Chapter 771 Peace

In order to maintain his reputation, Byron had been telling others that he was setting up a trap to catch Caspian.

But who would have thought—that Caspian would withdraw his troops midway and Diatoran even took the initiative to sue for peace?

Seizing this opportunity, Byron propagated it wildly and claimed that Caspian was scared off by his setup. Many citizens of Filren believed his words.

Now that Caspian has been dismissed, the fighting power of Diatoran would plummet.

Since they had the strength to deal with Diatoran, why not demand some benefits from them?

Many Filrenians agreed to go to war with Diatoran. They seemed to have forgotten Caspian's previous imposing power, or rather, they had all been deceived by Byron's rhetoric.

Only Byron and some high-ranking officials knew about the truth of this matter. They were not arrogant. Even though Caspian had been dismissed, they knew that defeating Diatoran would be a very difficult task.

Manny was well aware that what Byron said was complete nonsense.

"King Byron is indeed a strategist by using the lives of tens of thousands of soldiers to lure Caspian. But in the end, all of your soldiers died while Caspian roamed freely.

"Is this all part of your plan, Your Majesty?" Manny asked with a smile.

Manny was a renowned diplomat, and he had caught Byron's weakness. Once Byron admitted to what he said, he would be condemned by thousands!

“We are discussing compensation. Why do you bring up irrelevant topics? I’m asking you whether Diatoran is willing to cede territory. If not, I will order the troops to attack now! It will be too late for regrets by then!”

Byron had no intention of wasting time with Manny. He knew negotiations were definitely not Manny’s strong suit, so he chose to be unscrupulous.

“As far as I know, Caspian previously seized the capital of Filren. He withdrew his troops under King Balthazar’s orders, not because he was afraid of your setup. “King Balthazar believed that commanding war brings suffering to people, so he stopped the war. So why did you portray Caspian as a coward who chose to flee?

“If Filren dared to go to war, I believe King Balthazar would immediately call back Caspian to take command of the military. By then, the entire International Council would be in chaos. Do I need to say more about Filren’s fate?” Manny argued reasonably.

Byron had always been afraid to go to war because he feared Caspian would be reinstated. But he certainly wouldn’t admit this in front of everyone.

“Nonsense! If it weren’t for Caspian fleeing in panic, my army would have surrounded him long ago!

“Do you really think I’m afraid of Caspian? His title as the Diatoranian God of War is nothing but an empty title!” Byron said solemnly.

“Then, let’s not talk anymore! Hanley, let’s go!” Manny waved his hand and turned to leave.

Hanley Andrews was dumbfounded as he stood on the side. He was about to say something but was pulled away by Manny.

In this negotiation, Manny was the one who called the shots, so Hanley didn’t say much.

Hanley was Jerry's godson. Jerry instructed him not to let Filren wage war under any circumstances. But who knew that Manny would threaten Filren by declaring war?

If Byron declared war against Diatoran, the two of them might become villains in the eyes of Diatoranians.

Hanley was extremely uneasy. He didn't want to leave because he wanted to fight a bit more and explain.

Just as the two were leaving, they heard Byron saying, "Wait! Do you really want to plunge Diatoran into war?"

Hearing his words, Manny and Hanley felt

Carl's face flushed, and Kate also felt somewhat embarrassed. She tried to hand over the hen from Carl's hand, but she lost her grip, and the hen started running around on the ground.

It took Miranda and Cecilia a great deal of effort to catch it.

Caspian furrowed his brows, and Willow felt a bit embarrassed seeing this scene.

Both Kate and Sherry were elders. However, they were so different and couldn't be compared with each other.

Carl apologized. "Willow, Caspian, the Stewart family hasn't had deals for a long time, and with so many mouths to feed, we're really struggling."

"Dad, I've saved up some money myself. Use it for now. I haven't been working for a long time either," Willow said.

"What? I'm not here to ask you for money. Since the Stewart family is in trouble now, I tried to find work elsewhere, but Mom thought I was disgracing the family and made me resign." Carl quickly shook his head.

“Dad, Southlake Corporation isn’t rebuilt yet. I can’t help you either. Caspian has lost his position, too. All we can do is wait and see if the government will provide compensation,” Willow said in a low voice.

Upon hearing Willow’s words, Kate stepped forward and said sarcastically, “When Caspian was the Diatoranian God of War, he didn’t help the Stewart family much, right?”

