

My Dreamy Old Husband

Chapter 446

“No, wait! It sounds like my aunt is crying! Are you hitting her?” Stanley sounded panicky. Jeez! From the sound of it, it seems like he hit her pretty hard! Did he just hit her in the face? Darn it! If he did, her face could be swollen right now! Nevertheless, nothing else more was heard from the other side at this moment. Could they be enjoying a horizontal tango in their hotel room?

Something seemed to dawn on Stanley the moment he set his eyes on Scary Phoenix in the game. Darn it! I can't believe I have to hear their lovey-dovey sh*t again! Ahh! This disgusting couple just won't give me a break! Where is their sense of shame?

No wonder our society is morally depraved! Soon, the game was left with only Stanley, who was in confusion, the unresponsive Scary Phoenix, and Natasha, who was trying to explain her innocence.

‘Say something, Mrs. Murray. I'm so sorry; I didn't do it on purpose. Taylor and I are just friends! Please forgive me, Mrs. Murray! I didn't mean to do that! Please don't take your anger out on Taylor. Blame me if you want!’

Later on, Natasha complacently decided to go offline when Scary Phoenix didn't respond at all. ‘Oops! It looks like Taylor is calling me now. I gotta get going to pick up his call! Stay sweet! Ciao!’ After Natasha went offline, Stanley left the game as well. It was only after a while before he saw Scary Phoenix logging in again.

‘Hey stupid dog, let's battle!’ Scary Phoenix responded.

Scary Phoenix replied, 'Yup.'

Then, both of them continued their exciting game until Stanley suddenly interrupted it and typed a message in the group. 'Eddie, you might want to look at the news because Natasha has really gone crazy!' In that instant, Scary Phoenix, who was busy killing monsters in the game, quickly sheathed his blade and disappeared from Stanley's sight.

Meanwhile, Sophia, who was covered in sweat all over her body, quitted the game and logged onto a website, only to see the news that Natasha was planning to build a museum that would cost a fortune, known as Taylor Murray's Museum.

All of Taylor's original movies would be kept there, as well as the actor's life-sized wax statue. Apart from that, Natasha had also been buying all of Taylor's memorabilia that were once auctioned off because she was planning to build a huge statue that looked exactly like the celebrity with them.

Oh dear! All this costs money! So, this is the surprise that she is planning to give Michael?! Upon reading the news, Sophia murmured to herself, "It looks like the Mitchell Family is really damn rich!"

After that, Sophia asked herself how well off she was compared to Natasha. I have enough fortune to give Natasha a run for her money, but perhaps it no longer matters anymore since Lord is already mine. Furthermore, I could use the money to build a business in the future or give it to Stanley to start his business. After all, that tiny company seems to have a promising future.

In the meantime, Natasha had never taken her eyes off the news ever since she announced her plan to build a museum for Taylor, desperate to see how 'Eddie Fletcher' was going to make a comeback from this. This is not some museum that anyone can afford. Even with tens of billions of fortune, I had to sell off most of my jewelry in order to make this project possible.

At the thought of that, Natasha was worried that Eddie wouldn't respond but also afraid of the opposite at the same time, knowing how much she was struggling financially to facilitate this project. Nevertheless, her past experiences told her that Eddie would respond in less than a day, yet she didn't hear anything about Eddie's donation in the last two days. If Eddie doesn't respond, I'll be the winner! As expected, no one can challenge my wealth!

Natasha was excited when she thought about that, deeming herself the victor in her rivalry with Eddie. Therefore, she continued to visit the filming crew every day with flowers. Back then, 'Eddie Fletcher' used to buy flowers and deliver them to the filming crew, but ever since their defeat, they were too embarrassed to do that anymore.

At the same time, Natasha was waiting for any news about Taylor's wife, expecting her challenge anytime soon after provoking the latter in the game earlier. By then, all I have to do is just to act like a poor little girl, and that should take me one step closer to Taylor's divorce. Thinking about that, Natasha indulged herself in her presumed victory.

In the meantime, Michael had been paying close attention to the gossips circling around him, although he might appear unconcerned about them. In fact, he could sense Sophia's dismay after she was defeated by Natasha in their rivalry. Although Michael could choose to ignore the unpleasant incident, he knew Sophia was upset by it.

After all, Cooper should have been the patriarch in the Mitchell Family, while Sophia was to be the family's eldest daughter. Nevertheless, Alex took that away from Cooper, along with everything else that belonged to Sophia, yet Natasha was now openly wooing Michael.

On the other hand, Olivia started to treat Sophia indifferently after listening to how Natasha bad-mouthed her, feeling desperate to meet up with Mrs. Murray, whose wealth was allegedly able to compare to a nation's. Nevertheless, she never really stood a chance to see her in person, no matter how she tried to sound out Michael.

While the world knew that Taylor had a family, no one seemed to know anything about his wife and child. Besides, even the director hadn't seen Mrs. Murray in person as well, indicating just how secretive the celebrity had been about his family as his wife had never visited the filming crew. Even until this moment when the two crazy fans were fighting over Taylor Murray, Mrs. Murray seemed strangely calm and collected.

This seems odd, and it doesn't make sense at all! After running through several reasons in her mind, Olivia finally came to a possible conclusion that Mrs. Murray had gone broke. Perhaps Mrs. Murray is not as loaded as Natasha or even Eddie, which explains why she doesn't have the guts to pressure Taylor.

Anyway, she is nowhere near Natasha in the battle of wealth! At the thought of that, Olivia began to flatter Natasha, who thought that divorces were common among celebrities. Thus, Taylor could simply divorce his wife and be with her even though he was married.

When Olivia visited the filming crew, Olivia warmed up to her and said, "Here you are, Natasha! Lunchtime with Taylor?"

Nevertheless, Natasha saw through Olivia's hypocrisy as she never forgot the latter's attitude when she was at a disadvantage in her rivalry against Eddie. However, when she saw how Olivia cozied up to her as if she was a queen, she couldn't help but feel gleeful about it.

Soon, the two ladies continued to chat with each other, heading to see Michael, only to find the actor busy shooting a scene in which he was performing a wire stunt while fighting the male protagonist, Ethan. Meanwhile, Sophia only followed her husband around wherever he went.

In fact, this was a scene in which Ethan's character in the play found and saved his comrade's sister but was soon intercepted by the villain on their way out. Therefore, both men engaged in a fierce fight, which ended with the male protagonist safely leaving with his comrade's sister.

Actually, Xyla was the one who played the sister of the male protagonist's comrade, but she didn't have much to do in this scene since the two men were the main focus. Nonetheless, she was still happy enough to play a role that would make all other actresses jealous because the two actors would be brutally fighting each other for her.

The scene would start with the male protagonist successfully rescuing Xyla's character, only to be recaptured by the villain. In the end, the male protagonist would take down the villain and carry the victim away. In that case, that would mean that Xyla would get to be carried by both actors.
