

Mistaking a Magnate for a Male Escort

chapter 821 - 825

"I came home to pack and get my travel documents. Something came up last minute, so I need to go on a trip," replied Zachary as he stroked Robbie's tiny head. After that, he instructed, "Go grab a drink. I need to discuss something with your great-grandpa."

"Okay," said Robbie. Then he slid off his chair and added, "Great-grandpa, let's continue playing later, alright?"

"Sure," replied Henry, who was gazing adoringly at Robbie.

The little boy then left with Fifi in his arms.

Ben closed the door to the study room and waited outside.

"Where are you headed to all of a sudden?" asked Henry.

"I need to go to Phoenix City. Something happened at base," replied Zachary nonchalantly. "Mr. Blackwood came to me earlier, and I gave him some hints. But he will still have to deal with the rest on his own."

"Okay, let's monitor the situation from afar for now," said Henry. Instead of pressing on, he asked, "Did Cynthia ask to see you?"

"No, she is a rational woman and probably won't come to me for something like this," said Zachary.

Those were his heartfelt words.

"You should appreciate her. Women like her are hard to come by," advised Henry while rolling his eyes at Zachary. He then added, "Since everything is settled here, I should head back to M Nation too."

Zachary finally got the old man to say those words. Over the past two days, Zachary had deliberately made things seem ambiguous with Cynthia in the hot spring resort. He even shared the same room with her for two nights, and it was likely that Cain and Kyle had shared that information with Henry.

Moreover, I kept praising Cynthia when I came back and seemed genuinely fond of her, so Grandpa probably bought it and decided to head back to M Nation.

"It's good that you're heading back. H City's weather is more humid, and you've always been unaccustomed to it. I'll take the kids to M Nation to visit you once I have settled everything here," said Zachar, acting like he was a little hesitant to part.

"Yeah. I'll head back once you return," informed Henry while nodding. "Since you won't be home the next few days, I'm worried that no one will be around for the kids."

"It's fine, actually," said Zachary, trying his best to sound natural. "After all, Mrs. Rawlston and Raina are here to help, and we have tons of maid."

"So what?" scolded Henry while glaring at him. "They need at least someone who is related to them by blood. Only when there's family around will they feel safe."

"I will be back in a couple of days," insisted Zachary nervously. He was truly worried that Henry would change his mind and decide to stay. "The kids are old enough now, so they'll be fine even if they're on their own for a few days."

"Why do I get the feeling that you want me to leave?" said Henry as he glared over unhappily.

"That is not true—"

"Then it's settled," interrupted Henry immediately. "I will return to M Nation once you're done with your work. Honestly, do you think I enjoy being here? The air up here is thin, and it's so humid that my old bones keep aching."

Zachary was secretly exasperated. Still, he had no choice but to accept that arrangement. He took comfort in the fact that Henry planned on leaving after he returned from his trip, though. Let's hope he won't go back on his words...

Charlotte is not in the country anyway, and it's only for a few days, so things should be fine.

After coming to that conclusion, Zachary nodded and said, "Alright, but don't wear yourself out, okay? Let Cain drop off the kids so you can rest well."

"That is not possible! I'm already here, so naturally, I will drop them off in person," insisted Henry stubbornly. "It's settled. You should go now."

Zachary turned around and left. After that, he went to Robbie's room and knocked on the door, calling out, "Robbie, it's me."

"Hang on, Daddy."

Robbie was playing with the black gold ring while sitting in front of his desk. He knew that his father would be leaving for a business trip and that some bodyguards at home would be going with him. Great-grandpa might return to M Nation too, and the Triplets Reconnaissance Team will be free to carry out Project Mommy.

Robbie quickly kept the ring away and rushed over to open the door. "Daddy!"

"Can I come in?" asked Zachary with a smile.

"Of course," replied Robbie as he moved aside and gestured for Zachary to enter.

When Zachary walked in, he saw the familiar decorations and the family photo hanging on the wall. The sight stung his heart a little...

chapter 822

That was the photo they took when Zachary and Charlotte got married on the beach. Besides the family of five, Fifi and Mrs. Berry were also there, so it was a complete family of seven, and they were smiling happily at the camera.

Ever since that day, the family photo had been placed in every room in the house.

Henry tried to have those photos removed from the walls, but all three kids protested, so he had no choice but to give that idea up.

Kids their age were usually forgetful, but the kids remembered every moment they shared with their mommy and Mrs. Berry...

"Daddy, do you miss Mommy?" asked Robbie as he followed Zachary's gaze to the photo.

"Yeah," murmured Zachary while sitting down. Having a tall figure, he seemed uncomfortable when he sat down on that small sofa, so he said, "This sofa is too small. We should switch this out for a bigger one."

