Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South

Chapter 2793

Chapter 2793

Chester took out a business card from his pocket. "You can look for my assistant, and he'll give you 100 thousand dollars. You can choose to study or set up a business using the money. It's up to you."

With that, he picked up his coat while ignoring the stunned Laura. He rose to his feet and said to everyone, "Director Evans, I'm leaving now."

"Young Master Jewell, that's it?"

Director Evans quickly leaped to his feet. "Is it because these women can't satisfy you?"

"No. They're good. Don't make things difficult for them."

Chester waved his hand before turning around and leaving.

Director Evans walked up to Laura. "Did you say something that offended President Jewell?"

"No..." Laura tightened her hold of the business card in her hand and said in a trembling tone, "President Jewell told me to look for his assistant to get 100 thousand dollars so that I can continue my studies."

Director Evans exchanged glances with everyone for a while. In the end, President Laurent gritted his teeth and said, "Young Master Jewell has become kind all of a sudden. This is unbelievable."

Everyone went quiet as they found it unbelievable too. All of them were no stranger to Chester's nasty personality. Although he was a doctor, he could be cruel, and hardly any women who had been with him could stand his nasty remarks.

It was unexpected that he would one day sponsor that kind of woman for studies.

The next day, charity found time to visit the psychologist that Freya recommended.

The psychologist was a female in her 30s who was intellectual and elegant. According to Freya, she had always treated some political bigwigs and their families.

These days, people were stressed regardless of their wealth.

"Miss Robbins, please take a seat. My last name is Dexter." Doctor Dexter took a business card and handed it to her. "Camryn Dexter."

"This name is interesting." Only after Eliza glanced at the name on the business card did she put it in her handbag.

"Have a cup of coffee. Just treat me as your friend and chat with me. Relax. You don't have to be nervous." Doctor Dexter poured Eliza a cup of coffee. "When did you realize that you have such a problem?"

Charity was momentarily dazed, when she came to her senses, she said, "It's been two years, but... it became severe this year."

"For example, what have you experienced?" Doctor Dexter asked. "I saw the news regarding your affair with Chester. Did the problem start because of the incident? Or... was it after your relationship with Monte ended? I'm sorry for asking you so directly, but there are some things I need to know."

Charity gave it a thought. "Actually, I'm not sure. Before Chester forced himself on me, I already disliked getting along with the opposite sex. when I act with the opposite sex, I feel subconsciously resistant. Since my affair with Chester, I've been averse to kisses, hugs, or any intimate behaviors that a couple does."

Doctor Dexter nodded. "Do you feel disgusted?"

"Yes."

Doctor Dexter took out a pen and a piece of paper. She lowered her head, writing while saying, "Even though you're a public figure, many things on the Internet may not be true. In fact, I don't know your past very well, so I just want to ask whether you've ever loved someone whom you could have complete trust in. You can tell me. Our conversation here is confidential."

Besides, after you pour out certain things, you'll feel much better."

"...Yeah."

Charity looked down. "I used to love someone with all my heart. But one day, he broke up with me because he claimed I didn't deserve to be with him. He also claimed that he got together with me just to fool around and sleep with me. That hurt me a lot. since young, I've been an indifferent person because I felt that by being indifferent, I can protect myself sometimes. Even so, I never thought I'd fall in love with such a person. I gave my all, only to be trampled on."

Chapter 2794

Chapter 2794

"I just found out about this recently. Actually, he said those things back then because someone was trying to ruin my relationship with him. There was a misunderstanding between US. However, many things have happened after that that I can't forgive him."

Doctor Dexter asked, "Have you ever loved someone else?"

"...No."

Doctor Dexter stopped writing for a moment and said, "In fact, you have a kind of mood disorder, including indifference, anxiety, and fear. This disorder is common, and I've cured many types of it. After all, you've been deeply hurt in relationships, so you subconsciously shut your emotional awareness out to avoid being hurt. This is an instinctive form of selfprotection."

Charity nodded as she could sense it as well.

Doctor Dexter looked at her. "Have you ever thought you'll fall in love with that person again after you get better?"

Charity was stunned for a bit. After that, she smiled and shook her head. "That's impossible. I won't love him. Although our previous breakup was a result of a misunderstanding, he has slept with many women, and I find him dirty. We're from two different worlds anyway."

"What else?"

Charity paused to think before she added, "He has hurt my family, so I can never forgive him. I've stopped loving him since."

"Now that you are numb to relationships and have shut out your emotional awareness, how are you sure you've stopped loving him?" Doctor Dexter asked all of a sudden.

Charity's face darkened, and she became annoyed. "My taste can't be this bad. Plus, I'm not that cheap."

"Let's do a test." Doctor Dexter drew a piece of paper. "Try to fill it in."

Charity took the paper, which consisted of multiplechoice questions.

After completing the questions one by one, she returned the paper to Doctor Dexter.

Doctor Dexter took out another piece of paper and put a tick. The conclusion turned out to be B. "You practice emotional hygiene. You seem cold on the outside, and those who have just started to interact with you will find you unapproachable. However, once you open up to them, you'll treat your friends very well and with all your heart. The same applies to your relationships. You're a headstrong and resentful person. That's why you're quite a contradictory individual."

Charity frowned deeply. Only after some time did she say, "Perhaps I'm this sort of person."

"Why did you suddenly decide to address this issue?" Doctor Dexter asked.

Charity pursed her thin lips. "I have a childhood friend who has been treating me very well. He has helped me a lot and kept me company all the time. He likes me, so I want to give him a chance. If this goes on with me, it'll be unfair to him."

"If you want to get your illness treated, you need to engage in more outdoor activities. Be active and exercise, as well as take your medication. Don't let yourself get too tense."

Doctor Dexter said, "Everyone has an unhappy past. Let bygones be bygones. Don't hold onto it, or you won't be able to start your life anew."

"I thought so too." Charity agreed.

Doctor Dexter raised her brows. "You thought so, yet you didn't do it. otherwise, you wouldn't be living in the past."

Stunned, Charity kept quiet for a long time.

An hour later, charity took the medicine. "Thank you, Doctor Dexter."

"Remember to come over next week."

Doctor Dexter nodded, she watched charity leave before she took the paper of the final answer to the multiple-choice questions charity had completed. The person who fell under the B category was headstrong, but when it came to relationships, she was pure and might only love one person in her life.

She let out a sigh. She did not say it because Charity looked agitated just now.

If Doctor Dexter had said that, the patient might not want to get treated.

Nevertheless, if people with that mental illness was not treated, it would negatively impact their mental health over time. 1
