

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 61

Chapter 61 Manager Interview

The next day, Friday, Davie brought his first choice for the bar manager to interview with Thea. They met at the coffee shop in the village after school.

“Luna,” Davie said when they walked into the coffee shop. Thea stood up from the table she secured. “This is Quinn Alden of High Tide Pack. Quinn, this is New Dawn’s Future Luna, Thea Lyall.”

Thea held out her hand. Quinn extended his hand but stopped short when he caught a whiff of her.

“I apologize,” Thea said. “One of my mates is scenting me because he can. I promise no one will come after you if we shake hands.” The scenting business was taken seriously in the werewolf community. Touch someone who has been scented, and you could end up dead.

Quinn took her hand, and they shook.

“Nice to meet you, Quinn,” Thea said.

“The pleasure is all mine, I’m sure,” he said. He wore a freshly pressed button-down shirt and dress pants, much like Davie always wore. He had sunkissed brown hair in a long crew cut and pretty hazel eyes with long, dark eyelashes.

“Please, sit,” Thea said.

Quinn clocked her Delta guard detail. A server walked up to them and took their orders.

“I’m not familiar with High Tide,” Thea said. “Do you like your pack?”

“Yes. We’re small, but our land is on the coast. The beach is lovely. Most of us work in the city. From what I understand from Davie, we have similar values as New Dawn.”

Thea nodded. “That’s good to hear. I want good business acumen in my manager, but above all, I want to see eye to eye on how the staff is treated and valued,”

Quinn said.

“Absolutely.” Thea described her vision for the bar, its purpose, the expectations for keeping the clientele and staff safe.

“Do you have a mock-up of what the bar will look like?”

“I do,” Thea said. She opened her laptop and pulled up the latest email attachments from Jane. She handed it over to Quinn.

“Wow. You have excellent taste,” Quinn said.

“Thank you, but Jane, the interior designer, deserves the credit,” Thea said.

“I’ve seen Jane’s other projects, and she can only work with the vision her client has. I have to say, being in the industry, this is top tier.”

“That’s kind of a relief,” Thea laughed. “Sometimes, I wonder if I’m surrounded by yes men. It’s nice to hear an opinion from someone who doesn’t know me, especially one with expertise in the field.”

“To be honest, your reputation did precede you, but I’m not giving lip service. I don’t need a job. I’m happy where I am right now, but when Davie approached me and gave me the gist of your plan, I was intrigued. Skeptical. It sounded too good to be true.”

The server came with their coffees.

“First,” Quinn said. He took a sip of his drink. “As an openly gay werewolf, a gay bar for werewolves immediately got my attention. I am well acquainted with the dangers we could encounter. I already have ideas for security. There are a number of security firms in the city with humans and werewolves alike. The humans already know about werewolves. Most have a werewolf mate. They would be immune to any wolfsbane. I’ve found that can be important.”

“Yes,” Thea said. She still got a shiver in her spine and pain in her heart

whenever wolfsbane was brought up.

“Second, I could not be more in line with your vision for the bar, the safety of staff and clientele, the treatment of staff, all of it. However, I have ulterior motives for wanting to be involved. I haven’t found my mate. Your purpose for the bar – helping wolves like me find our mates—I feel a deep connection with that. Can I ask why you felt strongly enough about this to open a bar?”

“I have a friend who is too afraid to come out openly,” Thea said. “It made me realize the culture is wrong. The matebond has been taught wrong. My Alpha and Luna helped me work with the local school to change the curriculum. I believe the matebond’s purpose is to ensure families stay together. Anyone can get pregnant.” She paused for a moment, knowing she might not be able to. “The important thing is to stay with your family. I think that’s what it’s about. Not procreation like it’s taught. So I want to start changing the perception and make it safe for everyone to find their mates. If the goddess gives someone a mate, there’s a reason. We shouldn’t stop them from being together.”

Quinn took another drink.

