

Chapter 128

Oscar carefully took his Son from his wife and placed him on the chest while he walked up and down the room.

Vee did the same for the elder brother. Placing him on her chest.

They were interrupted by a nurse who came to set up a double bassinet a few steps away from Vicky's bedside.

Vee and Oscar were with the twins until they fell asleep after which they placed them in the bassinet.

Oscar returned to where he was seated beside Vicky earlier. He reached for her hand and kissed the back of her palm.

"How are you? How do you feel? Are you hungry?"

She smiled. "I'm good. I feel so damn sore and tired but my heart is filled with so much joy. I thought I had it all when it was just Sophie and me. Nothing competes with the joy I feel in my heart right now. I feel so fulfilled and happy. I'm a wife to the most handsome man in the world and a mother to three beautiful kids. I never saw this coming but I'm grateful and so excited."

"I can say the same too."

"You did amazingly well. You were so strong. I felt useless at some point because there was nothing I could do to ease you from the pain. Thank you for going through all of that to bring our kids to the world."

Vee chuckled. "It was painful, yeah but I'd go through that over and over again just to have my beautiful Babies with me."

"I can't wait for my daughter to be here so I can spoil her with hugs and kisses."

"She will be here soon."

"You deserve some too. Come here." Oscar leaned closer to her and they both shared a very passionate kiss.

"I may have done the bulk of the work but the journey was amazing because I have a very supportive husband. You mean the world to me, baby!"

"I love you." Oscar said, stealing a quick kiss from her.

"I love you too."

"The pilot has gone to pick Gabriel and Lara. They should be with us by tomorrow."

"I'm excited to see them."

Oscar smiled. "Gabriel is excited too. He sent all his love."

"I should get you something to eat. Fedora seems to be taking lo..." Oscar was saying when a knock came through on the door.

The duo exchanged a glance before Oscar went to attend to the door.

"Mommy!!!!" Sophie yelled, running towards the bedside to go meet her mom.

Vicky smiled, mentally facepalming, hoping her daughter hadn't disturbed her sleeping brothers.

"Hi, Uncle Oscar." Amie hugged Oscar who was standing by the door.

Oscar crouched down and returned the little girl's hug.

"Fedora walked in with her hands full. She had a food basket in one hand and two gift bags in the other hand. Her driver walked in with a set of balloons, decorated in blue color, and lots of gift bags which he placed on the couch not too far from the door, then took his leave.

"You brought this yourself right?"

"Yeah, I knew you were gonna interrogate me. These are different from the ones at the reception. We got this on our way here, that's why we were a bit late."

Oscar smiled. "You shouldn't have bothered. You outdid yourself with the presents you gave them on the baby shower day"

"Of course, I have to bother. I want to remain their favorite aunt."

Oscar chuckled, "You are their only aunt."

"You see, that means I have to give my best to make sure I have a special place in their hearts."

"Definitely! Keep up the good work."

.....

"My love." She smiled, her eyes filled with so much pride as she saw Sophie come towards her. She assisted the little girl in climbing up the bed and the duo exchanged a warm long hug.

"I miss you, mommy."

"I miss you too, my baby."

Her eyes darted to her mother's belly and Vee saw the confusion in Sophie's eyes.

"What is it?" Vicky asked with a knowing smile.

Sophie said nothing. The little girl continued to stare in confusion. Vee saw that she was trying to say something but her daughter probably had no idea how to put her thoughts into words.

"Your baby brothers?" She said,

Sophie turned her attention to her and nodded.

"Over there!" She pointed to the bassinet where her brothers were sleeping.

"They are here?" She smiled so widely, her mood going from 0 to 100.

"Yes, my lo..." Hardly had Vicky completed her statement when Sophie jumped down from the bed and ran to treat the bassinet which was just a few steps away from the bedside.

She tiptoed trying to see until Oscar came to her aid by picking her up.

Almost immediately, Oscar thought he heard wrong when he felt someone sniffling against him. He stared at Sophie and saw her lips quivering.

"Sophie?"

"Look at them." A tear finally rolled down her cheek.

"They are so perfect."

One of the twins moved into his sleep.

"You see that. He recognizes Big Sissy's voice. You always sing to them, remember?" Oscar smiled, saying.

"They are so perfect. So so perfect. Too percent." She buried her face in her father's chest and started crying.

