

My Dreamy Old Husband

Chapter 324

The scandal of the vice chancellor marrying a female student would bring the reputation of Bayside University into disrepute if it was leaked to the public. By that time, it'd be much easier for the university to expel Sophia once she incited the students to protest.

When the vice chancellor was informed that Joe couldn't stop cursing, the former chased him out of anger. "Shut up!"

Joe was a rascal who wouldn't know what it meant to shut up, so he continued to shout, "How dare you ask me to shut the f*ck up? I'm your father-in-law and my daughter, Sophia, is your wife! Why didn't you ask me to be silent when you slept with her?"

Upon hearing those obscene words, the vice chancellor almost vomited blood before instructing the security guard, "Carry him out!" The security guard then dragged Joe away.

The matter caused a great sensation. Upon receiving the news, Bayside University's students had arrived in swarms and caused the road to be congested. Numerous phones were held out and even electric cars were blocked on the road. The issue grew like a snowball and not more than ten minutes later, the road was completely packed with people.

Richard saw the news on the IG Stories. When he rushed over, he had arrived in time to witness what was being unfolded. It turned out that Sophia had married the vice chancellor! She is truly impressive.

No wonder she was able to successfully enroll in Bayside University and even passed all the examinations even though she frequently skipped classes. It was all because the vice chancellor supported her! How disgusting! In order to enter the university, she was willing to marry an old man, who was over 50!

“”

Joe resembled an animal being transported to the butcher, screaming shrilly, “Fletcher, I’ll sue you for abusing my daughter. I’ll make my daughter divorce you! Just wait and I’ll see you in court. I’ll make you lose all your money!”

The vice chancellor flushed with anger. Upon noticing that the students had swarmed in, he shouted, “Fat b*stard, listen up. I didn’t marry your daughter. I know who your son-in-law is, but I won’t tell you because you don’t deserve to know his name!”

“Pfft, old man, let me tell you. Don’t you ever think that you can abuse her as you wish since she’s alone. She has a family too. Sophia is my daughter! Do you hear that? If you dare to abuse her, I’ll take you down no matter what!”

“Shut up!”

“I won’t! What’s the matter? Are you ashamed now? Didn’t you feel ashamed when you married my daughter? You are a filthy old man who only wants young women!”

Both of them cursed at each other from a distance apart, and even the students enthusiastically joined the discussion. It had been a long time since Bayside University became lively!

The crowded students suddenly separated from each other in that moment. It turned out that Sophia had arrived. She wasn’t intending to poke her nose in the matter since there would be someone more anxious than her and would naturally settle it for her.

However, she saw the video of Joe blabbering on IG stories as well as the alumni group website. In the video, the vice chancellor, who was over 50, was being mocked and scolded, resulting in his face being flushed red. Not only that, but he lost his virtue in his old age and received criticisms for no reason. She decided to come over out of guilt.

Once she arrived, she just happened to witness the drama between the two old men. The crowd parted and took the initiative to create a path for her. She walked through the crowd and was escorted by a group of seniors and juniors from the gay school behind her.

Upon noticing her, Joe was overjoyed and shouted, “My daughter, you’re finally here. Please lecture your husband!” He pushed the two security guards aside and dashed toward Sophia. However, before he could, two seniors from the gay school walked out behind her and stopped him with two slaps.

Sophia glanced at the students around them, who enjoyed watching the commotion—Xyla, who watched smugly, was among them as well as Richard, who looked utterly disgusted.

Faye was also there, but pretended that she was not part of the Edwards. She saw everyone with her own eyes. Then, she raised her hand while Gemma placed a loudspeaker on her palm.

Upon lifting the loudspeaker and facing it at Joe, she enunciated each and every word. “Joe, I’m not your daughter!” Her voice was clearly transmitted into the ears of those who were present.

Joe clenched his teeth and flew into rage. “You unfilial daughter! How dare you deny our relationship? Aren’t you afraid that I—”

Sophia detested the fact that half of her bloodline had belonged to Joe. Looking at his disgusting face, she recalled that the helpless Annabel was molested and raped by the ugly monster 20 years ago.

How she wished that she could have slapped him several times on Annabel's behalf. Although she knew that she should keep her family's dirty laundry private, she could no longer hold back since he was only interested in money and disregarded her reputation.

Sophia said stoically, "Joe, speaking from your conscience, do you deserve to be my father?"

Joe stomped his feet in anger, causing his fat to jiggle. "I'm your father. Half of your life belongs to me, so I'm your father, no matter what!"

Clenching her teeth, she sneered. "I came today just to explain three matters. I've already explained the first point. Secondly, the vice chancellor is not my husband. My husband is someone else!"

Everyone burst into an uproar and they weren't convinced. The vice chancellor was terrified. Initially, he didn't want to alarm Sophia, afraid that Michael would become mad and go back on his word to donate a multipurpose building. However, it would be better if she could step in and explain the issues.

Joe scolded, "Stop pretending—"

"Thirdly..." The voice from the loudspeaker interrupted his words. Glancing at the students, who watched the commotion with their widened eyes, she continued to speak, "The vice chancellor has indeed visited my house a couple of days ago at night, but only to have a discussion with my husband about donating a building to the university."

Donate a building? The students simmered with excitement.

Sophia's voice amplified from the loudspeaker. "My husband has his own bursary and has provided a few million in student grants to Bayside University on a yearly basis. Other than that, he will donate a multipurpose building! That night, the vice chancellor and my husband were at home, discussing donating a building.

However, someone with ill intentions sneakily took photos and spread rumors. I hope that all of you will stop guessing. The vice chancellor has been contributing to Bayside University throughout his entire life. He's not someone who can be slandered easily!"

Wow! Donate a building! Donating a building to Bayside University was an impressive contribution. The donor must be the wealthiest of the wealthiest. Therefore, who is Sophia's husband exactly? Perhaps they would only know after the building was completed.

She continued to speak through the loudspeaker, "In addition, my husband and I had married on our own volition. We're dating like a common couple. It's my personal matter and I hope that no one will kick a ruckus about it again! Besides, my husband is also an alumnus who graduated from Bayside University.

He has always cared for his alma mater. Other than promising to donate a multipurpose building this time, he has anonymously donated a school building and even donated at least 50 million worth of teaching facilities! To the evil person behind the rumors, let me warn you that I won't let this slide easily this time!"

While she said that, she deliberately glared at Richard, who was standing among the crowd, and even aimed the loudspeaker at him. In an instant, everyone turned their gaze toward him.

After all, he had a history for it—the previous rumor about Sophia hiring her male schoolmate was recently exposed in the limelight and a new rumor about her marrying the vice chancellor now had emerged instead. He obviously had a hand in it!