

My Dreamy Old Husband Chapter 807

Ever since Annabel's passing, Cooper rarely took any photos. Now that he was reunited with his daughter, he picked up the camera again and took Sophia's photos.

Just look at how beautiful his daughter was; she was absolutely adorable.

Holding his DSLR, Cooper snapped away at Sophia's every move. He could even take a dozen shots of Sophia picking strawberries.

After snapping photos of his daughter, it was his granddaughter's turn. He took close up shots of Carmen who was naturally photogenic and she effortlessly posed for the camera.

Meanwhile, Michael was also snapping pictures of his daughter.

She was truly the apple of his eye. To him, she was extremely lovable; everything she did was nothing but adorable.

After taking Carmen's photos, Michael also secretly snapped a few photos of Sophia.

Unfortunately for him, he was caught by Cooper. Immediately, Cooper strode over and blocked the shot, turning around to viciously glare at Michael.

Upon seeing that, Michael grunted in disdain.

What a hypocrite Cooper was. He was allowed to snap photos of Michael's daughter, but Michael was not allowed to take photos of Sophia?

Despite that, Michael still managed to sneak a few photos, all of which he was reluctant to delete.

Other than photos of Carmen, his photo album was filled with photos of his pets and Sophia.

He was unwilling to delete any of her photos. Not only did he get them printed and made an album, he also kept them on his phone.

At that moment, Sophia found an unusually good-looking strawberry and couldn't bring herself to eat it, so she handed it to Cooper. "Here you go, Dad."

Following her example, Carmen found a nice strawberry too and gave it to Michael. "Here you go, Daddy."

And so, the two fathers ate the strawberries happily.

Then, Sophia found another one and gave it to Michael. "This is for you, Michael."

Upon seeing this, Cooper was about to stop her when Carmen's dirt covered hands tugged at his pants. She was holding a flattened piece of strawberry when she said, "Grandpa, this is for you."

Being held back by Carmen, Cooper felt embarrassed to stop the couple. Reluctantly, he watched as Sophia handed a strawberry to Michael.

At that moment, Michael's hands were full. His left hand was holding the basket while his phone was in his right hand. Hence, he opened his mouth and waited to be fed. Sophia did not think anything of it and fed him.

Michael finished the strawberry in one bite and smiled at her.

Embarrassed, Sophia looked away. Their fingers had accidentally touched earlier and everytime she thought about his unusually soft touch, she instantly felt warm.

While she picked the strawberries, she would occasionally glance at him. When their eyes met, they would smile at each other.

On the other hand, the more Cooper watched their interactions, the more riled up he got. The whole time, Carmen's dirt covered hands were tugging at his pants, leaving two little dirty handprints on it. She pouted and asked, "Grandpa, were my strawberries no good?"

Cooper hurried to reply, "Of course they were! How could they not be?"

Looking at him, Carmen seemed unhappy. "So, why do you look unhappy?"

He immediately choked out a laugh. "I am happy! I'm laughing happily right now!"

Upon hearing this, Carmen smiled. She turned around and picked a strawberry that was not ripe, giving it to her grandfather and refused to let him leave unless he ate it. The whole while, her hands were tightly holding onto his pants.

Cooper grew more anxious as he watched Michael and Sophia flirt with each other. They were walking further and further away, while Carmen still refused to release him and insisted that Cooper ate the strawberry. Each strawberry tasted worse than the one before. Cooper did not look happy while he ate, which upset Carmen even more.

He felt awful.

Standing on the other side was Linus, who couldn't help but laugh as he shook his head.

Oh, Cooper...

After picking a strawberry and cleaning it, Linus cut it into smaller pieces with a knife and fed them to Carmen.

Pleased, Carmen chewed happily while she was still holding tightly onto Cooper.

After eating the strawberry, she looked up at Cooper excitedly. "Grandpa, let's go see the piggies!"

Cooper panicked as he watched Sophia and Michael, who looked like they were done picking and were about to leave the strawberry garden. Trying to pry Carmen's grip off his pants, he murmured, "Grandpa is busy right now. Why don't you go with Grand-uncle Linus?"

At once, Carmen pouted her lips. Her eyes brimmed with tears as she choked out, "Do you not love me anymore?"

Upon seeing his teary-eyed granddaughter, Cooper hurriedly bent down. "That's impossible. Of course I love you!"

Hanging her head, Carmen pouted as she sniffled quietly, her eyelashes wet from her tears.

“Then why won’t you see the piggies with me?”

Having no other choice, Cooper reluctantly agreed, “Fine. We’ll go see the piggies.”

It was only then did Carmen smile reluctantly.

What a grievance-filled little cutie!

As soon as she felt wronged, her tears would start flowing!

Carefully, Cooper led Carmen away, terrified that she would suddenly burst into tears.

Now that Cooper was distracted by Carmen, Michael was finally able to have some alone time with Sophia. However, they were still not alone as the bodyguard Cooper brought with him was still watching them.

Then, Michael tugged Sophia along and they ran toward the farmhouse.

As she ran, Sophia asked, “Michael, where are we going?”

Michael gave her a mysterious look. “You’ll know when we get there.”

There were many animals on the farm and as they ran, the animals were startled. Then, Michael entered a little hut that looked like it was where they kept the livestock. Meanwhile, Sophia waited at the door.

“Neigh!”

A loud and clear whine was heard. Just then, Michael walked out with a red-coated stallion; it looked magnificent.

“A horse!”

Instantly, Sophia’s eyes lit up and she rushed toward the horse. The horse lowered its head as she petted its soft coat.

Softly, Michael murmured, “She’s yours. Her name is Cherry. You’ve been keeping her at the ranch but I brought her here a few years ago. When you got her, she was just a pony but now, she’s all grown up.”

Upon hearing this, Sophia gently petted the horse. “Nice to meet you, Cherry.”

Cherry was extremely tame as it huffed at her.

Michael brought the protective gears and put them on for Sophia before helping her up Cherry. Then, Sophia spent the entire afternoon wandering everywhere with her horse.

With her memory lost, she had forgotten how to ride a horse. Despite that, she quickly got the hang of it with Michael’s guidance. He led the horse and they wandered around the farm.

They went to look at the fish pond that he commissioned for her, and then they went to see the greenhouse that was filled with vegetables. Next, they went to see the cornfield...

“Everything that is grown in this farm is intended to be consumed at home; they are all organic and free of pollution. When we can’t finish them, we’ll sell them to others. Under Asco International, the crops are branded as organic and we supply them to areas where the wealthy people live. There is another larger industrialized pollution-free farm in a more remote area. The land is bigger and we export agricultural produce abroad every year. We’ve also industrialized the Edwards Family’s traditional winemaking, pickled vegetables, and braised pork businesses. These were all your ideas and the yearly revenue is extraordinary. Not only that, we also own a holiday villa resort nearby.”

After talking about the business, he pointed to the cornfield as he casually added an interesting remark without batting an eyelid. “Also, that is where we conceived Carmen.”
