

Medical Genius's Unspeakable Marriage Chapter 307

Sasha did not even get to relax for one full minute before she was so enraged by her parents' statement again, and her face reddened at once.

"Dad, Mom, can the two of you please stop meddling with the business of the company? I'm sick of trying to persuade you two. Let me repeat this one last time—I will give Matthew my full support and I won't divorce him! I'm begging you guys to go home and keep yourselves out of the affairs of the company, please?"

James snapped back furiously, "Do you think we want to do that? We are just worried that you might be misled into bringing trouble upon yourself! You are our daughter.

Do you think we would harm you? We've been through a lot and we've witnessed so much of the ugly side of this world. It's okay to make minor mistakes in life, but we can't allow you to make a grave mistake like this because it might affect your whole life adversely!"

Sasha disputed anxiously, "How do you know that Matthew's investment is a mistake? What if he's making the right decision?"

Helen straightaway waved her hands dismissively and concluded, "That's impossible! He's going to compete with Dr. Ellis and Leonard the Acupuncturist, but does he know a thing about medicine?"

Even with Stanley's help, Mr. Harrison who works for him is only a mediocre doctor and he isn't even qualified to compete with Dr. Ellis, let alone Leonard! Sasha, please wake up and realize the silly mistake you're making!"

Demi scoffed as well, “Sasha, I’m going to put it this way—I’ll admit that my judgment is faulty if Matthew wins at the medical conference, and I’ll dig out my eyeballs for him too. How about that?”

Sasha was so livid that her whole body was trembling. “I don’t want to listen to anymore nonsense from you guys! I call the shots around here and I get to decide what the company invests in! I don’t need advice from all of you!”

In her exasperation, Helen seethed, “Sasha, you’re really trying so hard to drive me mad, aren’t you? Fine, I’ll die in front of you right now! I’m going to kill myself!”

Wailing at the top of her lungs, Helen lunged toward one of the windows and lifted one of her legs as she got ready to jump off the building.

Sasha, who was frightened by her mother’s action, let out a squeal before running over to hold her back. “Mom, Mom, what are you doing? Get down from there now! P-Please don’t do this...”

Helen tried her best to break away from her. “Since you want me to die, I’ll jump off from here to kill myself! It took me so much effort to raise you girls up and all I want is to see the two of you having a safe and happy life. However, you are so insistent on ruining your own life and yourself.

I can’t consider myself a competent mother anymore because I couldn’t bring you back onto the right track. Therefore, I think it’s better for me to end my own life now so that my heart won’t hurt when I see you suffer in the future...”

Demi, who was trying to yank Helen away from the window on the other side, growled angrily, “Sasha Cunningham, are you an animal?”

This is your mother who gave birth to you and raised you! Can’t you listen to her advice for this one time? Do you really have to destroy our family?”

Tears streamed down Sasha's face because there was nothing she could do about her mother who only dealt with things by making a scene.

At that juncture, Matthew sighed and gave in. "Sasha, forget it. You don't have to give me the 200 million from the company. It's enough that I know you have the intention to do it."

With tears still trickling down her cheek, Sasha let out a sigh forlornly and muttered, "Fine, Mom, I'm not going to make the investment. Are you happy now?"

Helen refused to yield to her and insisted, "Of course not! You have to divorce him too! Otherwise, he will get us implicated once he loses all the money! After you divorce him, we won't have anything to do with the debt!"

Sasha stormed, "Mom, c-can you be more reasonable? This is an investment and all investments come with risks. Even if Matthew loses at the medical conference, those investors can't do anything to us because they made the investment with their own free will.

Are you trying to force me to kill myself by asking so much from me after I've already agreed to cancel the investment?"

Just as Helen was trying to comment further, she was stopped by James who declared, "That's enough! Since Sasha has decided to withdraw the investment, it shows that she still cares about us.

Helen, you shouldn't be angry with her anymore. In fact, we can make sure we are safe just by getting Matthew to make a pledge that the plan won't have anything to do with us."

James was not that dumb to forget that the main purpose of their visit was to compel Sasha into withdrawing the investment.

Since she had decided to cancel the investment, it was about time they put a stop to the scene because it wouldn't do them any good by letting it escalate.

At the same time, he was brewing his own scheme in his mind.

Sasha would wake up to the reality if Matthew failed in his investment.

Having caused so many investors to lose their money, there was no doubt Matthew would become the target of the resentment of all those investors.

When the time came, he reckoned Sasha would get a divorce with him even if they didn't urge her.

Meanwhile, Helen did not actually have the intention to jump off the building and all she wanted to do was to give Sasha a scare.

She got down from the window and glared at Matthew. "Matthew, make a pledge now to say that the plan has nothing to do with us!"

Matthew muttered, "Mom, I don't need the investment from Cunningham Pharmaceuticals, but what about the profits?"

Demi cut him off by raging, "You better keep your mouth shut! Did you just mention profits? You must be having a daydream. Do you really think you can win? Let me be very clear with you that we don't want to invest in your plan, and neither do we want the profit from it! Don't you try to trick us because people will associate us with your plan once they know we want the profit! You just have to make a pledge to tell everyone that this plan is not related to our family and Cunningham Pharmaceuticals no matter what is the outcome of it!"

Both James and Helen nodded vigorously in agreement. "Demi is right! We don't want your profits so don't you try to get us implicated if you fail! We won't be interested even if you manage to get billions in profit!"

Sasha said behind gritted teeth, "Dad, Mom, you guys said the same thing when we were at the Jacksons' place last time but what did you guys do when Matthew later received a 300 million sum as compensation?"

