

Sir, You Don't Know Your Wife Chapter 966

The host started speaking on stage. "Judges, it's your turn to grade Janet Jackson."

As soon as they heard that, the judges slowly wrote down a score on the whiteboard in front of them. Meanwhile, the audience held their breaths nervously as they looked at the screen while Janet, who stood on the clinical stage, merely looked calm.

After seconds ticked by, the score was finally revealed on the screen. When everyone saw the score on the screen, they were shocked. After all, it was out of their expectations that a substitute player, who had never joined the training before the competition, could get full points for the third clinical round.

What does it mean to get full points? It means that one's standard is even higher than that of a professional doctor! Janet, though, just scored full points right in front of us! The audience could not even describe what they were feeling at this moment.

With a pale look on her face, Melissa narrowed her eyes when she looked at the score on the screen. All she felt was a strong surge of resentment. After all, she did not expect that Janet was so skilled at stitching. No; I can't lose to someone from the Traditional Medical Research team! I can also score full points!

Melissa bit her lips slightly as she clenched her fists. She shot a cold glance at Janet, who was sitting on a chair.

When Janet felt the cold stare, she accepted it impassively with slightly narrowed eyes.

On the other hand, in the lounge of another contestant, Sharon's beautiful eyebrows knitted together into a frown. "What's going on here? Full points?"

How is this possible? Janet hasn't even learned the clinical techniques! How could she have gotten full points? Sharon felt as though her heart was in her throat. Because of the agitation, her stomach started hurting again.

As sweat dripped down her forehead, Black Python happened to see it when he turned around. "What's wrong? Does it still hurt?"

Sharon nodded. "It's alright. I'll be fine after a rest." She was busy keeping up with the groundbreaking news that she received one after another. What I wouldn't give to watch the entire competition at the arena in person! After thinking about it, she suddenly asked Black Python, "Has Janet learned medicine before?"

Black Python's thoughts were in disarray when he replied, "I can't tell you that right now."

Sharon froze for a few seconds before she hummed in disappointment.

Looking at her, Black Python mumbled hesitantly, "Unless..."

"Unless what?" She blinked at him.

His Adam's apple bobbed as he spoke in a muffled voice. "Unless you're mine." Unless she's a part of the Lowry Family.

"Unless you're mine?" Sharon repeated in a low tone. I'm his? After she understood what he meant, her fair face suddenly blushed.

Black Python cleared his throat and glanced at her flushed face before he averted his gaze. Meanwhile, Sharon clutched her chest, feeling as though she was short of breath.

At this moment, Melissa also finished her clinical round. Truth was, she was not satisfied with her performance in the third round. After all, it was hard not to be affected after seeing Janet's earlier performance. Hence, she made a few minor mistakes in the few stations. She knew that it was highly likely she had lost the third round. However, she still walked on stage as though she might also receive full points.

When the judges showed her score on the huge screen, her heart sank immediately. She got 95 points in total, which was five points less than Janet. Even though 95 was already a high score to others, Melissa was used to getting 98 points in her usual training. Hence, getting 95 points was definitely out of her expectations.

"Melissa Rocher has gotten 95 points and she remains in second for now."

Sir, You Don't Know Your Wife Chapter 967

With that, the crowd booed.

"No way! Logically speaking, Melissa's standard is above 98 points."

"Precisely. 95 points is obviously lower than her usual standard."

"Maybe she's affected by Janet's score."

"I think so, but don't forget that the test results are not disclosed yet. We still don't know who the winner is."

"But Janet was also great during the second quick answer round. I bet the test in the first round was not difficult for her."

"Well, we don't know about that. I heard that she submitted the test paper in 15 minutes."

"What? In 15 minutes? Did she do it too quickly or did she not know how to answer?"

"Those are questions of the SSSSS level and there are 50 of them in total. Even God can't finish the paper in 15 minutes!"

"Yeah; I bet she didn't know the answers."

