

Apex Chapter 515

Chapter 515

Renly the Rude The Andrews were flying on an Airbus A380, which was the largest commercial plane in the world.

If the plane was carrying passengers at maximum capacity, it would be able to carry more than 800 people in a single trip, which was enough to prove just how big this plane was.

Moreover, it also proved just how extravagant the Andrews were. There were only a few people on the plane, yet they'd used an A380 to show how rich they were.

"Why are they showing that off? Can't you afford an A380 yourself?" Renly was a little frustrated as he criticized them, looking at the large commercial plane on the runway.

Javier chuckled and replied, "No, I can't afford one. The Andrews have so much more money in comparison to the Kerseys."

Renly nodded his head. "I suppose you're right. This means that the Whites can't afford it either. It's our fault for being poor!"

After the plane came to a complete standstill, the vehicle with the ladder went up and attached itself to the plane's door. Meanwhile, some staff members swiftly walked up and laid out the red carpet.

After all this was done, the plane doors opened and Thomas Andrews, the family leader of the Andrews, walked out.

Behind him was his youngest son, Connor Andrews.

After they walked down, Javier and Renly went up to them and greeted them very politely.

Although both families despised the Andrews, Thomas was still their senior member at the end of the day, so they needed to show a modicum of respect.

As for Connor... Well, he was given some as well! When a person got so notorious, even the politeness and courtesy shown to them did not actually mean they were being genuinely respected. If the Andrews had a bad enough reputation, Connor's was even worse. Apparently, he had invented an absolutely despicable method for the sake of transporting drugs.

He would get a prostitute pregnant and then have their belly cut up when the baby was about seven to eight months old.

They would do so regardless of whether the baby was healthy or not, storing the drugs within the baby's body with a certain barrier around it.

After the drugs were stored, the baby would be shoved back inside the prostitute's belly, and then get stitched up and sent away.

There were certain countries where pregnant women would not go through especially rigorous tests.

The X-Ray machine was only capable of transmitting through a pregnant woman's body, but they would not go through large amounts of risky tests for the sake of not harming the baby. Hence, Connor had successfully smuggled tens of billions of dollars to another country.

In retrospect, an A380 was priced at 2.5 billion dollars.

2.5!

These women might be prostitutes, but their babies were completely innocent!

Hence, Connor had earned himself another nickname within their own circle... The Babyslayer.

After ti

elcomed Thomas, a luxurious customized Rolls-Royce limousine drove over to take Tomas and Connor away.

Javier and Renly did not join them. After all, there would be a meeting with all the major families that day, so they were still expecting other flights to arrive. While they had some time to kill, Renly asked, "Would you put the Babyslayer down if you had a chance?»

Javier replied, "I'd put you down if I had the chance. This way, nobody would stand in my way."

Renly rolled his eyes. "F*ck you. Haven't you gotten my knees in deep sh*t already? I've been banned from leaving this island for two years!"

Renly felt rather depressed when he recalled this. "How can you be such a despicable man? You managed to trick Angelina into launching an attack against me, allowing your families to build a rock-solid alliance, while I have to continue to suffer due to your fiasco.

"Do you even have any morals to begin with, Javier?"

Javier replied in an upstanding manner, "I don't, actually. Neither of us have morals, so we're both immoral people!"

Renly pointed his finger at Javier and remained silent for a while.

"Fine! Well played, Javier. I'll get back at you for this someday!" Javier nodded his head. "Sure, I'll be waiting for you with open arms, Renly the Rude." If Javier was not a guest on his island, Renly would definitely have kicked him furiously for infuriating him so much!

While the two of them were chatting, another plane landed shortly.

There was no need to even ask the control tower who the plane belonged to when they saw the huge, ferocious polar bear spray painted on the plane.

The Soroy's had polar bears as their mascot, and the person who got out of the plane was none other than Angelina.

She had yet to become the family leader, but she already had control over the Soroy's. Hence, it would suffice for her to participate in the meeting that day because...the family leader of the Soroy's was not eligible to do so. After she got out of the plane, Renly quickly walked up to her with a huge smile on his face.

His arms were also open wide, emitting an intense friendliness, as though he was meeting an old friend he had not met in a long time.

However, Angelina merely nodded her head at him and walked past him. After eluding Renly's embrace, Angelina stood next to Javier, hugging him and even passionately kissing him.

"I missed you, my king. You have no idea how lonely and cruel it was for me to spend my nights without you. I was only able to force myself to go to sleep when I imagined your deep and passionate love for me. Oh, my king... I want you right now!" Angelina was definitely not just saying that for the fun of it, as she immediately began feeling up Javier's pants. Her beautiful face and curvaceous body definitely sparked a certain urge within Javier. However, that was most definitely not the appropriate place to do something like that, so he told her, "I want you too, my dear, but Renly's over there snooping on us. I don't want him to see your curves. They're for my eyes only!" Angelina exuded an infinite amount of charm and kissed Javier's neck with her red lips countless times before finally leaving his embrace, albeit very unwillingly. After seeing the limousine arrive, she winked at Javier and got in the car as she walked in style, completely ignoring Renly's presence from the very beginning. Renly was still in a daze when the limousine drove far into the distance.

"Aren't the Whites good enough for her? I've never seen a guest completely ignore their host before in my life!"

Meanwhile, Javier was laughing away. "And you thought you could try and drive a wedge between me and Angelina? What a joke! That woman's practically glued to me with something even stronger than superglue, so do you really think you could even fit between us? Forget it!" Renly pointed at Javier. "You're such a filthy, despicable man!" Javier did not deny Renly's statement. "But this only proves that you're less than that."

Once again, Renly had lost the battle. 'I've never met someone as shameless as him before!

'How could he possibly be such a shameless man? It's as if he doesn't even care what sort of insults you hurl at him! In fact, he even welcomes them with open arms!

'There's nothing wrong with calling him a pervert!' That morning, the Whites, the Kerseys, and the other major families all arrived. Of course, minor families like the Hachisons were not worthy enough of participating in the meeting. At most, they could only try to find out what had happened during the meeting through the major families they were allied with.

To put it bluntly, their job was to work, while politics were literally none of their business.

During the lunch banquet, the meeting that had been called specifically for the force hiding in the shadows began...