"It's okay, Sweetheart." Oscar smiled, rubbing her back, trying to calm her.

Amie was tall enough. She took a look at the twins and smiled.

Vee had a proud smile on her face as she watched her husband and her daughter.

Fedora approached Vicky and pulled her into a warm hug.
"Congratulations, Sis. We are so proud of you. Thank you for making this family smile again."

"Thank you for being here. And thank you for the gifts." Vee said after pulling away from the hug.

"Don't mention."

"Are you happy?" Oscar asked his daughter after wiping the tears off her face.

She nodded. "I've waited for so long to see them. I can't believe that they are here already. They are so tiny and so cute. I love them already."

"You wanna hold them?"

She nodded immediately, smiling.

Oscar took Sophie to the bed and made her sit by her mom.

He carefully carried the first baby and gave him to Sophie with Vicky assisting her but to her surprise, Sophie had a firm and good grip of him so she didn't need to do much.

Oscar brought out the second baby and handed him to his sister who was sitting on the left side of Vicky.

Oscar and Vicky's hearts swelled with so much pride when they saw Sophie staring at her brother with so much adoration in her eyes and smiles on her face.

Vee almost got teary when she saw Sophie lean closer and kiss him on the forehead.

"He came out first. Do you want to name him?"

She nodded eagerly. "Evan Alexander Wayde."

"Welcome to the world baby Evan." Oscar caressed the little boy's cheek with his fingers.

"He's so cute." Sophie grinned, not taking her eyes off him.

Vee chuckled at the amount of times she said that.

They played with Baby Evan for a while after which they switched with Fedora.

"My brothers are so beautiful!" Sophie said with so much pride as she held onto her second brother.

"Ryan sweetie. Big Sissy loves you so much." She said, kissing Ryan's forehead.

"Ryan looks so much like you, Sophie. What are his other names?" Amie asked.

"Thank you," Sophie smiled proudly. "His name is Ryan Nicholas Wayde."

"I have really beautiful cousins." Amie smiled proudly.

They were only able to admire watching the boys sleep for a while after which Oscar and Fedora put them back in their bassinet.

"Thank you, mommy." Sophie hugged Vicky.

"What for?" She smiled.

"For being a strong Mommy and for giving me Ryan and Evan. I promise to be a good big sister. I love you, mommy."

"I love you too." Vicky pulled her daughter into a hug after which she ran off to join her Dad and Amie in putting up the decorations that Fedora brought, adding colors to the room.

Fedora went ahead to serve Vicky some food.

"Thank you." She said the moment she dug in.

"No. You've done so much for us. We should be the ones thanking you."

"Don't forget to thank your brother too. He's a good man. I feel so blessed to have him."

"You both deserve each other and I'm glad you both are happy."

"I hope Sophie was good to you overnight. I'm glad she was with you. Everything happened so fast. I still can't believe my boys are here."

"She was amazing! And I'm definitely glad to have her over."

Once Vee was done eating, She made conversations with everyone in the room after which Fedora decided to take Amie and Sophie for some activities so that the parents of the newborn would have some rest. They said their goodbyes, promising to be back in the evening with more gifts for Ryan and Evan.

Oscar joined Vicky on the bed, sitting beside her. He leaned closer to her and kissed her forehead after which he intertwined his hands with hers. "You know how I've always said I want us to have 7 children?"

"Vee smiled. I literally just had two and you're thinking of how to get me pregnant again."

"Maybe not!"

"Why?"

"It was hard seeing you in so much pain."

"So you're scared for me?"

"You're my life, Vee. And I don't know if I can watch you go through so much pain again."

"So no more sex for me?"

"You know that is inevitable."

Victoria chuckled, giving Oscar's hand a light squeeze. "You're so cute when you are nervous."

"I understand you care about me. But these are one of the sacrifices mothers make and with a good support system like you and Sophie, I know I'll be fine."

"You've got nothing to worry about, Baby. We would definitely have more kids if we are destined to."

Oscar nodded. "You should get some rest before it's time to feed them again."

"What about you?"

"I'll rest for a bit after you've slept."

"I love you."

"I love you too, sweetheart." He placed a kiss on her lips.

Chapter 128

Oscar caressed Vicky's hair as he watched her fall asleep. Ryan and Evan were in their bassinet beside the bed. Oscar smiled at how beautiful his life was and he hoped that this was just the beginning of his happily ever after.
