Chapter 1926

Camden's face was filled with disgust when he mentioned Kirsi's mother.

"So I came right out and didn't try to hide your existence. Do you think I want to bring you back? Fortunately, God has eyes, your mother died young, and if others didn't already know, do you think I want to bring you back? I never went to find out who you truly are. Not my daughter, because I couldn't care less. Only Lumi is my own daughter in my heart. It was the same as raising an orphan with her when we raised you. You shouldn't exist; if it hadn't been for you at the start, this would never have happened!"

Camden's face was hideous, and he had no scruples about revealing what he had kept hidden for so long. He was aware that it could cause harm to an innocent child.

But the toll on their entire family was already enough!

What did he do wrong?

His feelings for Louisa were stained with stains that would never wash away in a lifetime.

Kirsi stood there dazed, clutching the stairwell handrail, her fingertips white and sweaty. She was aware that she was an outlier in this family.

But she had no idea she'd be such an unpopular existence. She doesn't like Louisa because she prefers Lumi. She also disliked Lumi because she received all of the favours so easily.

Camden did not dare to openly favour her because of the overall situation, but in Camden's heart, it was his daughter; should it be the same?

Now it appears that Camden's existence is unnecessary in her heart. After all, there was almost no time when he was nice to her.

He went to work every morning and returned late, and when he returned, he always went to see Lumi's homework because her homework is frequently full marks, she simply nods her head.

Lumi, the eldest young lady who has been proud of her own light since she was a child, will always make her gloomy.

Even though Lumi's grades were not good and she was always mischievous. But who among the giants cares about results? She has already won the entire world from the moment she was born. She's envious and jealous.

Lumi, on the other hand, treated her without reservation.

The good thing makes her even more envious and makes her feel despicable and shameless.

She was pale and breathing heavily.

Camden's words made it difficult for her to raise her head like a sinner.

Louisa stood there, and even though she didn't say anything, everyone could sense her rage.

But no one stood up again, in front of her, and said anything to her.

Lumi.

Kirsi paused and straightened up. She suddenly smiled. Her voice became dry and hoarse as well.

"I understand. After all these years, I finally realised that I have no right to hate anyone."

Camden and Louisa remained silent. The whole house fell into a quite silence.

Kirsi inhaled deeply, looked at Louisa, and said: "I know you don't want Lumi to easily abandon her marriage to the Lindstrom family. I'll convince her. I just want to state unequivocally that I have nothing to do with Samuel."

Kirsi smiled as Louisa clearly didn't believe it. "I swear this is my last visit to this house. I am no longer a member of the Makinen family as of today."

Louisa cast a glance at Kirsi. She eventually yielded.

Kirsi walked up quietly and easily found Lumi's room. Instead of knocking, simply push the door open and enter...

Chapter 1927

The door is not shut.

Lumi sat on the balcony rocking chair, holding her favourite half-height big teddy bear in her arms. On the table next to her was a computer and a cellphone.

The computer stock market has been soaring all the way, which is very objective.

Kirsi paused; she was familiar with Lumi's habits.

When I'm in a bad mood, I like to look at the stock market because it shows that money is still flowing in. It's also a coincidence that whenever she's in a bad mood, the stock market must be doing well. But now it's her dearest sister who makes her feel bad.

Kirsi walked over with a heavy heart, step by step.

Lumi shifted her gaze to the side and noticed her: "Do you no longer need to film?"

The tone suggested that nothing significant had occurred.

Kirsi paused before responding, "I asked for leave. I wanted to come here yesterday, but the scene was not filmed, so I couldn't leave..."

This matter was also surprising to her.

Kirsi, who has always been one, was unable to enter the state for an extended period of time while filming.

Even the director was taken aback, and the people next to her were constantly watching the fun, which was nothing more than a mockery of her work ethic.

It was the first time she had lost her cool. But she couldn't stop herself.

The scene was shot until 3:00 a.m. and lasted only a few minutes.

She couldn't come over at the time, so she had to squint in the car for a while.

I saw what Lumi had posted on the Internet early the next morning, and it was already in full swing.

Kirsi felt the burning sensation of slaps falling on her face despite the fact that she was not mentioned in a single word.

Lumi never rubbed her eyes with sand. She refused to listen to an explanation. Perhaps she knew, without explanation, that nothing could change.

Lumi only smiled softly when she heard it: "You've always been so committed; it appears that nothing is more important than your filming."

Kirsi understood what she meant and simply walked over to the opposite chair. She paused and then said, "Because I have nothing but filming,"

"What do you want to say?" Lumi asked.

"Before I decided to become an actor, I overheard my father and Aunty Louisa discussing Lumi in the future. You get everything in the house, and I get nothing. You interned at the company, and I interned at a company owned by a friend of my father's. You know, this is the job they found for me? That uncle As soon as he went up, he touched me, and I didn't dare to say anything." Kirsi chuckled lightly, as if recalling a haunting but tedious memory.

