

Episode 459

I'm Returning You All Your Equality Indeed, there were many instances when ruling with an iron fist would be much more effective than speaking nicely. Javier's current situation was one of them.

After being painfully warned, everyone on the bus remained silent. None of them dared to even utter a single word, including Shawn.

Javier sat back down and then turned around to look out of the window.

"Each and every one of you people has been pampered so much that you've all got bad habits...

F*ck!"

Javier had said that very impolitely, yet none of them dared to utter a word.

No matter how unhappy Shawn was inside, he still did not dare utter a single word. Javier's previous mellowness had already made Shawn forget that Javier was a man capable of calling over the local military to save them. However, Shawn had already decided that Javier would be nothing when they returned to the country, where peace prevailed everywhere! In fact, Shawn even silently cursed... 'F*ck you! I'll report you to the police if you so much as touch me once we return!'

Shawn had proven himself to be someone who would only remain patriotic and loyal to his own country at his own convenience.

The moment he had the capability, he headed overseas to work for more money. However, he would immediately return to his country and seek the police's help whenever he was in danger.

He was the kind of trash who wanted to hog all the benefits without putting in equal amounts of effort. Javier even thought that it was only befitting for people like Shawn to be thrown into a plane's engine to be mashed up.

The bus remained silent for the rest of the journey, until they finally arrived at the airport. At that moment, some of them finally recalled the fact that they had no passports. Suzanne asked Javier, "Have you resolved our passport issue?" "There's nothing to be resolved. Just follow me."

After saying that, Javier turned into a tour guide showing his group of tourists around the airport. After he took out his cell phone and verified his identity, the security guards directly allowed everyone to board their flights.

Hence, everyone, including Suzanne, was dumbfounded. They had never known boarding a plane to be exactly like walking through their own garden. All they had to do was line up and go in, bringing along whatever they wanted, as their luggage wouldn't be checked. In fact, a few of them even saw the dagger Herschel was carrying. Could Herschel bring something like that onto the plane? It had already been proven before that it could be done.

Thus, Herschel just walked through the security point as though he was the guards' superior, never so much as being stopped the entire time. However, one of them did end up being stopped, but not by the security guards. Instead, Javier stopped him...

Javier pulled Shawn out of the group as he passed through one of the security points. After everyone passed, Javier told the security guard, "This man somehow managed to sneak into my group. I don't know who he is, but it seems like he's part of a terrorist group. I want you all to search him...thoroughly."

Shawn instantly panicked. A moment ago, he had still been thinking about getting back at Javier when he returned to his country, but he was now being stripped of his right to return!

He wanted to yell out so that the people in front of him would notice what was happening, but Javier instantly swung a punch right at his chest, taking away any sound he could have made. Then, Shawn was forcefully detained by the security guards and dragged away. As for where he was brought and what kind of treatment he was given, that remained unknown. In any case, airports across the world would consider terrorists their public enemy...

Upon entering the plane, everyone was especially shocked. They had all thought this was some airline plane, but it turned out to be a private one. In fact, they found out from a stewardess that this was one of many other planes that the family owned.

This is only one of them?! How many more planes does Javier have back home? Does his family build them?!'

Some of them might have been unhappy about Javier a moment ago, but that feeling vanished without a trace now that they were in a magnificent plane.

Javier then gestured for everyone to enjoy all the facilities provided on the plane. Thus, everyone was very happy, especially after they were told they could enjoy it all for free.

Sitting before the bar, Suzanne asked, "Where's Shawn? I didn't see him board the plane."

Javier gently twirled the wine in his glass and replied, "Shawn said he prefers to stay in this country rather than go back home."

Of course, Suzanne could tell what Javier actually meant, which was why she was panicking a little. "But Shawn's still capable in his own right!"

Javier looked at Suzanne. "What's the point of him being capable when he has such a personality?"

Suzanne was rendered completely speechless. She wanted to argue that Shawn still had some caliber, but the words just would not come out of her mouth.

She knew that Shawn was a man who loved money more than his own country, which was still a shameless characteristic to possess at the end of the day.

Javier replied, "No matter how capable a person is, if they don't possess the right qualities as a human, their capabilities can be rendered mute. I'm not like you...I will not allow anyone like that to exist in my life."

Suzanne was now genuinely speechless. She knew that Javier was indeed making sense, but... "Shawn does indeed have some caliber. In fact, he understands a lot regarding our research team's projects. He's my assistant after all. If some other research team were to take him away, it would cause us a lot of problems.”

Javier deeply agreed with Suzanne’s point of view.

“Yes, I do agree with you on this. Which is why I just made a phone call and had my people take good care of him. I’ll make sure he finds a good place to beg for money so that he doesn’t feel alienated whenever he returns to his country to carry on begging.”

Suzanne could tell that Javier was taking revenge...in a completely blatant fashion...

This was because Shawn had said a moment ago that he would end up begging for money if he returned to his country. Therefore, Javier had made him stay behind in that country to beg for money.

“Javier is responding to Shawn’s words with actions.’

Suzanne now felt that Javier was a little fierce, but not to the point that he was being unreasonable, she concluded as she thought about it deeper.

‘If Shawn hadn’t shown how unpatriotic he is when it comes to his own country, there’s no way Javier would’ve done all this to him.

‘So... From a certain perspective, Shawn indeed brought all this upon himself. He deserves whatever’s coming.’ Thus, their conversation ended there, with neither Javier nor Suzanne bringing it up again.

Even though the other people on the flight noticed that Shawn was missing, none of them dared to say anything about it.

After all, Javier had shown how terrifying he could be by throwing them all off the bus. Therefore, if Javier were to keep on showing how terrifying he was, they might end up being thrown out of the plane and...dying!

Meanwhile, Javier carried on talking with Suzanne about their future partnership by the bar.

Suzanne asked, “What sort of conditions would we have to give you in return if we worked for you?”

Javier could clearly tell that Suzanne was merely being indirect when she asked what kind of conditions she needed to give in return. In truth, she was trying to find out what sort of restrictions she was going to be facing.

However, Javier had already prepared for this long ago.

“You won’t be working for me. It’ll be a partnership instead. I won’t impose any restrictions that would be too crazy, but I will need you all to sign some documents regarding the development of our research. You will all have your own freedom. You may go wherever you want, or even resign should it come to that. “However, I want all of you to finish whatever stage of development you guys are involved in before resigning. Plus, you will all need to sign a non-disclosure agreement. “Aside from that, you may build your labs however you wish, including any tools and facilities. I will be acquiring a medicine-manufacturing company later on, so we’ll be manufacturing the vaccines you’ve all developed ourselves. “At the same time, you will have the rights to your own research, while the patents will be owned by Reivaj Group. However, you will all receive profit accordingly..." The more Javier spoke, the more dumbfounded Suzanne was. In the end, she could not even believe her ears.

'Are you really going to give us such huge benefits?!'

Javier looked at Suzanne's shocked expression and asked, "Isn't this what you all deserve?"

Suzanne did not know what she should say. It was true that they did deserve all those things, but they had never received them before.

Javier then said, "I'm only returning your equality to you." Suzanne, who was deeply touched by this, said very seriously, "Thank you!"
