

Chapter 454

I've Already Surrendered There were no surprises about the company's underground passageway , which extended to more than 12 miles before finally reaching the seaside.

There were rails in place throughout the entire distance, so it was obvious everyone had left in some sort of vehicle that used those rails.

The facilities by the seaside were all within reason, so not only would the seawater not flow into the passageway, but it would not even leave behind a trace of anyone coming or going.

In fact, it was a no-brainer that a boat had been waiting at the exit to drive everyone away the moment they had gotten out. However, Javier was helpless. He could not even try to find out where they had gone, as they wouldn't have left any traces behind.

Gusman arrived the next afternoon, which was only natural considering that he was Angelina's right-hand man.

He even told Javier, "Miss Angelina has already instructed me to have the Sammius military conduct a drill should it be required."

Of course, this so-called "drill" was just a formality. After all, they could just write it off as a mistake if they accidentally hit the wrong target, and nobody would be able to argue with them.

Aside from Gusman and his team, Javier's mercenaries had also arrived. They had all entered the country in several batches, seeming no different than ordinary tourists. But together, they formed a very powerful assault team.

These mercenaries had long become battle-hardened and famous throughout the battlefield thanks to the additional fact that Mackenzie had gotten them all trained on an actual battlefield.

The last ones to arrive were the 500 men of the Hachisons. After all, it was not that simple of a job to have them all sent over, as they did not have as much pull as the Kerseys and the Soroyes.

However, now that they were all there, Gabby, who had enough cushion of her own to bolster any recoil of her firearms, and her husband, Levi, led the team. Javier started laughing inside when he saw Levi.

"How the hell did you end up getting pregnant after just a few months since our last meeting?"

Of course, there was no way Levi could have gotten pregnant, but it was true that he did have a rather large belly at that moment. Levi felt a little embarrassed as he said, "Life was a bit too relaxed over there. There's not much I have to do, so I've been leading a rather easy life, which is why I accidentally ended up like this."

Gabby then said, "Boss, Levi's been really lazy recently. In fact, he'd even have someone use the bathroom for him if he could!" Javier laughed and asked, "Does it really feel that great living like a king?"

Levi scratched his head, feeling embarrassed. "Boss, I swear to you that I haven't slacked off regarding the Hachisons. Not even for a single second!"

Javier patted his shoulder, not saying anything else.

Seeing that everyone had already arrived, the next thing Javier had to do was use his connections and strategies to locate Nathaniel. Then, he was going to pull Brian out of the darkness, even pulling out the entire force he was in if possible.

Given his wild ambitions, it was no wonder Javier needed to round up 3,000 people, which was a huge operation.

After all, this movement of his shocked even the Whites.

While Piers was having dinner, Renly suddenly asked in shock, "Grandpa, do you know why Javier made such a huge move?"

Piers, who was still eating, replied, "How am I supposed to know? I'm not an all-knowing God.”

Renly replied with a single “Oh” and then added, “I’ve looked into the matter a little, and I discovered that he seems to have a medical research team in his sights, which is why he’s gone over there.

But...wouldn’t the Kerseys be able to acquire the research team very easily?

“Instead, Javier mobilized 200 men over there, and another 3,000 almost immediately after that. Most importantly, they’re all fully-equipped! What in the world is he trying to do? Start a war?”

Piers put down his utensils and wiped his mouth.

“He’s not waging war against us, so who knows what the man’s thinking...In times of uncertainty, the best way to adapt would be to observe what happens rather than blindly try to get involved. It’s obvious that Javier’s already rounded up men from three families.”

Renly nodded his head. “I understand. He’s trying to say that he’s about to do something very important and nobody is to interfere with him. Otherwise, they’d be making an enemy out of the three families.

“But I still don’t understand it...What could he possibly gain out of all this that would make him even issue a warning to us?”

Renly could not figure out what was happening, while Piers chose not to make any moves. However, as Javier’s grandfather, it was only natural that Zephiel knew what his grandson was doing

In fact, he knew exactly what Javier was planning to do after Mackenzie told him what had happened.

He knew that Javier was not just trying to acquire a company by mobilizing so many men. Instead, Javier was trying to drag out the people hidden in the dark and give them a good beating. After doing that, he was going to cut up a huge chunk of them and bring them into their family’s ranks.

Zephiel was genuinely liking his little fox’s working style more and more.

“The Kerseys will surely grow much more powerful than before with this new family leader in place!”

In fact, Zephiel was so happy that he even hummed a tune in his house...

Meanwhile, Javier was busy working away, coming up with all sorts of ideas to try and uproot Nathaniel’s company.

Unfortunately, Nathaniel’s company, along with Suzanne and the rest, had vanished into thin air without a trace.

This made Javier feel very frustrated because it felt like he was boxing with shadows. Right at that moment, Herschel ran toward him and said, “Boss! Boss! Alyssa called us!” After saying that, Herschel then told Javier that Alyssa had given him a phone call a few minutes ago. Indeed, as expected, Alyssa and the rest had already been taken away. In fact, Nathaniel even seemed very anxious.

They were all being confined at that moment, their location uncertain. However, Alyssa could determine that they were near an airport because she could regularly hear the sound of planes landing. On top of that, there were fighter planes there, as the sounds they made were obviously different from those of commercial planes. Alyssa could also see that there was a mountain in the distance through the window.

Thus, the evidence they had gotten pointed to a mountain and an airport that was used by the military, as well as commercially.

Javier immediately began marking locations on the map. Finally, after he got his subordinates to research the marked locations, they found a single airport that matched the description ... Danvas Airport.

Javier immediately sent his men over there to scout the area before personally leading more than 3,000 men to the same place.

After searching until midnight, they finally got a lead on where Nathaniel and the rest were.

They were on a farm by the suburbs that seemed completely ordinary. On top of that, there was no construction nearby, which allowed them to have a clear view of the horizon.

Recalling that Nathaniel had snipers amongst his ranks, Javier immediately informed Gusman to mobilize an armed helicopter.

That way, the sniper would not pose a problem.

Meanwhile, Gabby picked up a Barrett sniper rifle to attack the enemy sniper.

After they were done clearing the obstructions, 3,000 men surrounded the entire manor.

Throughout the entire takeover, there was no commotion made, as there were not that many gunshots.

When Javier brought his men inside, he just so happened to make Nathaniel throw away his gun before asking the latter to have all his men raise their hands up. Nathaniel then laughed. "If I'd known you're a member of that Kersey Family, I would've just let you buy it. Hell! I would've given it to you as a gift to save myself all the trouble."

Javier pouted his lips. "Who knows? You might've even gotten someone to shoot me for all I know."

Nathaniel laughed. "Yes, there's always that possibility, but I've already surrendered now. I'll tell you everything you want to know." Of course, that was the best-case scenario, as Javier's main objective for mobilizing 3,000 men had been to find out who the force hiding in the shadows was. However, the moment Nathaniel walked over to Javier, someone from Gusman's team suddenly raised his gun and fired at Nathaniel, causing him to fall and lie down on the ground lifelessly.

A moment later, the shooter suddenly turned his gun to Javier.

"Bang!" The shooter whose gun had been trained on Javier had his chest blasted open.

He had obviously died even more efficiently than Nathaniel, so much so that not even God would have been able to save him should he have descended on Earth.

The fact that a single shot had packed so much power was proof enough that the shooter had been shot by an anti-material gun.

Gabby seemed very embarrassed as she stood in the distance. "I'm sorry, Boss.... I should've shot his hands, but I got nervous for a moment there and forgot."