"Gosh, Melissa said that it was pretty easy, but it seems like the final winner is still unknown at this point."

And so, the third round—the clinical round—ended quickly with the audience discussing among themselves.

As the test results from the first round were not ready yet, the winner was yet to be announced.

The host then said professionally, "With that, the third round of this competition—the clinical round—has come to an end. We will announce the winner half an hour later."

With that, all the contestants went back to their respective lounges, while the audience took their phones out as they waited for half an hour.

When Melissa got down from the stage, she saw Sheldon walking over to her.

He was not surprised with Janet's result, but Melissa's results shocked him.

Raising his eyebrows, Sheldon said with an impassive expression, "I thought you could be at least equal with her, Miss Rocher."

With her arms crossed in front of her chest, Melissa stayed silent for a moment before letting out a cold chuckle. "Such competitions can't tell much about your true skills."

After all, this was not an actual scenario. If there were two similar patients in front of them, Melissa was confident that she would not be weaker than Janet.

After all, she had such exposure since young, while Janet was a so-called 'divine doctor' who appeared out of nowhere.

"By the way, Mr. Fuller, I also know how to treat your father."

It's not just me but everyone in the Rocher Family knows that too.

After Janet treated such a small disease, they crown her as a 'divine doctor'?

Ha!

Sheldon merely shook his head without saying another word.

Melissa still doesn't know the huge gap between her and Janet.

For people like her who's unwilling to accept defeat, I'm afraid she might see Janet as a competitor in the future.

"Take a rest. The results from the test in the first round will be announced soon," Sheldon said as he raised his head to look at her.

Melissa nodded and turned around to leave, feeling a trace of dissatisfaction and arrogance deep down.

Meanwhile, at the Committee of International Medicine Competition, the person who marked the paper already entered all the points of the tests into the system.

He did not know the names of the contestants, because they had been sealed tightly so that no one would change the scores.

In no time, the results were soon calculated.

There were a total of 11 contestants who participated in the first round and Sharon managed to score 89 points. However, her marks were not recorded into the system, and so she was not included in the ranks.

The computer soon revealed the marks one by one, from lowest to highest.

The lowest mark was 75, followed by a few contestants who got over 80 marks. Up until the eighth contestant, the results were still around 80 marks. So far, there wasn't anyone who broke the 90-mark threshold yet.

Sir, You Don't Know Your Wife Chapter 968

The people who marked the test papers exchanged glances.

"What is the highest mark that you have encountered?"

"87," one of them replied calmly. "What about you?"

"98," another replied.

The first person who asked them the question then said, "The highest mark that I've encountered is a 100 marks."

With that, the jaws of the other's dropped incredulously.

Full marks?

It's a SSSSS-level paper, yet there is someone who got full marks?

After all, the questions were designed by a few different medical research centers and those were the most difficult questions.

I can't believe that someone has actually gotten full marks! Who is that genius?

However, the person had not finished speaking. "There's another person who got 99 marks."

99 marks?

Just one mark shy of getting full marks!

The deducted mark was most likely from a mistake in the multiple-choice section.

However, whether it was 99 or 100 marks, all of them still felt the same shock after seeing it.

After all, these were the highest marks in history.

"Guess who got full marks?" one of them stood up and asked.

"I'm not too sure, but I'm guessing Melissa either got 99 or 100."

"Yeah. After she finished the test, she said that it was quite simple."

"Tsk! Don't forget that this is the type of questions she's most familiar with!"

"What about that Janet Jackson?"

"It's hard to say; no matter what, she's going to surprise all of us."

"Exactly! During the third round when she was performing the stitches, I even had the illusion that she's an actual doctor."

"Indeed. Her skills are really solid; I wonder if she's learned that before."

"I really want to know their results. Unfortunately, we still don't know at the moment."

"There's half an hour left."

"Yes; let's wait for a while longer!"

Meanwhile, Janet walked directly to Sharon's lounge after she finished the three rounds.

