

My Dreamy Old Husband

Chapter 661

Michael never maintained a good relationship with Jordan, who was the head of the Edwards Family. Not to mention, Lucy had dumped Michael a few years ago. Later, when Jordan wanted to buy Villa No. 1 from him, he was rejected, causing them to have a tense relationship.

What is he implying by sending the invitation to us?

Jordan was also one of the suspects to have sponsored Phantom Wolf. Hence, Michael felt that he needed to attend the event...

After chatting with the West Family, Harry saw them off after the scrumptious meal. Before they left, he even gave a salamander to Mr. West, making him delighted.

Harry changed clothes and threw all the cup noodles away after the West Family left.

He finally realized that he could not live a life like that any more. After all, he also wanted to settle down and have kids. I can't go on like this anymore! I have to learn to live like Michael.

When Michael went home, Harry sent his neighbors away and replaced all the antique vases with the pink rug, returning the entire place to its initial decor.

Once he was done with everything, Sarah suddenly hugged him from behind as she was moved by his actions. "Old Wolf, you are the best!" He looked incredibly handsome when he stood up to my stepmother earlier! If only I can be as assertive as him, she won't be able to bully me anymore!

Upon looking at Sarah today, Harry thought she was incredibly beautiful.

She had always been a hermit who usually never left the house and would not participate in any upper-class society gatherings. The dress that she wore earlier was even borrowed from Sophia.

Sophia's clothes were usually purchased from the factory, resulting in her wardrobe containing many new clothes that she hadn't worn. She lent one of them to Sarah today and was surprised to know that it perfectly fitted her.

As Sarah wore the red dress, it gave her style a different aura from her usual attire. Even her young face had a different flair to it.

She curiously asked, "How did you know about my familial matters?"

Harry gave her a mysterious look. "It's a secret."

She scratched her head and mumbled to herself as she went upstairs to change.

Upon looking at her heading up the stairs in her red gown, his eyes were full of affection.

He had always known about her.

Harry had been doing well in his circle nine years ago.

Even though he was a businessman in the underworld, he needed to have a proper public identity. When Michael started his acting career, he felt that he also had such talents and joined the former to act in a movie, earning him a job title as an actor.

As the Internet gained popularity, more kids knew how to use technology. Harry realized that he often received tweets from a user called 'Little Kitten' on Twitter. Hers was just one of the many few million messages and did not stand out.

Sometimes, Sarah would show her drawings to him, knowing that he would never read anything that she sent and reply to her. So, she treated his Twitter as a place for her to vent her frustrations. Whenever she ran into something that made her sad, she would send him messages—something about the divorce of her parents and her fierce stepmother.

She had messaged everything about herself to him. Even though he seemed as though he never read any of her messages, he had actually been reading them—her first time participating in a drawing competition, her first time receiving a love letter, being alone abroad for the first time, her first time signing her works... When she failed her college entrance exam, she was so desperate that she even contemplated suicide. However, someone told her she still could save her marks, so she quickly prepared for the materials to prove herself and rely on her connections for help. In the end, she managed to successfully enroll in Bayside University. He was aware of everything that she endured.

He also knew about everything she had been through—her love and hatred on top of her troubles and worries as well as her dreams and goals.

Even though Sarah was a bit silly, it was still cute for Harry.

After he finished packing his items, he changed into his pink bunny outfit. In fact, he became so adept at wearing it that he became comfortable, even though he felt awkward when he first tried it.

Harry felt that he should also thank Michael for today's arrangements. If it hadn't been for him, it wouldn't have looked as good as it did. Meanwhile, he also felt that he had disappointed Sarah.

After all, he was from the underworld, so living a quality life wasn't his strong suit.

On the other hand, Michael was very good at living a fruitful life—he nurtured Sophia until she looked healthy and plump. Nathan was also chubby with a lot of baby fat on his face under his care.

When Harry arrived at Michael's house, he saw Stanley on the rug hugging his uncle's thighs.

"Uncle Michael, why don't you invest a bit more money? Just a little will do."
When Michael was disgusted and annoyed, Stanley continued to plead. "It's not much! Just a little—100 million would do."

"Get your hands off me. I don't have money. Go and ask someone else."

However, Stanley continued to grab Michael's thigh and pretended to be pitiful. "Uncle Michael, just invest in us. Our game is about to be launched on an international stage to make our country proud. I have a huge event lined up, but it needs a lot of money. Sophia has invested money into this. You're the one left!"

If Michael refused to give Stanley money, he would throw tantrums and roll on the ground.

After being annoyed by Stanley, Michael responded, "Gosh, you are embarrassing yourself! Get up on your feet! I'll give you some money, alright?"

Stanley immediately rose to his full height and bowed. "Thank you, Uncle Michael! You are a good person!"

With that, both of them sat down to discuss the details of the investment and were soon joined by Sean.

Upon seeing that, Harry also quickly participated in their discussion.

Now that the Internet was booming, even the rural places and temples used QR codes to solicit for donations. It was clear how popular smartphones and the Internet was becoming.

Hence, it was a necessity to develop a gaming app on the phone. Stanley planned to develop a mobile game called 'The Soul of Snipers'. With plans to develop another game, he would require lots of money to be invested.

Sophia had invested a lot in his new project.

With the amount of money from Cooper, it was useless to keep it in the bank. Hence, she quickly withdrew it for investments—she bought stocks, timely purchases of the trending properties, and invested in many other businesses.

As Harry approached them, Stanley quickly grabbed him to talk about investments. Once the four of them had finished their discussion, they signed an investment agreement. With that, Stanley packed his things in contentment and happily left with Sean. Not only did Stanley leave his dog in Michael's place, he had also brought his cats over. At the current moment, it seemed like the entire place was inundated with cats.

Before Stanley left, he carefully reminded, "Sophia, take good care of Sunset and Judge's collars, yeah? They are branded and expensive."

While hugging Sunset, who had soft fur, Sophia hummed in agreement and shot a good look at the cat's collar.

Harry finally sat down and talked business with Michael.

After all, they were buddies for many years—to thank Michael formally would be too awkward.

Harry spoke, “Sarah’s dad has asked me and Sarah to join the Edwards Family’s Annual Meeting.”

Even though both Sarah and Harry were not a part of the Edwards Family and Judy was merely their stepmother without any blood relations, Mr. West had still asked them to join the annual dinner to boost his wife’s reputation.

Joe’s generation had descended from the illegitimate side of the Edwards Family. He initially could not be listed in the genealogy record book. However, since his name was recently included, it was a piece of good news to him, so he fervently hoped that he would be able to show good results to the family—bringing along two handsome and privileged son-in-laws was a good choice.

After thinking about it, Michael replied, “Alright. Let’s go together then.”

He also wanted to meet Jordan.

Michael sent Harry home after their discussion. By that stage, Sophia had also showered and changed into her pajamas before approaching Michael with Sunset in her arms.

Stanley recently hadn’t gone home as he was worried that his old caretakers would mistreat his sons and daughters. Hence, he quickly sent Sunset and her family of three cats over to her.

Sunset had a beautiful collar full of diamonds around its neck, matching its personality and boosting her elegance. Whenever it was in the same picture as Sophia and the other orange cats, it looked like a rich young lady posing with other people from the countryside.

“Dear, look at Sunset’s collar—it’s so beautiful!”