

Chapter 146

When Fiona and the others saw Jason walking towards the red Ferrari, the disdain in their eyes became more intense.

'Fk! You f*cking loser! You'll stay a loser forever!'

Fiona cursed. She stepped forward and grabbed Jason who was taking out his car key. She scoffed, 'I've had enough of you, still trying to act tough, are you? You want us to play along and scream a few times? Want us to stroke that ego?'

How dare this Jason Smith try to act tough.

How could such a good car be driven by such a loser like him?

He should take a look in the mirror!

Jason frowned. He asked, 'What's wrong? This car is mine.'

His reply offended all of them.

Joanne grinned broadly. She covered her mouth and mocked, 'Look at him, he's such a loser. You are still trying to act tough. Some people just love to pretend to be who they're.

What a joke.'

The other two looked at Jason with disdain.

Fiona laughed derisively. She patted Jason on the shoulder and said, 'Jason, I know that your life isn't great right now, but you wouldn't be such a loser, would you?'

After that, Fiona turned around and left with her girlfriends, disdain visible in their eyes.

A stunned Jason was left standing there. He took the key for the Ferrari from his pocket and sighed resignedly.

Fiona's really ungrateful.

I helped her out a lot back then. But she backstabbed me. I didn't even get a thank you.

Forget it, not going to waste my time explaining.

Jason thought for a while and decided to drive to Cindy's company. He wanted to give her a surprise.

If she asked him where he got the car, he already had an excuse at the ready: He won it in a bet. If Cindy didn't believe it, he would ask Finn to back him up.

On his way to the company, Jason received a phone call from an unexpected person: his good friend Gerry Liu.

Jason felt that he owed Gerry.

He didn't even give him a call after all this time. And I call myself his brother.

When he picked up the phone, Gerry laughed, 'Jason, are you free tonight? Bring Cindy along Jasmyn and I are going to get engaged. Let's have dinner together.'

Gerry sounded very happy.

Jason frowned. Gerry is going to get engaged to Jasmyn?

'Sure, where are you? I'll go and find you right away,' Jason smiled.

He didn't tell Gerry about Jasmyn's news. His friend was a someone who valued relationships.

If he knew what kind of woman Jasmyn was, he would probably kill himself.

Jason would not agree to Gerry's engagement with Jasmyn. He had to find a way to expose Jasmyn's true colors to Gerry.

'She booked the Polaris Restaurant. Said it's an awesome place. Dinner's at seven. Don't be late and remember to bring Cindy with you.'

Gerry seemed unusually excited.

He and Jasmyn were together for four years now. Now they were finally settling down.

'Okay.'

Jason hung up. He sat in his car, lost in thought.

After turning around, Jason went to the nearest gift shop. He had to bring some gifts.

Since he wanted to thank Gerry for his help to over all these years, Jason had to get something decent for him.

I cannot shame my brother.

Meanwhile, Gerry was in his house. After he ended the call with Jason, Jasmyn came in.

She was wearing branded stuff from head to toe. She even sported the latest Gucci bag. She was well dressed. Slowly, she walked to Gerry.

Jasmyn knew who Gerry was calling. She overheard it outside. Her face fell. She asked, 'Gerry, why are you inviting that loser, Jason to our engagement banquet?'

She despised Jason. Because of him, she was embarrassed in that BMW dealership.

Gerry was helpless. He didn't know why his girlfriend disliked Jason so much. He smiled, 'Jasmyn, Jason is my buddy, my only buddy. It wouldn't be good if I didn't invite him.'

Jasmyn pursed her lips. She looked unhappy 'Just this time. Don't do it again.'

Jasmyn knew what she was doing. Engagement was a big event. She couldn't shame Gerry.

After chatting for a while, Jasmyn's phone rang. She took it and went out with a sweet smile. 'Hello, Mr. Wang, it's such a surprise to receive your call today.'

On the other end of the phone, a husky voice said, 'Jasmyn, are you free tonight? It's been a long time since we got any action. I'm missing you.'

Jasmyn frowned. She turned around to look at the dingy house behind her. A subtle flash of disgust showed in her eyes, but she quickly smiled again, 'Yeah, I have some time tonight. I'll be having dinner with my friends in the Polaris Restaurant. Why don't you wait for me in the hotel upstairs?'

'Sure.' Mr. Wang replied happily.

After shu hung up, Jasmyn took her makeup from her bag. She fixed up her makeup before calling a taxi and ringing up her girlfriends.

Seven o'clock in the evening, at the Polaris Restaurant.

In a private room gathered a group of young, good-looking people. They chatted and laughed.

The girls looked good, and had great taste in fashion. They were fair and beautiful.

Especially the one in the middle. She had crescent-shaped eyes, delicate facial features, and a pair of long legs covered by a miniskirt. The boys around her took furtive glances from time to time.

