

Chapter 112 Revenge On The Spot

Mrs. Reyes's expression shifted as she pulled Ted closer. "Mr. Ward, he's just a child. He doesn't understand. Please let him go!"

Caden's face revealed nothing. "Did I say anything harsh? Why are you so afraid?"

Mrs. Reyes felt a slight tremor run through her.

Though she didn't know Caden well, their brief interactions today had shown her his decisive and ruthless nature.

When he discovered something had happened to Alicia, he had thrown Ted to the ground without hesitation.

If things had gone even slightly wrong, Ted could have easily suffered a serious injury.

Caden displayed no mercy toward the children, and his earlier command for them to fight felt like a vendetta against them.

He did mention that there would be a reward.

Mrs. Reyes sensed that what was coming was definitely not good.

Caden wasted no time. He looked at Alicia and said, "For the next half hour, Ted is yours. Do with him as you please."

Understanding the implication behind his words, a surge of exhilaration flooded Alicia, momentarily overshadowing the pain from her injuries.

Caden had opened the door for her.

She wasn't going to let this brat escape unscathed.

Thereafter, she called over two servants to assist her.

Seeing her pleas had no effect, Mrs. Reyes's demeanor shifted. "What right do you have to treat Ted this way? He made a mistake that any child could make. He doesn't know any better, and neither do you. Hurting children is against the law!"

Caden leaned back, appearing unfazed.

Alicia couldn't help but feel amused. "Isn't it illegal for him to attempt murder? He may be a minor, but that doesn't change the fact that he tried to kill me. If we take legal action, both you and your husband will face the consequences."

Alicia continued, "Do you really want to escalate this? We can involve the police. I'll work with them and share the whole story with the media. Everyone will know how Ted hurt me. I'm sure Mr. Reyes will appreciate you raising such a tough son, and the entire Reyes family will take pride in you."

Mrs. Reyes's legs trembled, and she nearly collapsed onto the ground.

She didn't want anything bad to happen to Ted, but she also feared the repercussions of making a scene.

If the Reyes family were to find out about this, her life would be ruined.

In a shaky voice, she said, "Ms. Bennett, I'm so sorry. This is all my fault. I disliked you, so I told Ted to make things difficult for you. He didn't mean to hurt you this badly!"

Alicia remained unaffected.

She had just faced the terrifying brush with death, and nearly lost her life.

Did Mrs. Reyes truly believe that a simple apology could erase everything?

"Rest assured, Mrs. Reyes," Alicia said firmly. "Once Ted steps into society, you'll find yourself kneeling frequently."

It dawned on Mrs. Reyes that she was indeed kneeling.

She tried to rise, but her legs felt so weak that she sank back down.

Alicia instructed the servants to bring a basin of water.

They set the basin on the table, which was at Alicia's waist height.

Lacking the strength to grab Ted herself, she asked two servants for assistance.

Sensing the impending danger, Ted began to squirm and resist.

The servants held Ted firmly.

Mrs. Reyes said sternly, "If you dare touch Ted, you'll regret it!"

Fear spread among the servants, causing them to loosen their grip.

Alicia quickly realized she shouldn't involve them further and turned her attention to Caden. "Can you grab Ted for me?"

Caden replied with a chill in his tone, "I'm busy."

"You have the power right now. The Reyes family won't touch you if you act," Alicia argued. "If the servants touch him, they risk losing their jobs."

Caden countered, "So you want me to be the bad guy while you play the hero?"

Alicia's eyes sparkled with mischief. "Remember when I promised to cook for you last time? I'll make it worth your while. Deal?"

Only then did he rise from his seat.

He grabbed the back of Ted's neck and forcefully pushed Ted's face into the basin of water.

Alicia felt a flicker of surprise.

How did he know what she was planning?

With his face submerged in the water, Ted thrashed helplessly, but he couldn't overcome Caden's strength and had no choice but to endure the "reward."

Mrs. Reyes screamed in terror before collapsing.

Caden kept track of the time.

Every ten seconds, he lifted Ted's head from the water.

After repeating this process about ten times, Ted lay limp, and Caden finally released him.

Ted gasped for air, choking on the water, and cried out on the ground.

He called for his mom, cursing every now and then.

Caden dusted his hands off.

He regarded Ted with open disdain.

He turned to a nearby servant and ordered, "Call the head of the Reyes family and tell him to come pick them up."

Alicia remained seated, slowly lifting her head.

After sitting for so long, her wound throbbed, and her mind began to cloud.

But for some reason, she felt an overwhelming sense of happiness.

She had achieved her revenge right then and there.

Caden stood illuminated by the light, and his cold expression suddenly appeared less intimidating.

Alicia smiled. She was eager to say something, but her eyelids grew heavy, and her vision faded.

Finally, she slipped into unconsciousness.