“Now that you’re the Massey family’s daughter-in-law, Mr. Massey surely can help us even if Caspian can’t.”

“The main issue is that many industries in Southlake Corporation are struggling. Unless the reconstruction is complete, it’ll be difficult to restore the business,” Willow said helplessly.

Southlake Corporation had become a ruin, and all its employees had become unemployed.

Fortunately, the profits from its subsidiaries supported them, or they wouldn’t be able to survive.

“Mr. Massey holds a high position. There will surely be many projects in the reconstruction of Southlake City.

“As long as he speaks a word for us, the Stewart family will surely make a lot of profit when we take over the project. If not, we’ll give him some dividends. After all, we both share the same surname!”

Kate was entirely fixated on making money that she didn’t realize someone like Logan wouldn’t care about a small dividend.

“Mom, the reconstruction of Southlake City has nothing to do with Mr. Massey,” Willow said, somewhat displeased.

She could sense that Caspian was getting irritated, and it would be troublesome if he lost his temper.

“With Mr. Massey’s status, as long as he says the word, who would dare to refuse him? Your grandma has already said that as long as we take over the project, we can give Mr. Massey 20% of the profits!”

“If there’s nothing else, you can leave now,” Caspian urged them to leave as he was getting impatient.

Kate, indeed, was only interested in money.

She was somewhat jealous that Caspian could be so lucky to be the heir of the Massey family.

“I haven’t seen Sherry for a long time. I need to have a good chat with her,” Kate shamelessly said and shook Sherry’s hand.

Sherry didn’t know what to say as there wasn’t much to talk about between her and Kate.

The two of them could only sit on the couch and watch TV. Unexpectedly, the TV was airing news related to Caspian.

“The once-

e-mighty Lord Caspian has done such a treacherous thing. It’s truly heart-wrenching!” a male host said angrily.

Caspian was extremely annoyed to hear Kate chattering away.

“Caspian, you treacherous scoundrel, do you want to kill me too?”

Sherry and the others hurriedly stepped forward to intervene.

However, a cold light flashed in Caspian’s hand, and Kate fell onto the ground in fear.

Then, she panickedly felt herself all over and breathed a sigh of relief when she realized she wasn't hurt.

However, the two hens weren't so fortunate as they died in Caspian's hands.

Cecilia tossed the herbal tea into Kate's arms and said coldly, "Take your lousy tea and get lost!"

"Caspian, who do you think you are? From now on, Diatoran will never employ you again. You're done for good! And you're also a treacherous person!" Kate cursed as she walked away.

"Mom! How dare you say such things about Caspian! He didn't want this to happen either!" Willow snapped.

As Caspian's wife, she naturally had to speak up for him.

"Willow, thank God we're not related. Otherwise, I would definitely make you divorce Caspian. I think you should leave him quickly since your days with him will only get tougher," Kate retorted.

"Kate, shut up!" Carl couldn't help but yell.

"You useless thing! You didn't even dare to make a sound when I was being bullied by others. Now, you dare to help them. How did I end up with such a useless man?" Kate was exploding at anyone she could.

"If you dare to speak nonsense again, I'll make you mute!" Caspian said fiercely, raising the dagger in his hand.

Seeing Caspian's fierce face, Kate was so scared that she didn't dare to stay for a moment longer and grabbed the hens before running away.

Carl shook his head helplessly, apologized to Caspian, and left the villa.

Meanwhile, Darren was training while sitting in Skyarch Palace. He looked as if he were in a state of meditation, with the Black Moon placed beside him.

Since becoming the head of Raging Blade, Darren had never encountered an opponent whom he couldn't fight. He thought that he could dominate Diatoran with his almost supreme—grandmaster—level strength. However, he was defeated by Caspian.

He was heavily injured. It took him several days to recover a little.

Although his wounds had healed, the scars in Darren's heart could never be healed. His arrogance had been trampled by Caspian. Whenever he had free time, he would think of how Caspian had beaten him.

He was somewhat in denial and kept reflecting on why he had lost to Caspian.

Now, he could only pin hopes on the Black Moon Technique. His strength would reach a new level as long as he could obtain the Black Moon Technique Scroll.

Perhaps he could even level up from innate grandmaster to supreme grandmaster.

At this moment, a voice came from outside, "Mr. Everett, Theo says he has something important to discuss with you."

