

Feel the Way You Feel, My Love Chapter 1238

Chapter 1238 Jacqueline Lost Her Eyesight

“Quick, contact Sean and get him to bring the helicopter here to send me to the hospital!” Jacqueline struggled to get up.

The moment she managed to stand up, she stepped on the clothes on the floor.

Then, she fell back to the ground under Natalie’s gaze.

This completely shocked Natalie.

How could it be that she did not see the clothes on the floor? She actually stepped on it and tripped?

Even the housekeeper was utterly shocked.

How could someone be such an idiot?

“Are you alright, Miss?” the housekeeper asked.

Jacqueline reached for the floor and touched it a few times to ascertain that there was nothing else there before she got up again.

“I’m fine. Contact Sean immediately, you hear me? Get him now!” Jacqueline clenched her fists and asked anxiously.

Natalie and the housekeeper saw how she was feeling the ground just now.

Natalie could barely believe what she had seen.

Jacqueline was blind!

She behaved like a blind person just now.

This explained her feeling that there was something strange about Jacqueline. It was only now that she realized that there was something wrong with her eyes.

Even though Jacqueline's eyes were wide open, they were listless and unfocused.

In other words, it was a sign that she could not see.

This was most clearly seen from how Jacqueline looked in their general direction when she came in with the housekeeper. There was practically no change in her face at all.

Knowing Jacqueline's hatred for her, she would have reacted wildly to Natalie's presence. There was no way that she would be so calm otherwise.

However, there was no reaction from Jacqueline. Hence, it was clear that Jacqueline was blind and did not know that she was there.

She assumed that it was just the housekeeper who had come into the room.

The housekeeper could tell that there was something wrong with Jacqueline's eyes as well as she asked tentatively, "Miss, are your eyes..."

"What? Have you made the phone call I asked you to make?" Jacqueline was instantly triggered and roared at the housekeeper.

However, the housekeeper was standing on her left but she was shouting to her right.

Clearly, Jacqueline was blind and could not see.

The housekeeper's heart sank as she did not know why Jacqueline suddenly lost her eyesight.

However, she was still responsible for her as Jacqueline was under her lock and key.

"Yes, miss. I'll contact Sir right away. Please wait." With that, the housekeeper walked toward the door.

Natalie raised her eyebrows.

Jacqueline did not give a cell phone to the housekeeper. Turns out the housekeeper had her own cell phone.

She followed the housekeeper out of the door.

The housekeeper then told Natalie, "Please go back to your room and rest, madam. I'll handle this matter properly.'

"Don't worry. I can't sleep now anyway, so I'll help you watch over her just in case she is pretending." Natalie looked down and said.

"Pretending?" The housekeeper was taken aback.

"Yes, she has done this before where she pretended to commit suicide. Therefore, it is not entirely impossible for her to pretend to lose her eyesight in order to avoid being locked up." Natalie shrugged her shoulders.

The housekeeper touched her chin thoughtfully.

Natalie smiled. "I was just speculating. I don't know whether she is really pretending but it would be good to be more cautious."

"You are right, madam. In that case, thank you for your help. I'll be back right after I make this phone call," the housekeeper said gratefully.

Natalie waved her hands. "Don't worry, I have nothing to do anyway. Honestly, I don't get along with her so I really do hope that she was pretending. With that, she won't have an excuse to leave. All right, go ahead and make the call. I'll guard the door but I won't go in. With that, it won't trigger her even if she is just pretending."

"All right. Thank you madam!" the housekeeper said before she went downstairs.

Chapter 1239 Got The Phone

Natalie's smile vanished as she watched her disappearing back view. A hint of nervousness began to take the place of her smile.

When the housekeeper left the room, she did not close the door. Just now at the door, Natalie saw Jacqueline's cell phone which was right under the bed.

It must have fallen there when Jacqueline dropped the phone out of shock over her sudden loss of sight.

However, she could not see, hence she could not find her cell phone. Therefore, she threw everything on the floor in the bid to find it and it was still to no avail.

Hence, she shouted to be let out and had the housekeeper contact Sean.

Anyway, now that Jacqueline's phone is under her bed and she can't see anything, does this mean I can sneak into her room and secretly take her phone away?

The thought made Natalie's heart beat faster. The thumping in her heart felt like drums which made her anxious and nervous at the same time.

Even though there was a chance that she could be discovered, this was the only opportunity for her to grab the cell phone.

No matter what, she wanted to give this a try.

She then took a deep breath and pinched her palms as she set her intention clear. After that, she removed her shoes and tiptoed toward Jacqueline's room.

At the door, she observed for a few seconds instead of rushing into the room.

Jacqueline was no longer seated on the floor. She was reaching out and was walking toward a different direction.

Natalie could see that she was walking to the bathroom.

Instantly, Natalie's eyes lit up.

This was the best news ever.

Seeing that Jacqueline had felt her way to the bathroom door, Natalie did not hesitate further. She shut her eyes and cheered herself on silently before sneaking quietly into Jacqueline's room and walking toward the bed.

Meanwhile, she never let her eyes leave Jacqueline as she wanted to see if Jacqueline was faking her blindness.

However, Jacqueline went into the bathroom without turning back. Natalie exhaled a little and sped up her steps slightly.

