Chapter 931

Chapter 931 My Mother Got Lucky

Like a cannon, Levi shot his right fist into a man and sent him flying toward the crowd. It was as if the man had been hit by a sports car with five hundred horsepower.

Crack! Crack! Crack!

In an instant, more than thirty men were sent flying as the sound of bones cracking filled the air.

Those who were hit by Levi either had broken ribs, broken backs, or broken legs.

None of them walked away without a bone fracture because Levi's punches were unbelievably powerful.

Amos was stupefied at the sight.

How can someone be this terrifying?

Levi put on a show as he cruelly beat up hundreds of men, making them wail helplessly.

Instead of killing those men, Levi crippled them as punishment for hurting his mother.

Sigh!

Levi sighed with relief as he dusted off his hands.

Around him were people laying over all the place, stacked up like mountains.

While Levi stood there with his chest puffed, the Brauses froze with their mouths wide open.

The two had trouble believing what they had just witnessed.

Is he even human?

He just crippled almost six hundred men by himself.

These men will be bedridden for a year!

Thud!

Erwin slipped from the car and sat down helplessly on the ground.

This is just too frightening. I've never seen anyone this good.

"You're next!"

Step by step, Levi walked toward the two.

"We... We're sorry! You should know that we've actually treated your mother fairly. We never... We never gave her a hard time," stuttered Erwin.

"That's funny. Didn't you just tell me about how you used to torture her?" Levi sneered.

Amos smiled apologetically before responding, "We... We were merely kidding. Why would we torture your mother? We wanted nothing but the best for her."

"It's true. We've been good to her. Just think about it, Mr. Garrison. It's been nearly thirty years. How could she have survived if we weren't good to her?" reminded Erwin.

"She would have passed away a long time ago if we'd tortured her, but she's alive and well. That proves that we've been nice to her," added Amos with a smile.

"That's because she got lucky! She was strong!" roared Levi suddenly, which scared the living daylights out of the Brauses.

"Why don't you take a guess at what I'm about to do to you guys," suggested Levi with a smirk.

Chapter 932 Going Against The Garrisons

The Brauses knew well that Levi's smirk could only mean trouble for them.

"Please spare us, Mr. Garrison! We were only following orders."

"We're no different than dogs!"

The two quickly begged Levi for his forgiveness.

"The masters may be despicable, but the dogs aren't any better."

A murderous glint suddenly flashed across Levi's eyes before he grabbed Amos by the collar and lifted the man off the ground.

Amos kicked his legs in the air as his face quickly turned red from suffocation.

Thump!

Crack!

Levi punched Amos on the ribs, and immediately, the sound of bone cracking could be heard.

The punch had completely fractured the man's ribs.

"Argh!" Amos cried out in agony.

Thump!

Crack!

“Argh!”

The other side of his rib cage was broken too.

Thump!

Crack!

Next was his breastbone, which collapsed after it was struck.

Thump!

Crack!

Another punch landed on his nose, and Amos' face was sunken in.

Thump!

Crack!

Thump!

Crack!

Levi smashed every bone in the man's body, including his arms and legs.

The King of Margo City had bone fractures all over his body.

His bones were so smashed up that they were almost powder-like.

Amos passed out eight times during his beating.

He would wake up when Levi's punches landed on him before passing out again, and he continuously screamed with pain.

“Now, it’s your turn!”

Levi threw Amos aside before picking Erwin up.

Like what he had done to the man before, Levi broke Erwin’s bones, one by one, with his punches.

Erwin was weaker than his father. The son passed out thirteen times and screamed even louder.

The two went through hell at Levi’s hands and could only lie motionlessly on the ground because all of their bones were broken.

“Compared to what my mother has been through, this is mercy. I should have simply killed you,” stated Levi calmly.

The Brauses looked at Levi with fear because they knew that the man would continue to haunt them in their dreams.

“You’re only alive because I need you to send the Garrisons a message,” explained Levi.

“Tell them that Levi Garrison’s back and that nobody is to imprison my mother. I’ll kill anyone who tries to do so! One more thing. Tell them that I’ll pay them a visit soon. The most powerful ancient family in Erudia is now my enemy!”

Chapter 933 We Will Not Bow To An Orphan

“I... I admit that you’re powerful, but you’re nothing... Nothing compared to the Garrisons.”

It took every bit of strength in Amos to force out those words.

They're the most powerful ancient family in Erudia, The Head of Erudia!

There's no way that one man can overthrow a millennia-old ancient family.

They'll never bow to a bastard like Levi.

"That's also why I didn't kill you. I want you to witness how I crush the Garrisons," explained Levi calmly.

Thump!

He then stomped on the ground with both of his feet, causing the house that had imprisoned Emma for nearly thirty years to collapse and turn into billows of smoke.

After that, Levi turned to leave the place.

He had finally destroyed his mother's decades-old prison that day and undermined the Garrison's authority.

Glancing at Levi's back, the Brauses scoffed, "You can't escape the Garrisons. You'll see eventually."

At that moment, Sylas had already left Margo City.

Although there were obstacles along the way, they were nothing that she could not handle.

On top of that, Zoey had powerful allies watching over her, like the fully-recovered Hades.

Most of the obstacles along their way were already taken care of.

"What happened to my son? Please. We have to go back," begged Emma in tears.

Zoey was also worried about leaving Levi alone.

"Don't worry. Mr. Garrison is fine," assured Sylas confidently.

She was somewhat regretful that she did not get to see the God of War in all of his glory.

“Sylas, you seem to have a lot of faith in Levi.”

It was by women’s intuition that Zoey noticed how Sylas had changed her attitude toward Levi.