"I'm busy now. Tell him to come back another day," Darren said impatiently.

"Mr. Everett, he insists on seeing you no matter what. He said he has something you've been dreaming of."

Darren was already full of rage, but his mentee dared to play games. Now, he was even more furious.

"Let him in!" He touched the Black Moon blade beside him.

Then, a man in white robes appeared. Theo Russell pushed open the door and nodded, saying, "Mr. Everett, I'm here to meet you!"

Theo was the one who had stolen the scroll.

In fact, he was a mentee of Raging Blade.

Nobody—including

Austin was deeply loyal to Darren. Although he was somewhat puzzled as to why Darren suddenly appointed Theo as the vice-head, he dared not to ask further and could only comply.

“Please rest assured, Mr. Everett. I will definitely assist Mr. Russell,” Austin said respectfully.

“For the next ten days or so, I will be meditating in seclusion. You and Theo will manage the affairs of Raging Blade. If there are any major issues, we’ll discuss them after I come out of seclusion.”

The bombing in Southlake City previously had caused heavy losses to many industries. Many foreign companies also withdrew their factories there.

Now, Southlake City was no longer as prosperous as before.

Jerry was very worried that a military coup might happen in Southlake City. Who knew what terrible things might occur if Caspian took advantage of the situation and incited the masses?

To minimize the risk, Jerry had to order the allocation of some public funds to rebuild Southlake City.

Moreover, these reconstruction projects had to have no relation to Caspian at all. Miranda had been rendering bids in the name of Southlake Corporation. However, the supervisors of those projects didn’t take her seriously at all. They even insulted her by saying, “Isn’t the CEO of Southlake Corporation Caspian’s wife? A scum like him must have a scum wife, too!”

Miranda wanted to argue, but before she could speak, she was kicked out. Such incidents also happened to other Southlake Corporation employees.

They were temporarily out of work and planned to go elsewhere to make a living. But when others learned they had worked for Southlake Corporation, their applications were ignored.

Upon learning of such incidents, Willow felt very guilty.

When Southlake Corporation was still around, these employees took pride in working for the company.

But now, after the destruction of the company and Caspian's framing, Southlake Corporation had become a bad name.

When Zoey heard Willow's words, she said confidently, "Willow, don't worry. I can guarantee your family won't have to worry about food and clothing!"

Hearing this, Willow was stunned for a moment and asked, "As a novelist, how much money can you make?"

"What do you mean? Are you looking down on me? I've saved quite a bit over the years!" Zoey said proudly.

"Are you joking? Or do you have a sugar daddy? So, you have a lot of spare money?" Willow asked somewhat doubtfully.

"I earn this much in a month now." Zoey held up a finger.

"Ten thousand dollars? You'd better keep it for yourself." Willow smiled.

"Who are you looking down at? Add two more zeros to it!" Zoey said arrogantly.

Upon hearing this, Willow was extremely surprised that Zoey was earning millions of dollars in a month.

It was really unbelievable that she could earn so much by just typing in front of a computer.

"Willow, I only need a bit for my living expenses. You can take the rest for emergency relief!

"Your employees also need to be taken care of. Besides, I've been staying at your house this entire time. I feel bad if I don't help you," Zoey said.

“Zoey, you’re so kind! You’re such a great friend. I love you so much!” Willow said and leaned toward Zoey.

“Ugh! Go away!”

With Zoey’s support and coupled with the money Willow had saved, she immediately called Miranda.

Miranda had been running around these days and hadn’t been at the villa. “Willow, what’s the matter?” Miranda asked as she answered the phone.

“Honey, I thought it was a big deal! Just tell me how much money you need,” Caspian said casually,

Willow felt that he was just trying to comfort her.

She knew that as the Diatoranian God of War, Caspian had been commanding troops in battle and probably didn’t have much spare money.

Besides, he never had much care for money as he wasn’t the type to exploit his subordinates.

“Hubby, I can handle this matter. Don’t worry,” Willow said confidently.

Caspian was already troubled now, and she didn’t want to worry him more with her affairs.

She felt that a God of War like him shouldn’t waste time on such trivial matters

“This is just a simple matter. With just a phone call, I can have my old friend send over some money to settle the Southlake Corporation’s employees. It’s no big deal,” Caspian said casually.

“No! We have to get through this ourselves,” Willow said with some guilt.