"Daddy, you say that every time you come into my room," replied Robbie.

He later got a drink for his dad.

Zachary stroked Robbie's tiny head. "I have to go on a business trip soon, so I will be away for a few days. Be good at home, okay? Your great-grandpa will take care of you three, so you can talk to him if you need anything."

"Isn't Great-grandpa going back to M Nation?" asked Robbie, frowning.

"He will leave once Daddy returns," replied Zachary before reaching out to pinch the kid's cheek lightly. "Why do I get the feeling that you want your great-grandpa to go back to M Nation too?"

"Hmm... I think the word 'too' is used very appropriately here," said Robbie, who spoke like he was an adult.

Zachary laughed aloud.

Robbie was a lot like his father. They even spoke in the same tone, and although neither spoke much, they always got right to the point when they did.

"I should go," said Zachary as he stood up.

"Okay," replied Robbie as he nodded. "Don't worry, Daddy. I will take care of Jamie and Ellie."

"You're a kid too, so just take care of yourself. Leave the adults to take care of them," Zachary said with affection. Caressing Robbie's tiny head, he added, "I would like to see you as carefree as Jamie and Ellie."

"Thank you, Daddy," replied Robbie. He was a little touched by that gesture.

Zachary then got up to leave. When he reached the door, Robbie called out suddenly, "Daddy!"

"Yes?" asked Zachary after he paused and turned to the kid.

"They say that you are in a relationship with Ms. Cynthia. Is that true?" Robbie blurted while staring intently at him.

"No," answered Zachary. Although he didn't elaborate further, he was firm when he added simply, "I only love your mommy."

"I'm glad to hear that," said Robbie while sighing a breath of relief. "You'll be really happy if Mommy comes back, won't you?"

"Of course," replied Zachary without hesitation. A mesmerizing grin crept up on his lips, and his eyes shone with hope when he added, "Your mommy will come back to us soon..."

"Yes, she will," said Robbie firmly. "And our family will be reunited soon."

Zachary sensed that something was amiss. Robbie seemed strangely confident and firm when he said those words... Did he discover something?

"Daddy, you should hurry up," reminded Robbie. "Mr. Ben and Mr. Bruce are waiting for you."

"Yeah, alright," said Zachary. He crouched down and hugged the kid before leaving.

Robbie watched Zachary's leaving figure as the latter walked away. Daddy, I will definitely find Mommy and bring her back...

"Robbie, I'm going to go pick Jamie and Ellie up from school now. Would you like to come along?" asked Henry, who was wheeled into the room by Spencer.

"Nah, I should prepare for my science class later."

Robbie checked his watch. It's already past two in the afternoon.

"Alright," said Henry, who didn't think much of it. He simply advised, "Then be good and stay at home, okay? We will be back soon."

"Got it. Don't worry," replied Robbie obediently. "Let me walk you downstairs."

"Okay. Thank you, Robbie."

Henry was delighted about it. Over the past few days, Robbie had been much nicer to him, and it seemed that the gap between the two of them was bridged. It's as if we've gone back to the good old days...

Henry prayed that the harmony would last forever.

Zachary was about to get into the car when he noticed that Henry's car had pulled up as well. Right then, Spencer wheeled Henry out while Robbie stayed at the side.

"Where is everyone going?" asked Zachary.

"I'm picking Jamie and Ellie up from school," said Henry.

"Isn't it a little too early? It's only a little after two," said Zachary after he checked his watch.

"There's an open class today, so I thought I'd go listen in. Besides, I can take this opportunity to interact with the principal as well," explained Henry, who cared deeply about the kids' education. "It'll be time to pick them up once the class is over."

"Alright," said Zachary. He helped Henry into the car before crouching down to pick Robbie up, intending to carry him into the car. However, Robbie informed, "I'm not going. I have a science class this afternoon."

"Okay, then stay home and be good," said Zachary. He stroked the kid's head before leaving.

"Bye, Daddy. Bye, Great-grandpa," said Robbie while waving goodbye to the others.

"Robbie," called out Henry after he rolled down the window and popped his head out. "If Jamie and Ellie want to go to Fairytale Land after class, I will send someone to take you there to meet up with them."

“Okay,” answered Robbie while he watched everyone leave.

As the two cars slowly drove out of the place, Robbie scanned his surroundings and noted that over half of the subordinates were gone. The security is not as tight now, so this is the perfect opportunity to carry out the mission.

He then got back to his room and sent a text message to Jamie’s smartwatch: Text me after you get off class.

Then, Robbie started prepping.

The eagle destroyed Robbie’s second mechanical dove the last time around, so Robbie invented a brand new weapon—the multipurpose miniature camera!

The multipurpose miniature camera was the size of a bean and was placed on Fifi’s head. There was a software that linked the device to Robbie’s phone and shared the video in real-time. All Robbie had to do was open the application, and he could see everything the camera captured.