“After meeting you,” Quinn said. “Getting a feel for you personally, your business instincts, seeing your taste, what’s important to you, I’m not just intrigued. I’m a believer. Davie told me I’d be impressed. I didn’t expect to be. I think he undersold you.”

“Oh, thank you,” Thea said.

“I’m in What do you need from me?” Quinn said

Thea smiled. “What aspects of running a bar have you been involved in? Advertising? Promotion? Hiring, ordering supplies, payroll?”

“All of it. I would recommend hiring a few people who specialize in promoting bars and clubs to boost promotion at first. It’ll be important to start with a bang”

“Sure.” Thea nodded.

“As the business grows, I may need an assistant or an accountant. For the beginning, I can do just about everything”

“You can train staff

“Absolutely. I prefer it. That way, I know everyone has the same information. No one can abuse anyone else. They know to come to me directly if something is amiss.”

“Excellent,” Thea said.

Just then, Maverick came up to Thea and whispered in her ear. “The front gate is calling for you. There’s a group saying the code words.”

“Will you mind link the triplets and Lizzy? Tell them to meet me in the dining hall with food if they’re not busy. Tell Lizzy to bring Alessia if she can.”

Maverick nodded and stepped back.

“I’m so sorry, Quinn,” Thea said. “This must seem so unprofessional, but I have an urgent matter to attend to. If you need to leave, I understand. If you can stay, please do.”

“I can stay, Luna,” Quinn said.

Thea smiled. “Thank you. I don’t know how long this will take. Order whatever you want here. It’s already taken care of. You’re invited to pack dinner. Davie, are you staying?”

“Yes, Luna,”

“Can I ask you to entertain Quinn?”

“Of course,” Davie said.

“I’ll have someone mind link you when I know more,” Thea said.

Thea left with her guard detail.

“You weren’t kidding,” Quinn said to Davie.

“I was not,” Davie said.

“Her aura. It’s magnificent.”

“She’s not even at her full strength right now. She almost died a month ago.” Davie breathed in, remembering. He told him what had happened. “She’s still not recovered.”

“I can’t imagine,” Quinn said. “There’s a goodness in her. Light. She glows.”

“It’s usually even stronger. You should’ve seen the mating ceremony. She lit the dais up. She had the future Alphas glowing right along with her, maybe the whole pack. I’ve never experienced anything like it. She’s smart as a whip and has the biggest heart. She uncovered a ring of abuse at her school. Alphas and shifted Alphas-to-be have been using their Alpha tone to rape she-wolves and force them to keep silent. That’s what she’s doing right now. She offered protection for any of the victims. Anyone being mistreated can join our Our pack.”

Quinn’s eyebrows shot up for a second.

“I’m not easily shocked,” Quinn said. “I don’t think I’ve ever heard of this kind of thing happening—a leader opening the doors, taking on the responsibility to protect people outside their pack, assuming the risk of retaliation. She can’t let injustice go unpunished, can she?”

“She’s a force of nature.”

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 62

Chapter 62 First Wave

Thea went with her guards to the garage, and they drove to the gates. A group of people stood just outside the entrance. She recognized some of them from the conversation at lunch earlier that week. She approached them, Delta team flanking her.

“We brought our families,” one of the girls she recognized from school said.

Thea nodded. “I’m glad you were able to make it out. I’m Thea, the future Luna of New Dawn.

Come here. Tell me who you are.”

They came forward, heads bowed. The girls introduced their families.

“You have nothing to fear here,” Thea said. “We’re going to take you inside, get you a warm meal, then show you to your rooms. You can shower, get some fresh clothes. See the pack doctor. Everything will be provided for you. Then when you’re comfortable, you can decide if you want to join the pack.”

Tears poured down their faces. Thea felt the relief and hope in them. She knew this took the last bit of life, hope, and trust that some of them had. One didn’t have hope at all. She just went along with it because she had no fight left. She would see there was reason to have hope soon enough.

“Come, get in the cars. We’ll take you to the pack house,” Thea said.

They followed timidly.