Sylas used to see Levi as her enemy, but she has since changed and she now seems to revere him.

The same thing happened to Iris.

Somewhere along the line, she began to treat Levi differently, as if he was a changed man.

Like Sylas, she’d put a lot of faith in Levi and had seemed to revere him too.

What happened to the both of them?

Zoey was starting to get paranoid and thought that everyone was hiding something from her.

“Mr. Garrison is not a reckless man,” explained Sylas.

At that point, a call came in from Levi, so Zoey and Emma finally heaved a sigh of relief.

“He wants us to return to South City without him. He’ll meet us there.”

Zoey then asked Sylas to continue driving.

“Emma, the border is just up ahead. When we pass it, you will have finally stepped out of Margo City,” uttered Zoey as she looked sympathetically at Emma.

What a poor woman!

She’s been imprisoned here for half her lifetime.

“No! I can’t do it!” exclaimed Emma suddenly when she was reminded by Zoey.

“If I step out of Margo City, we’ll be doome

Chapter 934 Live And Die Together

“What’s wrong, Emma?” asked Zoey in confusion.

“I will have broken my vow if I leave! The Garrisons will surely kill Levi! I know better than anyone just how powerful they are. You may not know this, but the Garrisons had sent a servant to silence the entire South Hampton.

The servant made sure that everyone in the city said nothing of me. He was merely a servant to the Garrison family, and he alone was enough to frighten an entire city! Imagine what the entire family can do!”

When Zoey and Syllas heard that, they both took a deep breath, for they had a new understanding of the Garrisons’ strength.

If their servant was powerful enough to control the entire South Hampton, it’s hard to imagine how much more powerful the Garrison family is.

“The King of Margo City was nothing to the Garrisons. He’s not even worthy of being their guard dog. That’s why I can’t leave this city.

For Levi’s sake, I insist on staying here!”

Emma then quickly got out of the car.

“You can’t do this, Emma! I know Levi. He’ll never give you up, not even if he has to go against the Garrisons or die trying. He won’t let you walk away like this.”

Zoey immediately stopped Emma, who pessimistically responded, "I don't want anything bad to happen to the both of you. It doesn't matter how hard we try, we'll never beat the Garrisons."

"That's fine with me. From the day I married Levi, I've sworn to be by his side no matter what. We will live and die together! Whatever comes, we'll get through it together!"

"Good girl! Levi is blessed to have a wife like you."

Emma was moved by her daughter-in-law's words.

When they reached South City, Zoey immediately brought Emma to barbershops and beauty salons in the malls to give her mother-in-law a makeover.

"Emma, we'll get the best doctors to treat you, and you'll be in the pink of health again," promised Zoey as she held Emma's arm.

The three were about to enter a barbershop when a car suddenly drove toward them.

Then, Meredith, Robert, and the others stepped out of the car.

"What are you doing, Zoey?" asked Meredith coldly.

"Grandpa, Grandma, let me introduce you to... "

Before Zoey could finish, Meredith interrupted, "There's no need for that. We know who this is. She is Levi's mother, isn't she?"

Meredith glanced at Emma with disgust.

She looks older than I'd thought.

Not only does she look dirty, rather, but she also reeks.

"Let go of her now! She's filthy!" commanded Meredith.

Chapter 935

Chapter 935 Stay Away From Her

Self-conscious, Emma lowered her head and dared not to look at the well-dressed Meredith.

Nearly thirty years of hardship had taken its toll on the woman. Emma went from being a rich girl to a lowly old woman.

Thinking about her son was the only thing that kept her alive.

Otherwise, she would have already killed herself.

Feeling inferior after what Meredith had said, Emma subconsciously moved her arm and kept her distance from Zoey.

“Grandma, this is Levi’s mother, but she’s also my... “

Meredith interrupted her granddaughter once again, “Are you trying to tell me that she’s your mother-in-law?”

You and Levi are divorced, so that man has nothing to do with you anymore, much less his filthy mother. Just look at how dirty she is! And the horrible smell! How can you be related to a beggar like her?”

Meredith’s words only further deprecated Emma’s self-esteem.

She knew that she was only a liability to her son and daughter-in-law, regardless of her identity or other aspects.

“Grandma! How can you say that?” exclaimed Zoey.

“Do you even know what you’re doing, Zoey? Have you no idea who you are? You’re the director of the Oriental Star Group, and your net worth is more than ten billion! You’re even in charge of a fifty-billion project! Let me also remind you that you’re the granddaughter of the prominent Black family.

How can you stand next to a beggar? To make things worse, she’s the mother of your Ex-husband! Are you not ashamed of yourself?”

Meredith did not give her granddaughter a chance to speak. “You’re a famous entrepreneur in this city.

People look at you as you walk down the street, and paparazzi stalk you. Imagine if they’d caught you walking around with a beggar. It’ll ruin both you and your company. Not to mention the Black family! Have you not thought of these consequences?”

“Your Grandma is right. Our family may not be of noble descent, but we’re respected in South City. We’ll let go of what happened between you and Levi, but we’ll never agree to you hanging out with his filthy mother! Now come with us!” chimed in Robert, who then forced his granddaughter into the car.

“You too, Sylas!”

Meredith pushed Sylas to the car herself, and there was nothing that Sylas could do about it.

After all, she did not want to argue with Meredith, so she secretly texted Levi.

“If I see you disturbing my granddaughter again, I’ll kick you out of South City, you beggar!” threatened Meredith before leaving.

Vroom!

Left alone in a strange place, Emma felt as though her surroundings were spinning around her.