When she arrived, Abby and Summer were already there.

Upon seeing Janet walk into the room, Abby walked to her with all smiles.

"What are you smiling at?" Janet stretched out her hand to pinch Abby's face.

Pleasantly shocked, Abby grabbed her arms and nudged her. "Janet, you are awesome! You were perfect in the last round when you performed the stitches!"

Janet curved her lips into a smile but she walked directly to Sharon without speaking another word.

"What's wrong?" Janet looked at her. "I guess it doesn't hurt anymore."

Sharon smiled and shook her head. "I'm fine now."

Usually, when she had gastroenteritis, she would only feel better after being given an intravenous drip.

She wondered about the medicine Janet gave her. It's actually more effective than the medicine given by the major hospitals.

"By the way, why are you here?" Sharon blinked and asked the question that had always been on her mind.

"Didn't Black Python tell you?" Janet thought he would tell them her identity, but Sharon merely frowned in confusion. "Tell me what?"

After thinking about it, Janet smiled. "Nothing. There's a sudden change in my work schedule, so I came over without having the opportunity to tell you first."

With that, the three girls nodded as they finally understood the situation.

At this moment, someone suddenly knocked on the door.

Abby ran over to open it and she was shocked to see who it was. "Professor Fontaine, why are you here?"

He pushed the door open and said with an agitated expression on his face, "I have something to tell Miss Jackson."

Abby nodded and let him in.

Unable to suppress his excitement, he quickly walked over to Janet. "I've heard that the highest mark this time is a full score."

Sir, You Don't Know Your Wife Chapter 969

"I see," Janet replied nonchalantly as she sat on the couch.

I see?

How can she be so calm?

Hence, Dylan felt obligated to explain the rules. "If Melissa is the person who gets full marks, the entire results of the competition would be overturned and they would have to decide the winner between you and her."

Even though Janet won the second and the third round, getting full marks was considered the highest in history. If Melissa broke this record, the judges might make her the winner after considering a few other factors. On top of that, she was from the Rocher Family.

Still sitting on the couch, Janet drawled, "Whatever. I won the second and the third round anyway—at least I won't be the last."

Even though I simply answered the tests, it shouldn't be a big problem based on my experience.

On the other hand, Dylan thought to himself, Did she just say 'whatever'?

"What do you mean by 'whatever'?" He thumped his fist on his chest as he cried out emotionally, "We have already reached this point. If we can't get first place, everything will be in vain!"

Dylan had hoped that Janet could be the winner so that she could be published in the rising star section of the International Medical Journal. Apart from that, she would also have the opportunity to complete a surgery with a professional doctor.

Seeing him becoming so worked up, Abby could not help but walk over and advise, "Professor Fontaine, please calm down. The results aren't out yet so we don't know who got full marks."

He also wanted to look on the bright side, but when he heard that there was another person who got 99 marks, he thought that everything was over.

After he remembered Melissa's comment after she finished the test—"it was pretty easy"—and Janet, who only took 15 minutes to complete the test, he predicted that it was likely for Melissa to be the person who got full marks.

On top of that, the WSSSSS level questions were Melissa's strength—the harder the questions, the easier it was for her to answer them.

She is such a genius!

Janet's eyes narrowed but she remained silent.

At this moment, someone else knocked on the door.

Since it was slightly ajar, the person pushed it open and entered the room. "There are two minutes left until the results are announced. Miss Jackson, please be prepared to go on stage."

Janet hummed in agreement after glancing at that person.

Meanwhile, Dylan merely heaved a sigh and he was even planning to leave the competition arena earlier.

If Melissa didn't participate in the competition this year, perhaps Janet stands a chance of winning.

What a good opportunity that she has just missed!

At six in the evening, there was a huge crowd in the hall of the International Medicine Competition.

The results were already calculated and the ten contestants walked on stage one after another.