Thankfully, Jacqueline's room was lined with carpet that masked the sound of Natalie's footsteps.

She swiftly went to the bed and bent down. She stretched her arm under the bed and before long, the cell phone was in her hands.

The moment the cell phone was in her hand, Natalie was so overcome with joy and excitement that her whole body trembled and she nearly cried out loud.

This is perfect!

I finally got the cell phone!

I can now contact the outside world and let Shane know that I am here.

Despite her happiness, she was still very alert.

This was because she knew that this was no time to celebrate. The most important thing was for her to leave the room now. Otherwise, when Jacqueline came out and the housekeeper came back, she would not be able to leave.

With that, she put the cell phone in her pocket and continued to tiptoe out of the room.

She only heaved a huge sigh of relief after she left the room. Finally, a huge smile formed on her face.

All was good as long as she could leave the room.

Then, Natalie put on her shoes quickly and returned to the same spot where the housekeeper had left her. Taking a deep breath, she smiled and pretended that nothing had ever happened.

Very soon, the housekeeper came back after making the phone call to Sean. She looked rather apologetic to see that Natalie was still there. "I'm sorry to have kept you waiting, madam."

"No, I have nothing to do anyway. Did you manage to contact him?" Natalie asked with a little twinkle in her eye.

The housekeeper nodded. "Yes. Sir says to ignore her as this was not the first time that she has lost her eyesight. She will recover after a while."

"What? She will recover?" Natalie was baffled.

"Yes. Sir says that it is just a problem with her cornea, but she hasn't completely lost her eyesight. Therefore, she will be all right after a while."

"I see. Then, do you still want to lock her up?" Natalie pointed at Jacqueline's room.

Chapter 1240 How Do I Unlock It

The housekeeper shook her head and said. "No, in case she does something."

"All right, I'll go back to my room then." Natalie looked down.

She could not wait to go back to her room and call Shane.

The housekeeper nodded. "All right. Have an early night, madam. I'll go and take a look at Miss."

"Don't go in there!" Natalie immediately stopped her.

The housekeeper was confused.

Natalie sighed. "It's not a good time to go in. If she finds out that Sean is not sending someone to take her to the doctor, she will definitely have a meltdown. By then, it will just spell trouble for you. Why don't you just let her be?"

"But..."

Natalie interrupted the housekeeper. "No buts. I know her very well and she will definitely not allow you to have a good night's rest. I want to call it a night, but I don't want to be disturbed by her."

"In that case, let's go with what you say, Madam." the housekeeper decided.

After all, Sir will definitely not want Miss to disturb Madam's rest.

It's best to follow her instructions.

Natalie then let out a little breath despite her unchanging face and kept the smile on her face. "All right, let's go. Just ignore her. Even if she were to scream and shout later, she will eventually stop when she sees that no one is paying any attention to her. She might get louder if she gets any attention."

"You are right, Madam," the housekeeper echoed.

Natalie smiled and went upstairs.

The housekeeper did not stay any longer and headed downstairs too.

On the third floor, Natalie had already taken out the cell phone impatiently before she had even entered the room.

However, when the screen lit up, all excitement exited her face. She even felt like she had just been doused with a bucketful of ice water.

How could I have forgotten this?

In this day and age, cell phones were locked with fingerprints and passwords. What was the point of getting the cell phone but was unable to unlock it?

Do I call the police?

She could send a signal for help but it would definitely alert Sean. She did not believe that Sean did not place his people at Nalanica.

Therefore, if she alerted the police, it meant that Sean would know as well. By then, he might rush here and move her away.

Therefore, she definitely could not call the police. She could only attempt to unlock the phone and contact Shane.

But how do I unlock it?

Natalie bit her lip and looked around her surroundings. She narrowed her eyes at the sight of the vase at the end of the corridor.

Last night, she nearly made Sean faint when she hit him with the vase.

She could also make Jacqueline unconscious and use her fingerprint to unlock the phone.

Natalie's eyes lit up as she felt that this was a viable way.

However, she suddenly thought of something else.

She could not make Jacqueline faint.

There were only three people in here. Jacqueline, the housekeeper, and herself.

There was no way the housekeeper would knock Jacqueline out, as she would only lock her up. Therefore, when Jacqueline woke up, she will definitely know that it was Natalie who had knocked her out.

In fact, she might even start thinking about what happened after she was unconscious.

By then, Sean would be alerted and that would not do her any good.

Therefore, she had to think of another solution.

What other way is there?

Just when Natalie was deep in thought, she could hear Jacqueline's shouts from downstairs once again. "Marina, where the hell are you? Have you contacted Sean?"

Natalie gripped tightly on the cell phone.

Indeed, Jacqueline started fussing when she did not hear a response from the housekeeper.

Now, she wanted to see if the housekeeper would listen to her suggestion earlier.

If she did, Jacqueline would just continue to throw her tantrum.

If not, the housekeeper would then go into the room to look for Jacqueline.

By then, she might want to contact Sean herself and ask the housekeeper to search for her cell phone

When they discover that the cell phone was missing, both Jacqueline and the housekeeper would guess that it was Natalie who had taken away the cell phone.