Although it wasn't her fault that Southlake Corporation was in this state, she didn't want to see her employees go without income.

"This amount of money means nothing to him." Caspian then walked into the bedroom and prepared to make a phone call.

Willow was already used to situations like this.

After entering the bedroom, Caspian called Miranda.

She had never told Willow about the big shot behind Southlake Corporation.

"Once you're back, I'll give you a card. You can use it to settle the employees. Take as much money as you need," Caspian said.

"Mr. Lynch, could you please specify the amount? Otherwise, I won't know..." Miranda said, somewhat flustered.

To be honest, she was quite curious about how much money was in his card.

She wondered if he had a lot of extra money. Besides, he wasn't even the God of War anymore.

"Calculate the total salaries of all employees per month, then withdraw enough for five months first!" Caspian said casually.

Upon hearing this, Miranda was startled. This was not a small amount of money, but it seemed insignificant to Caspian.

Miranda had never imagined that Caspian had a Golden Dragon card with no credit limit.

"After you've withdrawn the money, return the card. Don't check the balance, and don't let others know about this. Just pretend nothing happened when you return to the villa," Caspian instructed.

He was worried that Miranda would faint when she saw the balance.

The father and son of the Andrews family were extremely excited when they knew that Darren had obtained the Black Moon Technique Scroll.

So, they made preparations to treat the people from Skyarch Palace well.

The Andrews family wouldn't have their current status if it weren't for these martial artists.

In the Andrews family hall, Kelvin and Zane were toasting and drinking with Darren. Darren was extremely proud as if he had mastered the Black Moon Technique.

Everyone believed that as long as he continued to improve, dealing with Caspian would definitely not be a problem.

With the Black Moon and the Black Moon Technique Scroll in hands, it was only a matter of time for Darren to improve his strength.

Inside Skyarch Palace, some were happy, and some were worried.

Jethro, who was sitting on the side, was not so happy.

He had just learned that all his mentees had died in Lunar Lake, and he was wrought in sorrow.

Although the various organizations in Skyarch Palace looked harmonious on the surface, everyone was, secretly competing with each other.

Whoever could take the main stage would receive the Andrews family's favor.

At Riverside Villa, Miranda, who was having dinner, received a call that said a mysterious person had transferred ten billion dollars to the company.

Willow was ecstatic and kissed Caspian as she couldn't contain her excitement.

This made Caspian feel somewhat uncomfortable, especially since the elders were present.

Sherry had been eating, but her heart was blooming with joy.

“Hey, we’re having dinner! Can you stop being so lovey–dovey? If you don’t stop, I’ll lodge a complaint against you!” Zoey complained.

Of course, she was just teasing Willow. Seeing how well the couple’s relationship was, she was genuinely happy for Willow.

Willow had gotten a bit excited earlier and hadn’t noticed that her behavior was a bit over the top.

She was embarrassed after being called out by Zoey.

“With ten billion, all the employees will be secure.” Willow couldn’t contain her excitement.

All of this was arranged by Caspian, so he actually felt nothing. But to go along with Willow, he pretended to be surprised.

“Willow, since you have the funds now, can you return my bank card?” Zoey reached out her hand.

“Why are you so impatient? If you get the money now, you’ll just spend it. Let me keep it for you first. When you get married, I’ll give it back as a gift!” Willow glanced at her.

Zoey suddenly felt like she was being deceived.

“So, as long as I don’t get married, I won’t get my money back?” Zoey crossed her arms.

“I just want you to find someone soon. Otherwise, you’ll always be around me. When will you ever get married like that!” Willow pretended to be disdainful.

“Then give me the card. I’ll rent a place to live now,” Zoey said with determination.

“No way. I’m worried you’ll be swindled by others. If you can’t find a husband, I’ll take care of you.”

Hearing this, Zoey pouted as she couldn’t beat Willow in this verbal showdown.

Sherry was laughing uncontrollably on the side.

At that moment, Caspian’s phone suddenly rang. It was a call from Laina.

Immediately, he stood up and walked into the bedroom, where he answered the phone.

“Lord Caspian, I’ve investigated the matter and found out that King Balthazar has been cursed by the leader of the Three Poisons Hall!” Laina’s deep voice came from the other end of the call.

“What? Cursed? Is there such witchcraft?” Caspian was surprised.

