Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South Chapter 2746

Chapter 2746

10:00 a.m.

Charity received a call from Catherine. "How's your progress in learning Neeson Corporation's situation these days?"

"I'm almost done understanding everything." Charity said emotionally, "The core employees of Neeson Corporation from the past have all switched companies. We'll have to boldly push for a revolution in our business if we want to start developing again."

"I have no clue about sports and exercise, so I didn't know where to start even though I knew there was a problem with Neeson Corporation."

Catherine smiled and said, "Everyone is a master in their special fields. You have to be the one to do it."

"No. You've helped me out a lot. If it weren't for you getting an experienced manager to help me manage the company, the core ideas would've been sold early on."

Catherine paused before diving into the main topic. "I heard from Shaun that Chester drank till midnight, which caused his stomach to bleed last night. It seems he's been getting drunk these few days. He hasn't even gone to the company or hospital. Does he know about your identity?"

After a moment of silence, Charity replied lightly, "Mm, he had doubts from some clues and found out."

"I thought you were the one who revealed it yourself." Catherine was surprised. "He could even suspect this? Tsk tsk, that's amazing. Freya and I couldn't even think of it before."

"Chester is smart, indeed." Charity could not deny it.

Catherine started gossiping. "Oh, was he very shocked? He must've been so regretful, right? Whether you're Charity or Eliza, he looked down on you all along. In the end, he realized that he didn't know you well enough to assume you were a pretentious, scheming woman. Now, he found out that you're a queen."

Charity pondered for a second and said, "He said he loves me."

"Wow." Catherine just felt utterly satisfied. She liked seeing scumbags like Chester falling in love the most. "How do you feel?"

"I don't have any other emotions. I just feel miserable," Charity said indifferently. "He apologized to me, but what is the use of an apology? It's a fact that I went to jail and my parents are dead. It might've been due to the heavens pitying me that I was able to survive in this way. I can choose not to get revenge on him because I still have basic rationality, but I won't be together with him."

Catherine could understand Charity's feelings.

If it were her, she would not do it either.

Although Sarah was the perpetrator, who asked Chester to believe in Sarah?

It was still understandable in Shaun's case because his memories were altered, but Chester's head was fine. He was smarter than Rodney too.

"However, would a person like Chester willingly back off and wish you happiness just because of guilt now that he has realized he loves you?" Catherine said in a serious tone, "Feelings are the most uncontrollable things in the world. After falling in love with someone, people will instinctively want to have that person, especially people like Chester who got to have whatever they wanted since young. It's not likely that he'll silently watch over you as you get married and have children with someone else."

"I don't intend to get married or have children," Charity said decisively.

Catherine was astonished. "Charity, you're still young, and this body of yours is younger than any of ours. A lifetime is too long. Your parents passed away early, and you're alone now. I truly hope you can have a harmonious family, have a child, and start over."

To be honest, she felt that Charity no longer had desires for anything.

Living people would surely have something they cared about.

If not, being alive would be meaningless.