A few minutes later, they walked into the dining hall. The triplets, Lizzy, and Alessia, were waiting, smiling “Welcome,” they said together. The group bowed their heads to their potential leaders. They could tell the triplets were Alphas just by looking at them. “Come, sit.”

Thea introduced them, and servers brought out food for them. They ate wearily but hungrily as if they weren’t sure when they would eat again.

“We’ll have pack dinner soon too,” Thea said.

When they finished their plates, Thea, the triplets, Lizzy, and Alessia took the group of refugees to the block of rooms set aside for them. The families wanted to stay together, and the individuals were afraid to stay alone. They let them choose their roommates, then assigned them rooms, showed them the room of clothes, the showers, the pack doctor, everything. A few of the families and several individuals had been slaves. It had been a long time since they were given the opportunity to shower.

“My room is right here,” Alessia said. “If you have any questions, feel free to come to me.”

“Thank you, Alessia,” Thea said.

The newcomers were shocked that the Luna thanked an omega, but they didn’t say anything.

“If you want, you can just relax, settle in,” Thea said. “Pack dinner is in a little less than an hour.”

Alessia, will you bring them ?”

“Yes, Luna.”

“I’ll see you all soon,” Thea said.

She had Maverick mind link Davie.

“Luna, they’re touring the village, currently in the Apothecary shop,” Maverick said.

“When they finish, have them come to the dining hall.”

Maverick’s eyes glazed over. “They’re on their way.”

A few minutes later, Davie and Quinn met Thea in the dining hall.

“I’m so sorry for the interruption,” Thea said.

“No problem. I completely understand,” Quinn said.

“Thank you for staying.”

“Of course.”

They sat down at a table.

“So, going back to what we were talking about,” Thea said. “The big thing is that I don’t know what I don’t know. It may shock you, me being a high school senior, but I’ve never done this before.”

Quinn laughed at her levity.

“It sounds like you’ll run the bar the way I envision it,” Thea said.

“I’m certain our standards and values align,” Quinn said.

“And you’ll make up for everything I don’t see yet.”

“I know my way around the business. I’ll teach you the things you don’t know about yet.”

Thea smiled. “If possible, I’d like to watch some of the hiring, the training, show I’m invested. Once I’m comfortable, I’ll be as hands-off as you want. I want to be kept in the loop on what’s going on—what you need, what everyone needs, and how everything is going—but I don’t want to be an overbearing presence or micromanage anything. You will have nearly full autonomy.”

“Absolutely,” Quinn said. “I’ll keep detailed records on all metrics, and I’ll be able to show you concretely how the bar is doing. From customer satisfaction, employee satisfaction, if there are any incidents, how they were handled, what's being done to handle or avoid it in the future."

"Sounds perfect. Aside from having someone with experience to run the ship, I also need a manager because I won't have the time to commit to making it run properly. As this afternoon has demonstrated."

Quinn nodded. "I would feel honored to run this ship for you so you can do what you do here. It seems pretty special."

Thea's eyes twinkled, and Quinn's heart skipped a beat. He'd never had that reaction to a woman before. It wasn't sexual attraction but the seeds of adoration being planted deep inside him. What kind of magic did this woman have?

"Anything you need from me, I will be available to you," Thea said. "We'll trade contact info. As I'm thinking about it, I would like all staff to get basic self-defense training. Confidence training if necessary. May be equipped with pepper spray, a taser, whatever they feel comfortable using if the need arises. I want everyone to be as safe as possible."

"I can see to that," Quinn said.

"At some point, I may send people your way to interview for jobs," Thea said. "People who have re cently joined my pack. If they aren't a good fit, I'll understand. I want the bar to run well, and they may not have the confidence. I want to build them up, but that's not your responsibility."

"Are you talking about the refugees you're taking in?" Quinn said.

"Yes," Thea said. "Did Davie fill you in?"

"Yes."

"I just realized it may put another layer of risk to employ them there. If their former packs want to retaliate, they could do it at the bar," Thea said.