It was the first time he had heard that such witchcraft existed.

“At first, I was surprised too, but Jethro said it himself. Last night, he attended the Andrews family’s banquet and blurted it out after getting drunk.”

“Could this be a trap?”

Caspian felt something was amiss seeing as his subordinate had managed to infiltrate Skyarch Palace so quickly. The people inside were all very smart. They should be on guard.

“I don’t think so. The Three Poisons Hall has just suffered heavy losses, and Jethro is in a low mood. Now even the Andrews family doesn’t favor him. He’s just drowning his sorrows in alcohol.

“Jethro is originally from Rochdale. I’ve sent someone to investigate there, and indeed, there’s witchcraft being practiced there!”

After hearing Laina’s words, Caspian was shocked. It turned out Jerry had used such despicable means to deal with Balthazar.

No wonder Balthazar had been acting strangely lately. It turned out that he was under a spell.

Caspian had always thought highly of Balthazar and knew that he wasn't a person who feared war.

Plus, Caspian had conquered the capital of Filren and was

"I understand. I'll go right away. We've intercepted confidential information from Filren. It seems like they're planning something secretive!" Laina replied. "What's Filren doing this time?" Caspian asked.

"Filren has dispatched ten Venomous Wolves to assassinate you. They might be lurking in Southlake City now!" she reported.

"I see." Caspian wasn't afraid of them.

"Lord Caspian, the enemies are lurking in the dark. You mustn't let your guard down," Laina advised.

She knew Caspian was powerful and not afraid of assassination attempts.

"Don't worry. I've faced assassination over a hundred assassination attempts. No one has ever harmed me!"

After that, Caspian hung up the phone again and called Macy and Sylvia. He asked them to come to Riverside Villa.

They had to secretly come to the villa because there were surely Jerry's spies around.

After receiving Caspian's instructions, Sylvia and Macy were eager to act. They had been bored recently.

At Balthazar's mansion, Jethro was somewhat excited as he looked at Jerry, but Jerry had a gloomy expression.

His negotiations with Filren were failing, and Filren even threatened to send troops and destroy Diatoran!

The people of Diatoran wanted to fight back instead of seeking peace with Filren. “Mr. Andrews, rest assured that my subordinates are all powerful martial artists. This mission will definitely succeed!” Jethro said confidently.

“Filren is really asking for it. If you can teach them a lesson, that’ll be good. But if you fail, it’ll only make them more arrogant!” Jerry was still worried.

“Mr. Andrews, I’m confident in completing the mission!”

But as soon as Jethro finished speaking, he remembered his failure at Lunar Lake and suddenly felt embarrassed.

Because of the previous incident, his position in Skyarch Palace plummeted. Now, he clearly felt that Jerry and his sons were beginning to neglect him.

Thus, Jethro planned to take mentees from the Three Poisons Hall to sneak attack Filren.

Jerry needed some achievements to prove himself.

Although he had removed Caspian’s position, there was no one to replace Caspian.

Filren knew Caspian wasn’t in control anymore and began to act recklessly.

“You can go and launch a surprise attack on Filren, but you must do it in your own name. If you fail, you must kill yourself as redemption!” Jerry said with a nonchalant expression.

Jethro’s expression changed slightly as he didn’t doubt Jerry’s words at all.

“Mr. Andrews, rest assured. We’ll definitely enter Filren’s capital and capture Byron!”

Tears poured down Willow’s face as she looked at the thank-you letters from the employees of Southlake Corporation.

These employees expressed their gratitude by stating that they would follow Willow to wherever she was.

Once the reconstruction of the company was completed, they would return to work immediately.

Willow also wanted to rebuild the company, but there were many things that needed to be solved.

Some employees had spontaneously begun recruiting construction teams, starting a reconstruction plan.

“Willow, this is the contract. As long as you sign it, we’ll start rebuilding Southlake Corporation immediately,” Miranda took out the pen and said.

“We can rebuild the company, but we can’t let these employees pay for it. They need money for themselves as well!” Willow shook her head.

“Willow, this is everyone’s good intention. Just sign it,” Caspian persuaded her from the side.

Jason knew that Caspian was very strong, so the people he sent this time were all top-notch experts from Venomous Wolves.

These men were rare to find in the military.

Their sniper skills were beyond reproach.

But snipers could only operate from a secluded place. Once their positions were exposed, they would be in danger.