She was Jasmyn's sister, Emma Xu.

It was her younger sister's engagement banquet tonight. Of course she had to come, and she had to look grand at it.

There was a reason for it.

She wanted to see if she could seduce some boys.

'Sister, is your boyfriend any good? I don't really see much of him. What's his job?'

Emma started chatting. She turned around and asked an absent-minded Jasmyn who was glued to her phone.

Jasmyn smiled faintly, 'He's just from an ordinary family, but he's very nice to me. I want to get engaged first, I don't want mom and dad to nag at me about marriage.'

Emma was disappointed. She thought that her future brother-in-law was going to be rich. But he was from an ordinary family. That meant he was nothing but a loser.

Could it be that my proud sister has changed her attitude?

You're looking for good boys now, huh?

Meanwhile, Jasmyn was s*xting with Mr. Wang on WeChat. She made an appointment with him. At nine o'clock, she would go to his room.

She put down her mobile phone, feeling satisfied. She then started chatting with her besties.

'Hey, I want to tell you guys something. It's f*cking funny.'

Jasmyn took out her mobile phone and opened the video she had recorded earlier before showing it to everyone.

Everyone there was young. They loved gossip. When Jasmyn said that she had a funny story, it piqued their interest.

'Something happened here a few days ago. Gerry has an only friend called Jason. Emma, you know him too, right? It's the loser who wanted to buy one hundred Harley Davidsons from your store.' Jasmyn winked at Emma.

She understood what her sister was saying immediately, 'Jason Smith? Yeah, he's a loser through and through!'

Emma leaned back on the chair angrily, arms crossed around her chest.

'What happened? Who is this Jason Smith? How much of a loser is he?' Jasmyn's friends wanted to know more.

Jasmyn opened a few WeChat groups. She sent a video of Jason fighting and getting surrounded in the Polaris. She sneered, 'This is how much of a loser he is. His wife was bullied by some gangsters, and he had to act tough by taking it up to the manager. My friend told me he was beaten up bad, and his wife had to sleep with someone to help him...'

Jasmyn didn't say anything, but everyone knew what she wanted to say. He sold his wife to save himself.

But it was a lie Jasmyn made. She just showed one video and made up the rest of the story

Jasmyn would take every chance to humiliate Jason and his wife.

She had despised Jason for a long time now, and even more so toward his wife, the perfect beauty, Cindy Jiang.

Any woman would be jealous of her. Jasmyn relished tarnishing Cindy's reputation on such an occasion. The worse it got, the better. She would feel great if it did.

'Wasn't Gerry going to bring Jason here today? I'll give him a surprise.'

This was Jasmyn's revenge.

Embarrassing Jason in front of everyone!

She even sent Cindy's photos to the group chat.

Her besties were stunned.

The girls were jealous. Some even gloated at the fact that a woman like her was sullied.

The boys felt sorry for her. A woman like her had to sell herself to save her loser husband. It was a pity.

'Holy sh*t! A loser like this exists?'

'I admire the loser. In a way, selling such a great wife out is a talent.'

'This kind of men are trash!'

'There's worse. When he came to our Harley Davidson dealership, he said he wanted to buy a hundred Harley Davidsons. What a joke. Of course I threw this loser out.' Emma remarked sarcastically.

'What the fk! How disgusting! This man is so stupid!'

'Forget it. Gerry should be here soon.' Emma smiled, 'He said he will bring several friends here today. Know who they are? Anyone handsome or rich? Introduce them to me.'

'Handsome ones?'

The girls began gossiping.

As they gossiped, Gerry opened the door and came in. As soon as he sat down, he hugged and kissed her on the face. Everyone was was envious of the couple.

But Jasmyn pushed him away with disdain. She glared at him, 'What are you doing? I just put my makeup on.'

Jasmyn was the only one who would disrespect Gerry in public like this.

The group did not say anything. They all knew Jasmyn didn't like Gerry.

He was just her ATM.

It was obvious.

As soon as Gerry entered the door, they rated him, He was a four, not even half a point higher.

This man was too ordinary, he was a nice guy.

Jasmyn was going to get engaged to him?

Emma was confused.

What's wrong with my sister?

Someone like him couldn't have any rich friends.

'By the way,' Jasmyn said, 'Didn't you say you were bringing your friends here? Where are they?'

Jasmyn smiled coldly when she asked that.

She did not tell anyone that the friend Gerry was bringing was Jason, the loser they were talking about.

She wanted to see everyone's reaction after Jason came in.

'Oh, he's gone to the toilet,' Gerry explained.

While they were talking, Jason came in. 'Hey, let me introduce him to you. This is my good buddy, Jason.' Gerry got up and greeted him with a smile.
