Chapter 2733

Chapter 2733

"I had someone check the address of the hotel Reborn stayed in that year. Coincidentally, Charity appeared in that hotel too."

A mix of emotions then revealed in Chester's gaze, and it even carried a sense of uneasiness. "However, Charity is already dead. So, who's the Reborn now?"

"Are you trying to say that I'm impersonating Reborn? This is merely your speculation, and you don't have any credible evidence." After hearing that, Charity secretly sighed. Her appearance in the States back then and her overseas qualifications were not confidential, so anyone could easily find out.

"By piecing many coincidences together, my speculation will slowly point to the truth." Chester, on the other hand, did not agree with her.

He subconsciously wanted to take out a cigarette because his heart was racing madly at that point.

However, only when he took out the cigarette pack did he realize it was empty.

"Don't smoke in my office. I don't like it to be filled with the smell of smoke," Charity said with a trace of disgust in her eyes.

"Okay."

Chester pressed both hands on the office desk while staring deep into her eyes. "I didn't sleep last night. I spent the whole night watching the movies you've acted in before and after you attempted suicide to see if there was a difference."

Charity's heart immediately did a flip, but her face did not betray her feelings. "This is normal. I hadn't experienced many things before my suicide attempt. Do you expect me to be as innocent, kind, silly, and naive as before after being on the verge of death?"

She looked at him with a derisive expression.

"Yeah. After being on the verge of death, your personality changed, you lost your memory, and you even changed your lifestyle, as well as eating habits."

There was a hint of mockery in Chester's deep voice. "I've asked Shedrick and Hailey. When you woke up, you didn't even know who you were. You didn't know who Hailey was as well. You used to enjoy eating desserts and always needed your manager and assistant to keep an eye on you. But after that, you stopped eating desserts. Instead, you started liking spicy food, Japanese cuisine, French cuisine, and fondue when Eliza, who grew up near the coastal area, liked to eat Spanish cuisine."

"So? What are you trying to say?" Charity raised her head and looked at him.

Their eyes were one head apart from each other.

It was as if they were playing chess, and the one who showed their weakness first would lose.

"Regarding your memory, the doctor said you suffered a huge trauma, so that was why you had selective amnesia. However, why can lifestyle and eating habits change too? Eliza came from a small town. Before she attempted suicide, she acted in roles that portrayed a beautiful young lady who was kind and humble, and her acting skills were mediocre. But after you woke up, your acting skills suddenly improved without training. Not only can you act well in roles involving relationships but also wicked and crazy roles. You can act so well as a rich young lady or even someone of low status. What's more, you won the award for being the most well-liked actress."

Chester paused for a moment before he tugged at the collars of his pajamas. At last, he said with a low voice, "It's simple. You're not the real Eliza. In other words, Eliza died when she attempted suicide." « »

Silence.

Dead silence filled the air.

Charity blinked and suddenly laughed as if she had heard a joke. " Young Master Jewell, are you out of your mind? If I'm Eliza, who am I? A ghost? You're a doctor, yet you fell for such a thing."

"Perhaps you're a ghost."

Chester said by enunciating each word, "I found out that the day Charity escaped prison and went missing was close to when you attempted suicide."

Charity did not blink. "Are you saying I'm now Charity?"

“Yes.” When Chester uttered that word, his heart jerked.

He felt as though he could not breathe normally.

Frankly speaking, it was ridiculous of him, as a doctor, to have such a thought.

However, many things he found confusing seemed to have come to light after his inference.

“Ha...”

Charity burst out laughing as though she had heard the most hilarious joke in the world. “Young Master Jewell, why don’t you write a novel? I believe it’ll be very interesting. Now, tell me. So many people in the world encountered mishaps over those few days, including people in comas and those who underwent surgery, but what made you think that Charity woke up in my body?”

"I'm not sure either. Perhaps... it's because of the pendant on your chest." Chester suddenly stretched out his hand toward the shirt of her collar.

"What are you doing?" Charity clutched his wrist. "You're taking liberties with me, huh?"

"I want to take a look at the pendant."

Chester stared earnestly at the red string around her neck. "I remember you telling me that Eliza and Charity went to the church together when they were younger, and the priest said they were ill- fated. Therefore, he gave each of them a pendant to save one of them from the mishap one day. You once told me that Charity appeared in your dream because of the pendant. Maybe, she didn't even appear in your dream because you are Charity. Because of this pendant, you woke up in Eliza's body."

Charity could not help but sigh at how smart and sharp Chester was.

What no one had found out or her half-truth no one questioned, he discovered some loopholes and inferred the truth.

However, she had to admit that the matter itself was dubious.

If someone with evil intentions found out, they might have her body dissected.

Secondly, if Chester learned that she was Charity, they would be more deeply involved with each other, and their relationship would become more complicated.

She told Catherine and Freya simply because she trusted them.

"Your speculation is very interesting."

Charity clapped. "Sadly, I'm Eliza, not Charity. I have work to do, and I'm not free to discuss this outlandish issue with you here.

Young Master Jewell, please leave.”

“I won’t leave. Do you know why I suddenly think that you’re Charity?”

Chester pursed his thin lips with a conflicted gaze. “It’s because I found your university records and realized you used to take part in your university’s drama club. I looked into the forum from your year, and the drama club that year was brilliant. The well-known operatic soprano in the States, Rodgers, even attended one of the events on campus.

“He selected you and a classmate of yours straight away and invited both of you to play one of the lead roles in the performance. I heard he took you both away during the holiday and trained you guys for two whole months. However, no one knew why you lost in the end.

“Someone who has attended special training under Rodgers for two months must show a significant improvement in their acting skills. As far as I know, when one of the Oscar winners expressed her acceptance speech last year, she personally said she was extremely grateful to Rodgers. Without his guidance, she wouldn’t have come this far.”

“Really? This is surprising. I didn’t know Charity was so brilliant. To think she even knew Rodgers. If you hadn’t told me, I wouldn’t know,” Charity said indifferently as her lips curled up into a smile.

“Some things can be easily discovered, especially the other student whom Rodgers chose over Charity. Because she did a global tour, she has become a well-known Hollywood celebrity.” Chester said, “ If she hadn’t been this popular, it would’ve been difficult to dig up the past.”