Lumi smirked slightly "Why don't you try it? Why would Dad be unconcerned if you said it?"

Kirsi smiled as she looked at Lumi, "Because even if I said it, it would just be a change to another company, and I would still be rejected."

"Are you overthinking?" Lumi rolled her eyes in silence. "Are you planning to exact revenge on me?"

Kirsi paused, lowered her eyes, and stated calmly and indifferently: "I have no intention for vengeance on you. I simply wish to state that it is because of you that I have never disliked anyone in the Makinen family. I am willing to become an actor and fight for my own career, is to completely cut off relations with the Makinen family's interests in order to avoid becoming a thorn in Aunty Louisa's eyes."

Lumi snorted lightly, clearly not saying anything about her thoughts. "I understand you have low self-esteem, but you are the one who first treated yourself as an outsider. I have nothing to say after so many years if you are unbalanced because of a minor difference in treatment."

The Divorced Billionaire Heiress Chapter 1928

Chapter 1928

Kirsi looked her in the eyes and got right to the point: "You aren't me, so you won't understand. I grew up here and required more than a dozen minds. Maybe you're right, I think too much because I have low self-esteem, but in a situation like mine, I can't help but think too much."

"It's entirely up to you." Lumi remained silent.

The balcony is surrounded by floor-to-ceiling windows, and the garden outside is unobstructed and green.

Kirsi gave her a glance and said, "My relationship with Samuel ended before you married. Perhaps he didn't think about it at first, and he believed I lied to him, so he came to me unwillingly. However, There was no symbiotic relationship. You had only been married for a few months. We didn't communicate after that. Every time I stayed in a hotel, a swarm of paparazzi and staff members followed me. Am I correct? She will jeopardise her own future. The fact that we both stay in the same hotel is entirely coincidental. Samuel...should like you a lot."

Even though Kirsi loved that man to death, she knew that Samuel did not belong to her.

Kirsi simply obtained something that did not belong to her, the kind of vanity she had never been satisfied with since she was a child, and gained a huge sense of gain for a short time.

Especially after learning that Samuel was planning to marry the Makinen family's daughter. Her despicable vanity caused her to forget how wonderful Lumi was to her.

During that time, Kirsi concentrated her efforts on Samuel. Shee couldn't forget that she was purposefully hooking him. She sought vengeance on purpose.

Allow everyone in the Makinen family to see that their carefully chosen son-in-law is a servant beneath the skirt.

One was kept in the dark, while the other was well aware.

She felt she had succeeded as she watched Samuel struggle between marriage and her. But she couldn't persuade him to end the marriage.

Because Samuel went to meet Lumi and returned to tell her how pleasant their meeting was.

Lumi is a moron and a sweetheart who is unconcerned about Samuel personal life.

She won't find out about their relationship, so she can relax.

Hahaha...

Samuel discovered the best of both worlds by allowing her to continue to be his lover!

Kirsi repressed her emotions and watched him stupidly, but her heart was dead.

She is only fit to be a lover?

Lumi unexpectedly found her and told her that her fiance was fine and she was very satisfied, just as she was about to tell Samuel the truth.

And she depicts a lot of their happy and free married life.

Kirsi was unable to grasp it.

From then on, Kirsi awoke unexpectedly. She began to deal with Samuel's interests, and began to distance herself from him again and again. She spoke bluntly about breaking up a few days before he married.

Samuel was still dealing with the marriage at the time, and he only saw her as angry, so he didn't pay much attention to it.

He was shocked and angry when they met at the wedding and saw Kirsi come over to toast with a glass of wine, and when Lumi introduced her as her sister.

Samuel almost lost control when Kirsi smiled and shouted "brother-in-law."

But who cares? Nothing can be changed because the marriage is finished.

Kirsi was aware of Lumi's personality, and when she spoke, she avoided some sensitive topics.

She only described their relationship as a transaction in which she wanted to be at the top.

It appears more pure in this manner.

The Divorced Billionaire Heiress Chapter 1929

Chapter 1929

Lumi's expression remained unchanged. She cocked her head and gently curled the corner of her lips. "You're just telling me about your love story? It's fine now; when we divorce, you can be with him openly."

Kirsi took a breather and pursed her lips: "Sister, you know I'm not like that. That's what I mean; I'm here to convince you not to divorce."

Lumi chuckled softly and sipped the rose tea on the side:

"First and foremost, you should know that I am not a person who is easily persuaded.

Second, you're my sister, but when you married, you kept your relationship so secret that you believed you could be right after breaking up with him? You were his lover, you agreed not to sleep with him. "Have you gone?"

Lumi's words were tinged with impatience and disgust, as if she couldn't take it any longer.

Everything around her is her favourite decoration, but she is now only cold.

"Or do you think this is a common occurrence in your circle, so I don't mind?"

"Are you disgusting, Kirsi?"

