Chapter 1241 Let Me Try My Luck

This thought made Natalie stiffen and anxiousness coursed through her blood.

She was worried whether the housekeeper would go and take a look at Jacqueline.

She sat on the steps and watched all the movements on the ground floor, wanting to see if the housekeeper would go upstairs to look for Jacqueline.

Luckily, even after five minutes, despite Jacqueline's screams, the housekeeper did not go upstairs.

Clearly, the housekeeper had listened to her and ignored Jacqueline.

"That's great!" Natalie clasped her hands together and smiled excitedly.

Thankfully I had the foresight to tell that to the housekeeper.

Otherwise, Jacqueline would know by now that her cell phone was gone.

Natalie looked at the cell phone with her lips tightly pursed together.

No matter what, she could not allow anyone to notice or to take this cell phone away. This was her only lifeline right now.

Now she was just waiting for Jacqueline to calm down. When she was done with her tantrum and was asleep, she would sneak into her room and use Jacqueline's finger to unlock the phone.

I just hope that she doesn't have insomnia or that her eyesight doesn't recover that quickly. Otherwise, I will be waiting for nothing!

Hence, Natalie kept waiting by the steps. One hour passed. Two hours passed.

Probably due to fatigue, Jacqueline finally stopped screaming and thrashing things around.

I guess she should be asleep next?

I'll just wait a little longer. Just a little longer.

Natalie told herself that. No matter how cold and uncomfortable the wait was, she was going to persist!

She then waited another three hours.

She glanced at the phone which showed that it was already two in the morning.

Jacqueline should be asleep by now?

With that thought in mind, Natalie decided to go down to take a look.

She stood up and rubbed her back which had become sore from all the sitting. Then, she removed her shoes once again and went barefoot down the steps.

When she arrived at Jacqueline's door, her heart could not stop beating as if it was about to jump out of her throat. She felt exactly like she did when she took the cell phone.

Alas, this was the first time she had to do something as sneaky as this. There was no way she would not be anxious or nervous.

"No, don't panic Natalie. If you panic you'll screw things up!" Natalie placed her hand on her chest gently and warned herself not to be anxious.

It seemed to work. Natalie took a deep breath and eventually calmed down. She placed her hand on the doorknob and turned it slightly.

Because the housekeeper did not lock the room and Jacqueline could not see, the door was definitely not locked from the inside.

Indeed, Natalie turned the knob and the door was immediately open.

A bright light shone through the gap. Holding her breath, Natalie pushed the door open slowly.

This little action took her almost two minutes.

She was afraid that if she pushed the door too quickly, it would make a sound.

The door was completely open but Natalie did not rush in. Instead, she stood observing at the door as she wanted to see if Jacqueline was fast asleep.

She looked toward the bed and saw Jacqueline lying there with a blanket over her. Her eyes were closed and she looked asleep.

Natalie smiled to herself at that sight.

All right, Jacqueline is really asleep!

This is really an opportunity sent by god!

Natalie released the knob and tiptoed toward the bed.

With the thick carpet, she made no sound at all with her footsteps.

Natalie sped up a little and reached the bedside in a matter of about ten seconds.

Then, Natalie took out the cell phone. Instead of rushing to grab Jacqueline's hand to unlock the phone, she continued observing Jacqueline to see if she would notice someone standing by her bedside.

Chapter 1242 Pick Up The Phone

If anyone noticed that Natalie was there, Natalie could explain that she only came in to check up on Jacqueline.

Natalie waited at the bedside for a few minutes, yet Jacqueline lay still on the bed. Hence, Natalie was sure that Jacqueline was sleeping soundly. After making sure that no one came into the room, Natalie finally heaved a sigh of relief.

After a while, Natalie crouched and moved the phone closer to Jacqueline's hand.

Natalie's initial plan was to grab Jacqueline's hand and unlock the phone with her fingerprint. Nonetheless, she thought it would be troublesome if Jacqueline suddenly woke up.

In the end, Natalie only used the phone to touch Jacqueline's finger gently.

Fortunately, Jacqueline seemed relaxed and didn't clench her fist. Otherwise, Natalie had no choice but to take the risk to grab Jacqueline's hand.

The phone buzzed as soon as it came into contact with Jacqueline's left thumb.

Natalie was delighted, for she thought she had successfully unlocked the phone. The next moment, a hint of disappointment flashed across her face because the phone showed that the fingerprint was incorrect.

Soon, Natalie regained her composure and tried Jacqueline's right thumb.

Most phone users would use their thumbs to unlock their phones. Hence, Natalie made another attempt with Jacqueline's right thumb without hesitation.

Just as she expected, the phone was successfully unlocked.

Feeling excited, Natalie almost shouted out loud. Fortunately, she regained her rationality and immediately covered her mouth to avoid making any noise and waking Jacqueline up.

After confirming that the phone had been unlocked, Natalie took a deep breath to calm herself down. Then, she quickly stood up and left the room.

At that moment, Natalie couldn't wait to contact Shane.

A few seconds later, Natalie walked out of the room and gently closed the door.

Once Natalie closed the door, she couldn't suppress her excitement anymore and quickly went upstairs.

Natalie arrived on the third floor and took off her shoes. The next moment, she rushed into her room, closed the door, and began to make a phone call.

Since she remembered Shane's number very well, she dialed the number and waited for him to pick it up.

