Chapter 7 She Can Never Stop Running!

Looking out of the door, Jane saw the sky darkening at a fast speed.

She could not wait any longer!

As the kidnapper's man focused on his phone, Jane walked over quietly like a ghost and came behind him. When he realized something was wrong and tried to stand up, Jane hit his neck with all her might. The man did not even struggle. He rolled his eyes and fainted.

His phone fell onto the ground.

Jane hesitated for a moment, and decided not to pick up his phone in the end.

The female lead didn't remember her husband William's phone number. It was not a good timing to call the police either. So she didn't need to take the phone.

Most importantly, this phone was manufactured by an unfamiliar brand. It seemed to be a customized offering. If there was a localizer inside, her whereabouts would be exposed!

Soon, Jane made up her mind.

She took off her high heels, held them in her hands, and planned to use them as weapons when necessary.

Fortunately, she didn't lose the martial art skills; otherwise, she wouldn't be able to survive today.

Just as Jane opened the door, she found two tall kidnappers standing outside. They seemed to be shocked at the sight of the hostage going out by herself, both putting on the surprised expressions.

"Go to hell!"

Jane jumped up and kicked them down. But inside, she was complaining. The details of the female lead being kidnapped were omitted in the book. She did not expect that she had to deal with so many people.

It was a little bit challenging for her to deal with two strong men at the same time. After Jane kicked them down, she quickly found the way downstairs.

The men stood up immediately and shouted on their walkie-talkies, "Damn, that bitch escaped!"

"What the hell!"

Jane cried out in alarm. She was currently on the second floor of the abandoned factory. Nothing but the broken walls remained after the fire. Half of the stairs leading to the first floor was gone.

"Don't let her escape. Hurry up and catch her!"

Upstairs, the leader of the kidnappers roared angrily, "Go catch her alive! You trash! You couldn't even keep an eye on an idiot!"

There was no road ahead, and behind Jane was ferocious kidnappers. She had no choice but made up her mind to jump downstairs, landing on the ground covered with soft soil.

The factory was high. Even if she jumped down from the second floor, it was still several meters high. When Jane landed, she felt sharp pain in her ankle.

In the distance, the siren sounded. According to the plot in the book, someone had called the police, who were close to the scene of the incident.

While forcing herself to stand up and running to the winding road, Jane suddenly recalled something.

In addition to the police, a large group of journalists would show up as well.

On the second day, the picture of the female lead being injured was trending. There were an overwhelming amount of reports online. Some even brought up the news of her having an affair.

It seemed that the schemer of the incident not only wanted her to become infertile, but to ruin her reputation.

Right now, she was too weak to fight back. She had to rely on the Duncans. To survive, she had to be obedient to her mysterious husband and keep her title as Mrs. Duncan.

No prestigious family could tolerate such a scandal. She had to get rid of not only the kidnappers, but the tabloid reporters who always followed her like a tail.

She could never stop running!