"We'll have excellent security, to rival an average pack's warriors," Quinn said. "I wouldn't let the risk stop me from hiring them. Plus, if they know you're the owner, they could attack the bar regardless of if their former pack members work there."

"Right," Thea said. "Are you okay assuming this level of risk and danger? It's not your obligation or responsibility."

"I believe in this cause," Quinn said. "And I believe in you. With your permission and support, I'll make sure the bar, the staff, the patrons, and myself are safe."

"You have my permission and support in that,"

Thea said.

“I also believe in lifting people up. I’d be honored to have your refugees join the staff and learn to be confident and have autonomy.”

Thea smiled. “I feel good about you,” she said. “If you want some time to think it over — ”

“I don’t need time,” Quinn said.

“We can get contracts drawn up with our pack lawyers, make sure we’re both happy with terms, pay, benefits, everything.”

“Perfect.”

“In your opinion, how long before you think the bar can be profitable?” Thea said.

“I’ll have to look at the numbers in detail, but I think we’ll make back what you’ll put into getting it up and running within a year. Then everything will be profit after that.”

“That sounds optimistic,” Thea said.

“I’m optimistic,” Quinn said. “I think this is needed, and if we do it right, it’s going to be very successful on all fronts.”

They went through a few more business details.

Then people started piling in for pack dinner. The triplets found Thea.

“Quinn, these are my mates,” Thea said. “The future Alphas of New Dawn, Alaric, Conri, and Kai Valko.” She pointed to each one in turn then turned back to Quinn. “This is Quinn Alden. He’s going to be the manager of the bar.”

Thea felt the possessiveness flaring through the matebond. Quinn was a handsome, well-kempt, well-dressed man.

“Guys,” Thea thought. “If anything, I should be feeling possessive of you. He’s gay.”

The triplets relaxed, and each shook Quinn’s hand.

They made small talk for a minute, then Alessia walked in with the newcomers. Thea and the triplets excused themselves and met Alessia and her group in the middle.

“How are you all feeling?” Alaric said.

“Very good, Alpha,” one of the girls from school said. She seemed to be the designated speaker for the group.

“Have you made a decision on if you want to join the pack?” Thea said.

“Yes, we do.”

The triplets took turns going through the process with them. They each rejected their former pack. Then the triplets said the words to accept them into New Dawn. Everyone in the room was mesmerized as they felt the bond take hold, the new life added to the pack.

They saw the new members grow and brighten. With Thea standing next to them, they realized the new pack members started to resemble Thea’s bright aura. The older members remembered experiencing the same thing when Thea was born. The whole pack had a glow they didn’t see in other packs. Something clicked inside some of their minds.

Their pack had magic, and it was because of Thea. That night, those people told their children to pay attention. Something special was happening

They warned them not to tell anyone outside their pack because bad people may want to take it from them.

The old members welcomed the new members to the pack table. They introduced themselves and talked with them throughout dinner.

Thea took her seat, sitting on Conri's lap. Alpha Ulric and Luna Ada took their seats, and dinner was served.

Quinn leaned over to Davie.

"Did those people grow when they were accepted into the pack?" Quinn said just loudly enough for Davie to hear.

"You caught that, huh? Don't tell anyone outside this pack, but we're pretty sure Thea is goddess gifted."

"I thought she hasn't shifted," Quinn said.

"She may be a gifted human," Davie said.

"Fascinating. I'm glad you thought of me for this job. This is life-changing."

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 63

Chapter 63 Symphony Date Night

Saturday morning, Thea woke up to three identical faces staring at her.

"Hi," she said.

Conri ran his fingers over the skin of her leg. Kai traced her collar bone, and Alaric caressed her bare belly.

"How are you feeling?" Kai said.

"Pretty good right now."

“How’s your energy?” Alaric said.

“Good, I think.”

“Are you up for a date today?” Conri said.

“A date?”

“We’ve never taken you out properly. If you’re feeling up to it, we’d like to,” Alaric said.