James and Helen looked embarrassed at once because their shameful past was raked up by Sasha.

James flew into a rage. "Shut up! Do you think I want his money? Well, I will make myself very clear today—Matthew, regardless of whether you win or lose at the medical conference and how much money you manage to earn, I won't ask for a dime from you and I won't even mention the plan! If I regret my decision, I will be struck by lightning! Are you satisfied now?"

Sasha averted her face away from her father in a huff.

Matthew replied in a soft voice, "Dad, please calm down. Fine, I'll make the pledge."

Demi spoke immediately, "Hold on, I need to record this!" Then, she fished out her phone and aimed it at Matthew before she added, "You can do it now!"

With resignation written all over his face, he sighed, "I hereby pledge that this plan will not be related to the Cunninghams as well as the Cunningham Pharmaceuticals in any way. Is that enough?"

It was only then did James and Helen nod in approval. "Well, you should transfer the 200 million back to the company then! You rascal, you've incurred the company so much interest by just transferring the money back and forth. I think the amount of interest is enough to buy us a property.”

At that moment, Demi suddenly voiced her opinion, “Dad, Mom, I don’t think he should transfer the money back to us.”

Looking astonished, both James and Helen queried, “Why not? Have you gone mad?”

Demi explained with a smile, “Didn’t Jefford and the bunch say they wanted to invest in Matthew’s plan? We can treat the 200 million as part of their investment. In this case, we don’t even have to bear the interest payment. That’s one way to maximize our benefit!”

The eyes of James and Helen lit up. “Hey, that’s a good idea! We’ll do as you say. Sasha, give those shareholders a call and ask them to come back here and sign an agreement to avoid any future dispute.”

Letting out a sorrowful sigh, Sasha gave those shareholders who supported Matthew a call albeit reluctantly. Before long, those shareholders made a trip back and the signing of the agreement went on smoothly. To everyone’s surprise, the amount of the shareholders’ investment added up to more than 200 million.

Looking at the agreement which had been signed, James and Helen smiled in satisfaction. "Finally, this has been settled! We've managed to stop the disaster just in time!"

Sasha, you will be thankful for us several days later! One of these days, you will realize that we will never harm you!" Taking the agreement with them, the two exited Sasha's room looking elated.

Sasha slumped back onto the sofa and started sobbing with her face in her hands. She really felt exhausted after going through this mess. "Matthew, I'm sorry. I-I can't offer you any help again in the end," Sasha croaked.

Matthew drew her close to his chest gently and chuckled, "I told you not to apologize to me. In fact, it's me who has let you down because I didn't handle this with enough care. I let you get caught in between your family and I."

Sasha burst into tears in response to what he said. She wrapped her arms tightly around his neck and lamented, "You are a fool who is so kind to everyone around you! Otherwise, they wouldn't bully you!"

Matthew smiled and consoled her, "I'm fine. I think I'll be able to change how they think of me after the medical conference is over.

By the time it happens, we will get ourselves a huge house. We'll move into it and spend time with only each other before getting a dozen babies!"

Sasha stopped crying and broke into a smile. Giving him a gentle punch, she said while chuckling, "Do I look like a pig who can give birth to a dozen piglets?"

At the basement parking lot of Cunningham Pharmaceuticals, Helen questioned right after they got into their car, "James, why did you ask me to get down from the window just now?"

Sasha could have agreed to divorce Matthew if you allowed me to continue. Do you think she would let me jump off the building?"

James shook his head in disagreement and explained, "It would be pointless. You know Sasha's temperament very well and no one is sure what she can pull off if she is being pushed too far. What's more, there aren't many days left in Matthew's life.

He gathered 10 billion from so many people just so he could participate in the medical conference. If he loses all the money, his life will be targeted by many in Eastcliff!

His doomsday is getting near this time! We don't even have to force them to divorce each other because Matthew might be stabbed to death on the streets!"

Helen nodded. "That makes sense. Alas, the only bad thing about it is that Sasha's reputation will be affected as she will be a widow."

James fumed, "We can't do anything about it. How are you going to convince that stubborn girl to change her mind? Forget it, she will naturally realize our good intentions when she suffers in the future."

Helen heaved out a sigh of resignation before she commented out of the blue, "By the way, I'm quite impressed by Young Master Hughes. He's the successor to the Hughes Family, which is one of the Ten Greatest Families of Eastshire and one that has produced generations of talents in the medical field.

I heard that his family owns intangible assets worth hundreds of billions! None of the other Greatest Families of Eastcliff can be their match. Although one of the grandsons of the Jackson Family was killed by Young Master Hughes last time, they could do nothing to him other than sending him back to his family unscathed.

If Sasha marries him, I think we'll be able to enjoy a similar status as Billy Newman's in Eastcliff! Hmph, that Newman guy didn't even agree to meet us last time. If Sasha really marries Young Master Hughes, I will make sure he is ousted from Eastcliff!"

James nodded in agreement. “Indeed. Our family will get a meteoric rise to fame and wealth if we can be the relatives of the Hughes! However, Matthew just offended Young Master Hughes so badly. See how much trouble that rascal has caused us!”

After some contemplation, Helen spoke softly, “Why don’t we visit Young Master Hughes and apologize to him? After all, that was something done by Matthew and it wasn’t related to us in any way.

Also, we should make use of the chance to make sure he knows that he has our approval to date Sasha. If that doesn’t work, we can just arrange for him to have dinner with Sasha and let her apologize to him personally. How about that?”