The host then walked onto the stage slowly and spoke in a low, steady voice. "Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to the last event of today, which is the announcement of the winner of the International Medicine Competition this year. The individual results are already out."

With that, everyone's eyes were glued to the huge screen in front of them.

As the black screen lit up, every second felt like an eternity to all of them.

The results were arranged from the highest to lowest, and Dylan breathed heavily as he eyed the first and the second place.

Based on Janet's performance, she would either come in first or second.

The last seven positions were already announced and their marks varied between 70 and 80.

The contestants who had achieved such results were already quite pleased with themselves. After all, usually it was already more than difficult to even pass the SSSSS level questions.

After that, the top three positions were announced.

The huge screen slowly showed the number 98.

When everyone saw this, they opened their mouths in shock.

“What the hell? 98 marks? This means that only two marks were deducted!”

Sir, You Don't Know Your Wife Chapter 970

“Gosh! The third position has already gotten 98 marks. What about the second and the first place?”

“Oh my goodness—don't tell me that they each got 99 and 100 marks!”

“One hundred marks? That's impossible!”

“Exactly! The person who can get 100 is a genius; the professors and lecturers from Markovia's Medical Research Institute can't get full marks as well.”

“That's right. The highest mark until now is 99 marks, and even that broke the competition record.”

“Right now, only Janet and Melissa's results are not announced. Perhaps they will either come in first or second?”

“If Janet scores full marks this round, she is the complete winner of today's competition!”

“Wow! This is too exciting!”

The audience talked among each other excitedly.

Similarly, Melissa was also very nervous.

SSSSS level questions were her forte. Since she already lost to Janet for two rounds, she could not afford to lose this round.

Apart from that, she had done well in the first round, so she believed that she would be the winner.

Before the screen displayed their results, the host suddenly asked, "Only the first and second places are not announced yet. What are your thoughts, Melissa and Janet?"

Of course, the host was trying to create suspense.

Melissa was the first to answer. She took the microphone over and said calmly, "I don't find the first round difficult at all. Apart from that, the positions are not that important anyway. What's more important is to shine in the international medicine field in the long run."

She was quite a capable person. With the support from the Rocher Family, she was not aiming to become a divine doctor at all; instead, she wanted to be an improved version of the divine doctor.

The host nodded in satisfaction before passing the microphone to Janet, who merely stood there lazily.

"Whatever. It's all the same," she said simply.

Upon hearing that, the audience exchanged surprised gazes.

"Seems like Janet knows her results already."

"Yeah! After all, the questions in the first round are Melissa's forte. Getting 99 marks is already good enough."

"That's right. Even if she doesn't have the opportunity to be on the cover of the International Medicine Magazine, there's always next year."

"Exactly! After all, Melissa is the fifth-generation descendant of the Rocher Family and she grew up in this kind of environment from a young age. To her, it's not difficult at all."

"You're right. In fact, Melissa is probably Janet's senior in the medicine field."

At this moment, the lights on stage were lit again.

However, everyone lost their interest in knowing the results. After all, they could guess who the winner was from the conversation just now.

As they slowly shifted their gaze to the screen, the chattering audience suddenly fell into dead silence.

The entire hall was quiet for a few minutes and even the host on stage forgot his lines.

It was only after a while that there was an uproar from the audience.

“What the f*ck? Melissa got second place?”

This exclamation completely detonated the atmosphere and the audience exploded.

“What the hell? If Melissa got second place, does that mean Janet got first place?”

“Holy cow! If Janet got first place, it means that she got full marks!”

“Full marks? Janet is the one who got full marks?”

“Oh my goodness; tell me I’m not hallucinating!”

“The substitute contestant who hasn’t even undergone proper training got full marks?”

“Yeah! The fifth-generation descendant of the Rocher Family lost to a substitute? This is unbelievable!”

As for Dylan who was among the audience, he was beyond shocked.

He then looked at Janet who stood on stage. She was calm and indifferent, as if she already knew her results.