Kirsi's face faded as a result of Lumi's words. Lips are bloody and pale.

Lumi had never said such harsh words, and she had never been willing to say them to Kirsi!

"I understand Samuel's romantic nature, and I can accept that he doesn't love me, but I can't stand your past. I can't stand you behind my back. You said you didn't contact him after we married, so I must have had a lot of friends before. What happened the second time I saw you go out to social events together? Do you want to tell me it's a coincidence as well? Don't think of others as fools, Kirsi. Do you think this is acting? Would you like to clear things up because there was a misunderstanding?"

Lumi has never said so many harsh words in her life. Her every word pierced Kirsi's heart.

Kirsi didn't think it was a big deal and assumed Lumi would forgive her as before. However, until now It was only then that she realised there is no such thing as a cheap thing.

Kirsi sat stiffly, her lips white, and she didn't know what to say. Of course, no matter how she explained Lumi's appearance, she would no longer believe it.

"Sister, whatever you think, what has happened cannot be changed, but what I haven't done, I will not admit." Kirsi stated, stood up and gave Lumi a long look. Her eyes were filled with complex and profound emotions.

It would be wonderful if Lumi could be the same as before and forgive her for talking and laughing. Ah!

Lumi, on the other hand, didn't even raise her head to look at Kirsi.

Kirsi paused and exhaled deeply: "I'm leaving Makinen's house; I'm not welcome here anyway, so I'd better leave as soon as possible. I'll come whenever you need me in the future. Sister, I'm sorry I hurt you."

She drew the corner of her mouth and looked at Lumi with red eyes before turning around and leaving.

Lumi sat motionless, not even raising her eyelids.

Camden sighed as he entered. "Come in and talk to you, but I persuaded her to rest first. Let you think about it first. we're all here for your own good but there aren't many noble children who don't care; is it better to change one? "

Chapter 1930

Camden's words are still ringing in the ears.

Outside, a light breeze blew through the treetops, and the temperature and humidity were just right.

Lumi said quietly, "Dad, because that person is Kirsi, I can't get over it. I just can't get over it, no matter how long it takes."

She was completely honest.

Camden sighed, "She won't affect you or anything, and you shouldn't think you broke them up."

There would have been other women if it hadn't been for the marriage with the Makinen family, and the Lindstrom family would not have married someone of unknown origin. My illegitimate daughter was brought back because her father is bad, and she should not have been brought back in the first place."

Lumi lowered her head and remained silent, but her eyes were bloodshot. She never felt she didn't like Kirsi because they didn't share the same mother.

She did everything that a sister could. But why did Kirsi cause her so much pain?

Lumi closed her eyes and listened to Camden talk about her words: "Daughter, we'll be upset but don't bring up divorce lightly. Samuel arrived to explain and apologise, and the Lindstrom family's parents are already on their way. The Lindstrom family's attitude is now very clear. Marriage is very important; don't regret it because of a temporary outburst of rage. Besides, don't you like Samuel?"

Lumi was pleased with Samuel when the two sides met for the first time.

Although they are not particularly affectionate after marriage, the conversation is not without affection for Samuel.

So no one thought their marriage was bad or hopeless.

What will you do if you get divorced because of an outburst of rage?

Lumi opened her eyes and remained silent for a long time before casually saying: "I don't like it much either, Dad."

Camden gave her a long look before opening her mouth: "Are you certain you won't be sorry?"

Lumi: "No, I'd rather break up with Geying for a lifetime. If the project in which I invested loses money, I will not continue to invest; perhaps you will all say that I lack patience and foresight, but I am like this, Dad, and I will not be sorry."

Camden sighed as he reached out and touched her hair. He sighed and said, "All right, let me persuade your mother."

Camden stood up and prepared to leave.

Lumi said softly as she was about to leave, "Thank you very much, Dad."

She could sense her parents' preference for her and their disinterest in Kirsi. But she has done her best to compensate, but who can blame her if it doesn't work?

When the Lindstrom family's parents arrived with Samuel, they had their luggage taken to the hotel, and the family went to the Makinen family first.

So the Makinen family were quite lively.

Although Louisa despised Samuel for injuring Lumi, their family's attitude was faultless.

There is no other way to defend Samuel except to say that an apology is an apology.

They didn't respond no matter how harshly Louisa chastised them.

As soon as Samuel walked through the door, he noticed that the house was empty except for the servants and the Makinen family.

The Lindstrom family's parents are shopping mall businessmen. They must have greeted them since they are arriving.

The Makinen family did not object, demonstrating that there is still hope for this marriage.

Camden was thoughtful in every way, but Louisa couldn't laugh.

Before getting to the point, the old master of the Lindstrom family exchanged a few words with Camden.

"This b*stard hasn't done anything serious in the last few years. He discovered his black history after getting married, even though he had never been married before. I stated that there is something that cannot be handled ahead of time? Or was he too young and inflexible to do things before? Allow some people to benefit from it."