To top it all off, the multipurpose miniature camera could turn around and had no blind spots. It was not restricted to capturing videos from a fixed spot.

Robbie placed Fifi on his study desk and whispered to it, “Fifi, we’re counting on you to locate mommy.”

“Mommy! Mommy!” called out Fifi. It seemed excited upon hearing that word.

“Go!” ordered Robbie as he opened the window and let Fifi out.

Fifi flapped its wings and flew away.

The bodyguards saw the bird, but they paid no attention to it.

Robbie opened the application on his phone right away. Good, Fifi is flying toward the Northridge region.

I made the right choice to stay home the past few days to train Fifi and get it accustomed to the navigation function on the camera. If everything goes well, it will now follow the device’s lead to Northridge...

Robbie was a little excited about it. His new invention was a success, and he planned to slip out of the house later to go to Northridge. Who knows? Maybe Mommy is right there!

Robbie was scheming when his smartwatch suddenly vibrated. Seeing that it was a call from Jamie, Robbie quickly answered, "Hello?"

"Robbie, were you looking for me?" asked Jamie. He was in a noisy spot, and it was obvious that he was still in the classroom.

"Find a quiet spot and listen carefully," instructed Robbie.

"Hang on," replied Jamie. He knew that something serious had happened when he heard that tone, so he quickly sneaked to the top floor and said, "There's no one here. You can speak freely now."

"Daddy is out on a business trip, and Great-grandpa has gone to pick you two up. I am initiating Project Mommy now..."

"On your own? Take Ellie and I with you!"

"Of course we're doing this together. That is why I am assigning tasks to the two of you now."

"Cool, alright. Tell me," said Jamie excitedly.

"When Great-grandpa comes to pick the two of you up, tell him that you guys want to go to Fairytale Land. He will make a call to have someone send me over. Then I will sneak away while I'm on my way. You and Ellie are to stall Great-grandpa for as long as you can. Do NOT let him come back or send his men to look for me. Understand?"

chapter 824

"Uh..." blurted Jamie, who was slightly stunned. He nodded and replied after a pause, "I got it, but we're not really doing anything. You're the one carrying out all the tasks."

"It's called teamwork," replied Robbie in a serious tone. "You've watched spy movies, so you should know that this is a tactical move."

"Alright, but be careful since you're on your own," said Jamie, who was still a little worried.

"I'm not on my own. I have Fifi with me. Have you forgotten that it is a member of our team too?" reminded Robbie. As he spoke, he kept an eye on Fifi through the application.

"Oh, yeah," said Jamie. He recalled that, on the day they formed the group, Fifi had put its leg in when they put their hands together, signifying that it joined the team as well.

"Remember to stall Great-grandpa. Otherwise, I won't have time to carry out my task. Understand?" instructed Robbie.

"Got it... Robbie, please be careful."

"Don't worry. I will be fine."

Robbie reverted his attention back to his phone after he hung up. Fifi couldn't fly as fast as the mechanical dove could because it had been raised indoor. They had only recently let it out of the house, which improved its flying, but it was still not fast enough. Given its speed, it would take some time before Fifi reached Northridge.

That's fine, though. It will take Great-grandpa some time to get to the school, and I still have to wait for the bodyguards to come and get me. Only then will I get the opportunity to sneak to Northridge. Otherwise, I won't even be able to leave the villa.

Knock! Knock! Someone knocked on the door at that moment. The maid reported, "The science teacher is here."

"Please lead him to the study room. I will be there soon," said Robbie.

"Okay,"

The maid left after that.

Robbie then sent Fifi a voice message. "Fifi, take a break if you're tired. You don't need to hurry over. Safety first, okay?"

“Okay. Okay.”

It had been a while since Fifi flew that far, but it knew that it was assigned an important mission. That was why it persisted and kept flying.

Now that Robbie gave it permission to rest, the parrot felt relieved. It landed on a huge tree and rested there.

The new device could record videos from any angle and share them on Robbie’s phone in real-time. Other than that, it also had a navigation system and a communication system.

After doing some calculations, Robbie deduced that it would take Fifi some time to reach Northridge, so he took his phone with him into the study room for his class.

“Mr. Robbie, phones are not allowed in class,” reminded the teacher with a smile.

“I am waiting for an important call,” insisted Robbie. “It won’t affect the lesson. I promise.”

“Alright then, let us begin.”

Having said that, the teacher started teaching the lesson.

At that moment, Henry had reached the school. He initially wanted to listen in on the open class discreetly, but the school discovered his presence. That prompted the principal and the directors to come and welcome him in person.

However, Henry didn’t want to affect the class, so he had no choice but to leave the classroom.

