

THE DIVORCE PRESCRIPTION

Chapter 502

Celine suddenly laughed. As she laughed, her eyes reddened in an instant. Then, she began to cry.

"Celine, why are you crying? You're pregnant now, and crying isn't good for you," Mary said, quickly pulling out a tissue to wipe her tears.

Celine found it ridiculous. She finally learned the truth today, and everything made sense.

Carly had been impersonating her all along!

All this time, Carly had stolen her identity, pretending to be the one who saved Adam's life. And Adam had always believed that the person who rescued him was Carly.

Celine reached up and touched her neck but realized the emerald necklace was gone. That necklace was the one Adam had given her all those years ago in the cave. She hadn't been wearing it, and she remembered leaving it in her apartment.

"Celine, what's wrong? You're scaring me."

The shock was overwhelming, but Celine quickly pulled herself together.

"Grandma, Hailey, I'm fine. Carly is a liar!"

Hailey looked at her and asked, "Celine, what do you mean?"

Celine said, "The person who saved Mr. Alvarez in the forest wasn't Carly. It was me!"

Hailey jumped up in outrage. "Celine, are you saying Carly stole your identity? Oh my god, she's so shameless!"

Mary slapped her thigh in frustration as she remarked, "I knew it! There's no way Carly would've saved Adam. Someone as selfish as her would've been the first to run if things got dangerous! Adam has been so blind. He has spent all these years believing the wrong person!"

Hailey said, "Celine, let's go expose that fraud right now!"

Celine nodded. "I have an emerald necklace. Mr. Alvarez gave it to me back then after what happened. It'll prove who I really am. I left it in my apartment. Once he sees it, he'll understand everything."

Hailey replied, "Celine, you should get some rest first. Once you're feeling better, we'll go get it."

Celine shook her head. She never expected Carly to have been impersonating her all this time. Now that she knew the truth, she couldn't wait to expose Carly as soon as possible.

"I'm fine. I'm a doctor, so I know my own condition. The baby is perfectly healthy, so don't worry. I need to go back right now."

Mary said, "Sure. I'll have the driver bring the car around. The sooner we put Carly in her place, the better."

Half an hour later, Celine returned to Jupiter Heights to retrieve her emerald necklace. After searching for a while, she realized the necklace was gone.

Hailey said, "Celine, think carefully. Do you remember where you put it?"

Celine said with confidence, "I'm sure that I left it right here, and I never misplace things. I remember exactly where it was, so how could it have just disappeared?"

She searched again, but no matter how thoroughly she looked, the necklace was nowhere to be found. The emerald necklace was crucial evidence. How could it vanish into thin air?

Mary's expression darkened with suspicion. "Celine, could someone have taken it?"

Celine froze. She suddenly remembered that Carly had broken into her apartment just a few days ago. At the time, Carly had been standing right there, just steps away from where the necklace had been.

Since Carly had been impersonating her, she must have known about the necklace. Could it be Carly who had taken her necklace?

Celine was furious. Not only had Carly stolen her identity, but she had also stolen the necklace.

Her audacity was unbelievable. She was so shameless that nothing could stop her.

Hailey asked, "Do you remember where it is, Celine?"

Celine stood up, letting out a cold laugh. "We don't have to find it anymore. Carly already took it."