“Where are you taking me?”

“We did some planning yesterday,” Conri said.

“We got permission from our dad and Delta team to take you for an overnight in Seattle. We can do some sightseeing, check into one of our hotels downtown, go to a nice restaurant, then go to the symphony, stay the night, and come back Sunday.” O

“Wow,” Thea said. “That sounds amazing. I don’t think I have anything to wear to the symphony.”

“Doris is on it,” Kai said. He kissed his mark.

Thea smiled. “When do we leave?”

“Whenever you’re ready. We packed bags yesterday. Delta team is prepped and ready,” :

Alaric said.

“Let’s go!” Thea said.

The triplets got up and helped her out of bed. They showered quickly and got dressed. Thea grabbed her makeup bag, curling iron, other things the triplets may not have packed.

“I need to bring these too. Did anyone pack condoms?” Thea said.

“Yes,” Conri said.

Liam drove the SUV while the four sat in the back, making out. The rest of Delta team drove several other SUVs ahead and behind their vehicle.

They hit the main sights in Seattle, then checked into one of the luxury hotels the Valko’s owned. They took the top floor of suites to accommodate the entire Delta team. After Delta made the sweeps, Thea and the triplets got ready for dinner.

Thea put on makeup, curled her hair then tucked the curls into a chignon. She had a lot of long hair, so the chignon was full and luxurious.

She put on the dress Doris made for the occasion. It was a gorgeous, backless, silk turquoise trumpet cut evening gown with a sweep train and plunging neckline. Doris was stocking up on turquoise materials specifically for Thea. It was her color. The gown hung off her body perfectly, accentuating every feature while highlighting her striking eyes. O

The triplets were speechless for a full minute when she came out.

“How did you get your hair to do this?” Conri said. “It’s gorgeous.”

Thea smiled. “A lot of bobby pins?”

“It’s so intricate,” Kai said.

“You look stunning,” Alaric said.

“Yes,” Conri and Kai said.

“I love that I can see so much of your mark,” Alaric said.

“You guys clean up nicely too,” Thea said. “I like you in monkey suits.”

They escorted her out the door, and Delta team did a double-take when they saw her. They knew their Luna was gorgeous, but she never drew attention to it.

Dinner was an experience of a lifetime—a twelve-course modern tasting menu procured by the chef specifically for them. He employed molecular gastronomy and performance art in each course. They bought out the dinner service, so it was just the triplets, Thea, and the whole Delta team enjoying the amazing food. Thea and the triplets were happy to treat the Delta team to something rare. They were so serious all the time. They would never take the time to do something like this for themselves.

The symphony was next. They bought out an entire box to accommodate their party. The journey up to their box turned into an exercise in restraint for the triplets. Everyone gawked at Thea in her gown. She looked like a supermodel on a fashion runway. She was tall-statuesque beautiful and surrounded by handsome men. People whispered to each other, wondering who she was, if she was famous, if they should recognize her. Axel, Caleb, and Damon were itching to tear apart the people who looked at Thea. The triplets were tense, reigning them in to keep them from clawing out the eyes of every man that ogled Thea.

Thea, of course, was oblivious to the attention. Maybe because she didn't expect it. Maybe because she never noticed that kind of thing. Maybe because she was used to Delta team following her around, watching her every move. Maybe because she was too occupied taking in her surroundings.

"This building is gorgeous," Thea whispered. "I'll always prefer the woods, but I see the appeal of the city."

The triplets didn't respond. They had to maintain control of their wolves.

Part of Delta team went ahead of them to clear the box. Owen came out and gave them the signal to join them.

Thea sat on Conri's lap with Kai and Alaric on either side. The symphony members were gathering on stage, tuning and rehearsing individually.

"I've never had to try so hard not to growl,"

Alaric whispered to her.

"Why?" Thea said.

"Everyone was ogling you," Kai said.

"Didn't you hear them talking about you?" Conri said. "Caleb wanted to tear them apart."