The class ended just as he left. When Jamie and Ellie exited the classroom, they saw Henry there and ran over excitedly. “Great-grandpa, what brought you here?”

“Jamie! Ellie!” said Henry. A huge grin crept up on his face as soon as he saw them, answering, “I came to pick you up from school. Let’s go to Fairytale Land for dinner. What do you say?”

“That sounds great!” replied Jamie and Ellie simultaneously.

"Then I'll have someone take Robbie there to meet us," said Henry before he signaled with his hand.

With that, Spencer called the bodyguards at home.

"Isn't it a little too early?" asked Jamie. The timeline was preponed by at least an hour, and he realized that it might affect Robbie's plans, so he quickly suggested, "Let's go get Robbie a little later."

"It's fine. You guys can leave school earlier today. The last class is just playtime anyway," informed the principal warmly.

chapter 825

"Alright then, let's leave earlier today," said Henry. He stroked Jamie's head and continued, "Your daddy is on a business trip, and Robbie is probably bored at home now. Let's leave earlier and meet him at Fairytale Land."

"Oh, okay," murmured Jamie. He knew it wasn't appropriate for him to press on, so he changed tactics and said, "Let me go get my backpack."

"Jamie, help me take my backpack as well," requested Ellie. She didn't know that they were already assigned a task and that the mission was ongoing.

"Your backpack is so heavy. Go get it yourself," Jamie declined. "Come on. We'll go together." Jamie needed an excuse to drag Ellie away.

Ellie harrumphed and frowned in annoyance before complaining, "You are so mean."

"We'll get the teachers to bring them over for you," suggested the principal immediately.

"There's no need for that. Let them do it on their own," refused Henry grimly. "The Nacht family members were taught to always accomplish their tasks by themselves. Please don't give the kids special treatment. Just treat them like they are normal kids."

"Understood," replied the principal while nodding.

"You may get back to work. There's no need to keep us company," instructed Henry when he saw the other kids peeking over. "The other kids and their parents are staring, and this will affect everyone negatively."

"That is..." said the principal as he turned to the directors, who exchanged glances with him.

"I have some questions for the kids' teacher, but everyone else should go," instructed Henry sternly.

"Understood," said the principal. Everyone bowed politely before leaving in a hurry.

Henry had his men push him in his wheelchair to the other side so that he wouldn't affect the other kids and their parents. After that, he asked the teacher about how Jamie and Ellie were doing at school.

At that moment, Jamie dragged Ellie to the side and shared Robbie's plan with her.

Hearing that got Ellie to turn pale, and she said, "Isn't it a little too dangerous for Robbie to carry out the mission on his own? There's a scary eagle in Northridge. What if it attacks Robbie like it did the last time?"

"I'm worried about that too, but Robbie already set everything in motion, so all we can do is support him. If we don't, the entire plan will go up in smokes," replied Jamie with a frown. He sounded worried as well.

"But..."

"Don't worry. The eagle was injured the last time we encountered it, and its injuries seemed grave, so I don't think Robbie will be in any danger," cooed Jamie. "All we need to do now is work with him so that he is not taking a risk in vain."

"Okay, then," replied Ellie while nodding. She then reminded, "The plan is preponed, so you should call Robbie and tell him about it. I'll go grab my backpack and keep Great-grandpa distracted."

"Okay," said Jamie. Then he quickly called Robbie.

Robbie was distracted in class that day. He would check on Fifi every now and then by peeking at his phone.

That idiot is actually resting in a bird's nest and is on the verge of falling asleep!

Robbie frowned in exasperation, utterly speechless. I knew it. That stinking bird is completely unreliable!

Just then, Robbie's smartwatch rang. The call was from Jamie.

"Robbie, what are you doing?" said the teacher while frowning at him.

"My baby brother called," answered Robbie as he showed her his smartwatch. "He doesn't usually call me at this hour. Something important must've happened. I should take this."

"Alright, then," the teacher agreed and paused the class.

Robbie walked to the washroom to pick up the call. "Hi, Jamie."

"Great-grandpa is getting us out of class earlier today, Robbie. It's likely that he has already sent his men over to take you to Fairytale Land. You will have to bring your plan forward," informed Jamie, who deliberately spoke softly as he was worried about someone else overhearing him.

"I got it. We'll proceed in accordance with our original plan," replied Robbie calmly.

"Be careful. If you come across that eagle, just scream for help. Don't try to be a hero..."

"Relax... It's wounded, so it can't hurt me," replied Robbie nonchalantly. "You don't need to worry about me, okay? Just play your part well."

"Okay."

After hanging up the call, Robbie left the washroom. Cain happened to knock on the door at that moment and informed, "Mr. Nacht has instructed me to take you to Fairytale Land to meet up with them."
