his parents and family came over, his wife did not entertain them but asked the butler to entertain them. After his parents passed away, he was the only one who took his three sons back to attend the funeral. His daughter’s surname was Farrell, and his wife did not allow her to follow him back to Janzen’s house. He’s sending his old parents off for the last time.

The unreasonable person was his pillow!

Not all the heads of the Farrell family were like this.

“Did your mother really say that?” Holden became even more sad. “Your mother also wants me to die. How could I dare to quarrel with your mother? In front of your mother, I am worse than a dog.”

Holden wiped his tears and said, "I just wanted your mother to investigate Shiloh's death, but she got angry. How can I say that Shiloh has been my and your mother's daughter for more than 20 years? How could she be so ruthless?"