Please, Shane! You have to answer my call! Please!

At that moment, she was worried that Shane would hang up the phone when he saw the unknown number.

Miles away, Shane was having an online meeting on his cruise ship with the island owners.

Given that the island was privately owned, Shane had to contact the owners before landing on it. Otherwise, he would make enemies with them.

Outside the conference room, Silas was waiting for Shane to come out to report to him.

Suddenly, Shane's phone in Silas' pocket started to ring.

Silas couldn't help but frown once he took out the phone and saw the unknown number.

Well, it might just be a prank call.

After the thought flashed through his mind, Silas wanted to hang up the phone.

However, he accidentally answered the call instead of ending it.

When Silas wanted to say that it was a wrong number, Natalie quickly said, "Shane!"

Silas was stunned upon hearing the voice.

That voice is...

"Mrs. Thompson? Is that you?" Silas immediately held the phone up to his ear and asked nervously.

At that moment, Silas was unsure if it was the real Mrs. Thompson or an impostor.

Nevertheless, he decided to try instead of missing the call.

After all, no one could know in advance if it was indeed Natalie.

"Mr. Campbell, it's me. Why have you picked up the phone? Where is Shane?" Natalie almost cried in delight when someone answered her call.

She initially expected to hear Shane but was shocked when Silas answered the phone.

"Mr. Thompson is in a meeting to discuss the method of rescuing you. Mrs. Thompson, why do you have a phone?" Silas frowned as he asked.

Chapter 1243 Video Call

Silas remained cautious, for he hadn't been fully convinced that Natalie was indeed over the phone.

Moreover, since Natalie had never made a phone call since the beginning, he believed that she was locked up and didn't have any telecommunication devices.

In other words, Silas had to suspect that someone probably made the phone call and imitated Natalie's voice, hoping to lure and capture Shane and everyone else.

Meanwhile, Natalie knew that Silas hadn't fully trusted her because he sounded dubious.

However, she wasn't angry and didn't blame Silas for it.

Under such circumstances, Natalie thought Silas had every reason to suspect that she was an impostor. If Silas didn't put up his guard, Shane could be in trouble anytime.

"The phone isn't mine but Jacqueline's. When she temporarily lost her eyesight, I grabbed the chance to steal her phone," Natalie answered.

Silas was shocked. "Mrs. Thompson, are you with Jacqueline now?"

Natalie nodded and said, "Yes. Apart from Jacqueline, Sean and his housekeeper are also here. Mr. Campbell, I'll talk to you afterward. Please pass the phone to Shane. I wish to talk to him directly."

At that moment, the only thing on Natalie's mind was to meet Shane, for she missed him very much.

Much to Natalie's surprise, Silas didn't do as she said. He pushed his glasses and argued, "Although your voice is the same as Mrs. Thompson's, I haven't seen you in person yet. As such, I can't ascertain if you're indeed Mrs. Thompson. Hence, I need you to prove yourself for safety purposes. No offense, but I have to ensure Mr. Thompson's safety."

Deep down, Silas knew that Shane would rush to the island once he knew that Natalie had called him.

However, if it was a trap set by Sean, Shane could be in danger.

As such, he had to be cautious and protect Shane at all costs.

Knowing that Silas was worried about Shane's safety, Natalie closed her eyes and said, "All right, I understand. I'll prove myself. Can you wait for a while? I'll send a friend request to Shane, and we can talk via a video call later."

With that, Natalie hung up the phone.

The next moment, a shiver ran down Silas's spine.

Video call? Since she dares talk via video call, she must be Mrs. Thompson!

As Silas was contemplating over it, the phone buzzed.

He lowered his head and saw that a friend request had popped out from Shane's social media account.

Immediately, he clicked on it and accepted the request.

The next moment, Silas received an invitation for a video call.

Silas clicked on it to accept the request with his shivering finger. The next moment, a beautiful face popped out on the screen.

It was none other than Natalie.

Silas shouted emotionally, "Mrs. Thompson, it's you!"

Finally, Silas could confirm that the woman over the phone was Natalie.

Given that Natalie was overly beautiful, the current plastic surgery technologies couldn't produce her face just yet.

She's indeed Mrs. Thompson!

Miles away, Natalie's heart also skipped a beat once she saw Silas.

After being kidnapped for quite some time, it was the first time that Natalie saw someone she knew.

Silas unknowingly gripped the phone tighter as he asked, "Mrs. Thompson, do you know where you are now?"

If Natalie knew the location, they didn't have to search for her without a clue and could rush to her place right away.

Unfortunately, Natalie shook her head and replied, "I'm sorry. I don't know where I am now. All I know is that I'm on an island that belongs to Nalanica."

"Island!" Silas' eyes sparkled when he said, "You're right. Madam, we've known that you're on an island but do not know your exact location. Hence, we've sent out many men to investigate all islands that belong to Nalanica. Now, we've arrived at Nalanica and checked out the uninhabited islands. Also, we are getting in touch with the owners of the privately-owned islands."

"I know. I overheard Sean's phone call last night. He also knew that you guys have come to Nalanica," Natalie responded.

Upon hearing it, Silas' expression turned grim. "What? How did he know that we have come to Nalanica?"

Does it mean that Sean also knows that we are on the sea and checking out the islands?

In that case, will Sean change his hideout?