The snipers of Venomous Wolves were all rigorously trained.

And Kai Mendes was one of the best among these snipers. He had once lurked behind enemy lines for nearly ten days and successfully assassinated an enemy general.

Originally, Kai was going to retire. But when he learned that they were dealing with Caspian, he immediately joined the fight.

Kai had no interest in fighting with ordinary people, but he was somewhat eager to fight with Caspian.

After knowing Caspian's hiding place, he immediately ordered others to move the sniper points and then began to snipe.

But Kai made no move. If Caspian couldn't even evade his subordinates' assassinations, then Caspian wasn't worthy for him to take action.

Kai hid near the green belt dressed in camouflage, with some dark green streaks painted on his face..

If one didn't look closely, one wouldn't be able to see Kai there.

This was his professionalism as a sniper.

However, he suddenly heard some footsteps nearby.

Even so, Kai remained calm. He was hiding in the green belt, and as long as he didn't move, no one could detect him.

"It should be nearby! Search carefully!" a voice came.

Kai took a look and saw two women with amazing figures in leather jackets searching everywhere.

“Let’s call the captain and ask!” a member of Task Force Rose said as she took out her phone.

At this time, Kai, who was in the green belt behind them, happened to witness this scene.

“Captain, have you found the target?” the woman said, deliberately lowering her voice.

“I’ve taken out several snipers. I’m going to continue the search now. Have you found the target?” Laina asked.

“No, we haven’t. From the trajectory of the bullet just now, the enemy should be here!” the woman said as she looked around.

“Continue the search. I’m coming over now,” Laina said.

The once glorious Southlake Corporation had been reduced to ruins.

But many workers were already gathered at the site.

Logically speaking, Diatoran’s authorities should handle the compensation for the destruction of Southlake Corporation.

But after such a long time, the authorities had not made any move.

What was worse was that other companies refused to accept the former employees of Southlake Corporation.

The employees could only unite and rebuild the company together.

At the King’s residence, Jerry was reading a document handed to him by Manny. It was about the latest peace negotiation plan.

At this moment, a guard rushed in, looking somewhat flustered.

“Mr. Andrews, we’ve received news that thousands of people suddenly gathered in Southlake City!”

Upon hearing this, Jerry stood up from his chair and asked, “What’s their purpose?”

Caspian had been staying in Southlake Corporation, and Jerry was afraid that he would make a comeback. If Caspian instigated the masses and then formed a civilian force, the situation would be bad.

“We don’t know their intentions yet, but they seem to be ordinary folks,” the guard replied.

“Mr. Andrews, the employees of Southlake Corporation are doing this voluntarily. It has nothing to do with anyone else,” the guard said.

Upon hearing this, Jerry was dumbfounded as he wondered if these employees were out of their minds.

“Willow paid them their salaries while they were going through their most difficult times. So, they’re doing this to show their gratitude,” the guard added.

“Southlake Corporation has already been destroyed, and Willow doesn’t have that much money. Could it be that Caspian has been accepting bribes? Investigate immediately whether Caspian committed any crimes. If he has engaged in illegal activities, punish him immediately!”

At the mention of this, Jerry became a little excited.

He had been worrying about how to deal with Caspian, and this seemed like a good opportunity.

If Caspian had indeed embezzled, as long as the amount was large enough, he could definitely be sentenced to death!

Compared to assassinating Caspian, Jerry preferred this method.

If he could ruin Caspian's reputation for eternity, Jerry would be the happiest person alive.

On top of a building, a sniper was staring at the alley where the Rolls-Royce had entered. However, after waiting for a long time, he still didn't see any movement.

He switched to another angle and could see the back of Caspian's car, but he couldn't take the shot.

Then, he switched his position again, only to find that the car was already empty.

The sniper began to panic. Had Caspian and the others already escaped?

He prepared to go down and see what was going on. After packing up his equipment, he left the building and approached the Rolls-Royce.

Just as he was a few feet away from the vehicle, something dark suddenly flew out from the car.

The sniper was startled. When he regained his senses, he found that Caspian had

With a flash of a cold light, the sniper's throat was slit.

Caspian went to check the identity of the sniper and found that his rifle was made in Filren. He had a wolf head badge on his chest. It seemed that he was indeed from the Venomous Wolves.

At this time, Macy called.

