

My Dreamy Old Husband

Chapter 658

Harry warmly welcomed everyone into his house. "Welcome in, everyone."

The West Family was stunned as they could not believe that the alleged gangster was actually the famous actor, Ethan Winston. No, how is this even possible? Could it be that Sarah has asked him to pretend to be her boyfriend? He's an actor, isn't he? However, it costs a lot to hire him...

The group of people were in a daze as they were invited into the house in a daze. Then, Ethan spoke again, "Since we are all a family, just make yourselves at home."

It was only after the group sat down did they return to their senses. So, Sarah's boyfriend is really Ethan.

Taylor Murray and his wife were among the few guests in the hall. They are really celebrities! Sarah has found a famous celebrity as her boyfriend!

The group of middle-aged women were excited to hear his words. She's definitely capable indeed. It's a story worth flaunting for a long time.

However, both Judy and Victoria had their own thoughts. Based on Sarah's prerequisites, how is she able to hook up with Ethan?

Sarah was rather nervous because she feared about ruining the entire situation and merely followed Sophia's advice. Just let Harry take control and nod at the right times.

Then, Harry started to blow his own trumpet. "Mr. West, I heard that you recently had an argument with Sarah. Actually, it's not her fault. She just had to deal with many matters in the company, so she's more irritated. You guys merely had a communication breakdown, so why don't you two shake hands and bury the hatchet here? After all, you guys are still a family. On top of her business, she is also busy with school work and hasn't been returning home due to her busy schedule. It's also more convenient for her to stay at my place to work."

As soon as Sarah's relatives heard that, they couldn't believe their ears. Didn't she recently squander a few million? She actually founded a company and earned tens of millions a month? We've received the wrong information!

Mr. West also felt incredulous, but since it was Ethan speaking, the only option was to believe him. Hence, he quickly asked Sarah, "Sarah, is this true?"

A blushing Sarah was so nervous that her forehead was coated with a film of perspiration. Since she was a little girl, she never fancied talking much and did not properly speak to him ever since her father remarried. Whenever both of them met up, they would eventually be at loggerheads with each other. It was years ago that they were last able to sit down and have a peaceful chat.

Upon thinking about Sophia's advice, Sarah replied, "Yes, it's true. Even though I want to learn to manage the family business from you, I really have no interest in that field. So, I started an online gaming company with a few classmates and we're developing games now." She gritted her teeth before continuing. "Dad, I was immature in the past and I've caused a lot of trouble. You've worried a lot about me as well. Now that I'm an adult, I'm more mature and able to have an independent life. So, you don't have to worry about me anymore."

It took everything that she had to say those words. Her face was now flushed and she was profusely perspiring.

Mr. West looked at Harry before turning to Sarah. After glancing at them both, he suddenly patted her shoulder and responded in relief, "That's good. As long as you are now mature, it's all good."

With that, both father and daughter finally buried the hatchet. In the past, Sarah was merely too young and thought that Mr. West had disappointed her mother, becoming disinterested in her because he became wealthy. However, she later understood that her father was not to be entirely blamed for the divorce.

If someone had to take the blame, it would be the couple themselves—they sold breakfast together in their trolley from street to street and started their business, but once it took off, they couldn't enjoy their success together.

Mr. West had blamed his first wife for not understanding him while she condemned him for being an old-fashioned man, which resulted in them splitting up. Even though they worked in the same corporation, they both had a new family.