Chapter 17 Mr. William Had Money to Burn

"Jane, I advise you not to bother."

After Dayton walked far away, William opened his mouth. He had strong features, especially his eyes. And he was cold. It was like that there were frost between his eyebrows.

Jane sighed and smiled bitterly in her heart. She understood the female lead. It wouldn't change anything that she was married to such a rich, handsome man, because he didn't love her. Instead, he hated her.

And that was why the female lead sparked when being wooed by the popular fresh meat.

Jane wanted to say something nice to William and agree to get a divorce. With money and time, she could pursue her dream that hadn't been realized in her previous life. However, the prerequisite for all of this was that she wouldn't die.

"Is the Nine Dragons Jadeite of the Ming Dynasty still here?"

Jane bit her lips and finally gave up. She decided to change the subject first to break the tension.

"Why? You like it?"

'This woman had mentioned the Jadeite several times. Did she like the antique or the value of the antique?'

William didn't want to think about it. He was generous, "You can take it in addition to other things from the division of marital property."

Jane felt it jaw-dropping. the Jadeite was worth 300 million, and he just gave it to her. William was too cold, but he was generous. Perhaps it was because he had money to burn.

Her being relieved was interpreted by William as greedy for money.

William lowered his head to look at his watch. It was getting late. Before Jane said anything else, he turned around and left. In no time, he disappeared.

"Hey!"

Jane was about to speak when she realized that William was gone.

“Madam, the doctor advises you to rest.”

Right after William left, Lainey appeared like a ghost. Lainey was cold, and the female nurse felt uneasy. Jane didn't know what they had heard when she talked with William.

“Alright.”

Jane lay down and hugged the blanket to give herself a sense of security. She thought to herself, 'If I was hugging Dayton, it would be comfortable. He was so chubby and soft.'

The next two days were extremely boring for Jane. Neither William nor Dayton showed up. She could only eat and sleep. The doctor forbade her to do strenuous exercise. As a result, she gained weight and her belly became rounder.

With nothing else to do, Jane started checking updates on Weibo, a microblogging platform, and reading news on the Internet, especially about the female lead.

There were many rumors online, and some official accounts even posted photos of the day when she was kidnapped.

She was lying on William's thigh, looking unattractive.

The person who took the photos was far away from William and her, so their faces couldn't be seen. There were only two shapes, and they looked intimate in the photos.

The number of comments exploded.

“Is it necessary for Mr. William to take his wife to such a remote place in the middle of the night? He must have gone on a date with his mistress!”

“I agree. He rarely shows his face. And I heard that he didn't bring a woman when he did. Maybe he's seeing a man?”

“Is the woman on Mr. William's leg Kylie?”

“The person upstairs, there's something wrong with your eyes. Don't bring up my goddess. Besides, have you seen such a fat movie queen?”

Jane felt happy reading the gossip, but she felt hurt seeing the last words.

The female lead was not slender, but not fat, either.

Jane made a plan to lose weight. Since she couldn't do strenuous exercise, she planned to do yoga to keep fit. And she did this for her health.