“Lord Caspian, why did you only inform Sylvia that you’re in danger and not me?” she said somewhat indignantly.

“Why would I call you? By the time you arrive, it’ll be too late,” Caspian said with a smile.

“Who said I wouldn’t make it in time! I would definitely have arrived first if you had called me!” Macy said with undeniable determination.

“What’s going on?” he asked puzzledly.

“I was already on my way to the villa. If you had called me, I would’ve definitely arrived before Sylvia. Besides, I care about you more than Sylvia does!” she replied somewhat aggrievedly.

Caspian glanced at Willow and Zoey and knew that he couldn’t continue the conversation.

He knew about Macy’s intentions, but he already had a wife. It wouldn’t be good if others misunderstood him.

“Since you’re nearby, coordinate with Laina’s plans. Deal with those assassins first,” Caspian said.

“I’ve already started. I just caught an informant, but the leader of the enemy hasn’t been located yet,” Macy answered.

“Be careful. Their leader is definitely not simple,” he reminded.

“Hmph! You should worry about your wife!” After saying that, Macy hung up the phone.

Caspian was dumbfounded. It seemed like Macy was jealous...

Laina also arrived near the green belt. She had been checking the surroundings but hadn’t

Seeing this scene, Macy's and Laina's faces turned pale.

They were filled with guilt now. If anything happened to Caspian, they had to bear the responsibility.

After firing several shots, Kai immediately switched his position and hid in the nearby bushes.

Bullets whizzed past him.

"Captain! Lord Caspian is safe. He left before the car exploded," a member of Task Force Rose shouted.

Upon hearing this, Macy and Laina finally relaxed.

But Kai was upset. After waiting for so long, he still hadn't succeeded in the assassination!

Everything that happened just now was arranged in advance by Caspian.

As he drove the car, he opened the car door in advance. When he heard the gunshot, he immediately jumped out of the car.

When the Rolls-Royce exploded, Zoey and Willow were watching from the side.

At the moment of the explosion, flames soared into the sky with a great visual impact.

Willow's heart broke at the sight. The Rolls-Royce Phantom was not cheap, but now it was destroyed.

Of course, compared to Caspian's life, such material possessions were insignificant.

At the thought of this, Willow felt much better.

When Caspian became the Diatoranian God of War again one day, she could own more than a luxury car—a fighter jet even!

At the ruins of Southlake Corporation, hundreds of employees were ready. Miranda stood there, looking somewhat anxious.

These employees were waiting for Willow. However, it was almost two o'clock, and Willow hadn't arrived yet.

Miranda didn't want to wait any longer and was about to order them to release the party poppers.

Just then, a roar came.

Miranda followed the sound and saw Caspian riding a motorcycle, rushing toward them.

Then, he made an emergency brake, stopping perfectly in front of everyone.

Right at that moment, the firecrackers were lit.

The employees of Southlake Corporation began to act. They were going to rebuild the company.

Jett and 300 mentees of Life Force were lurking in nearby buildings.

Originally, he was very afraid. But when he learned that the people gathered here were all office workers, he gained much more confidence.

However, Jett didn't act immediately. He waited for the right moment in the shadows.

The moment the party poppers sounded, he immediately ordered, "Go! Spare no one!"

The mentees of Life Force rushed out immediately. They would be scared if they were facing martial artists, but facing a group of unarmed people, they naturally had no fear.

The security guards and employees of Southlake Corporation were all stunned to see a group of fierce-looking individuals rushing out.

The security guards hadn't noticed that these people were martial artists and thought they were just hooligans.

Hence, without hesitation, they rushed out directly too.

Caspian initially thought they were enemies of Southlake Corporation who had come to cause trouble.

So, he didn't act immediately. The enemy seemed to have only two to three hundred people, which wasn't enough to intimidate him.

But as these people approached, Caspian sensed something unusual about them. Their vibes were extraordinary! They were all martial artists!

Caspian speculated that these people must be from Skyarch Palace.

He was prepared to teach these people a lesson and make them retreat.

The next moment, Caspian picked up his Diatanium dagger and charged toward the lead mentee of Life Force.

Blood splattered in the air. Before the lead mentee could even react, he had already died.

The other mentees were all dumbfounded when they saw this scene.

The employees of Southlake Corporation were also stunned to see this.

Everything happened so quickly that they couldn't see how Caspian made his move. The next thing they knew, the mentee had died.