"No. I was too busy enjoying this wonderful date my mates planned for me," Thea said. She kissed each of her mates. They each put their lips to their marks. They started to relax as they soaked in the sparks it sent coursing through them. The lights lowered, and the symphony went quiet. The triplets each put a hand on Thea but sat back in their chairs to watch the performance.

It was a magnificent production of beautiful masterpieces. It started with Danse Macabre by Saint Saëns, followed by Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, then Rimsky-Korsakov's Scheherazade. The final piece before intermission was Tchaikovsky's Capriccio Italien. It was so moving, so expressive. Conri and Thea both shed tears.

"I didn't know music could be that moving," Thea said during intermission. "I felt it vibrating through my whole body."

"The composers of classical music are geniuses," Conri said, "Their brains must work differently. They create an experience. You feel the vibrations, and they're real. It's not just a stereo with digital sound waves. The building resonated with the instruments here I felt it inside my body,"

"These instruments are capable of so much more expression than an electric guitar," kai said. "I don't think I could handle experiencing this every day. It's sensory overload."

"It's an amazing date night, though," Thea said, She leaned over and kissed him They stood up. She kissed Conri and wiped the tears from his cheeks.

She hugged and kissed Alaric. "Are you liking it?"

Thea said

"Yes. I don't have words. It's amazing. Are you having a good time?"

She smiled, "The best."

They walked around the box. Thea noticed many of the Delta team members were wiping tears from their eyes.

When the lights dimmed, signaling it was time to take their seats, Thea sat in Kai's lap. She held Alaric's and Conri's hands on either side. The stage was rearranged during intermission to accommodate the added choir for their final piece of the evening, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The program notes explained it was the ne plus ultra of symphonic works. After the performance, they understood why.

"I know pop music of any genre can get your body moving and change your mood. There's something entirely different about a group of hundreds of trained, professional musicians coming together and bringing to life something so intricate and epic. This was on another level. It felt spiritual," Kai said. O

"Yes," Thea said. "These musicians have devoted their lives to music. It was more than an auditory experience. They activated every sense. I feel like they created a connection between their souls and ours. That was such an amazing experience. I had no idea it could be so powerful. Maybe we should start an orchestra at the school."

She wiped Conri's cheeks again. Kissed him. She turned in Kai's lap.

"Thank you for bringing me here," Thea said. "Today was amazing. This was amazing." She kissed him. Then she leaned over and kissed Alaric.

They arrived back at the hotel, and Delta team did a sweep of the entire floor.

"It's clear," Liam said.

"Thank you," Thea said.

They entered their room. A beautiful tray of desserts awaited them.

"Did you get the same for the other rooms?" Thea said.

"Of course," Kai said. "And Delta team knows they can order whatever they want from room service."

"My wonderful mates," Thea said.

“It’s so nice to hear you say those words,” Conri said.

“What words?”

“That we’re you’re mates. You doubted it for so long,” Conri said.

“My mates,” she said. “My perfect, sexy, thoughtful mates.”

They surrounded her, each taking their place to access their marks.

“You’re so beautiful,” Alaric said. He lightly kissed his mark.

“I can’t believe you didn’t notice everyone staring at you tonight,” Kai said. He brushed his lips across his mark.

“I can,” Alaric said. “You never pay attention to your surroundings. It’s why I offer my arm to lead you around when you’re walking. Otherwise, you’d run into things.” He went back to caressing her mark with his lips, his hands on her hips. Thea smiled. She loved that Alaric paid enough attention to her, knew her well enough, and cared enough to do that.

“I think I don’t pay attention to where I’m going because I know I don’t have to. Thank you for always taking care of me. Making me happy. Making sure I’m always safe. Letting me be me,” Thea said. She kissed the side of his head.

Alaric looked up from his mark. She leaned in to kiss him, and he met her lips with his.

“It was difficult to hold in my jealousy tonight,” Conri said. He nibbled his mark.

“What’s to be jealous of?” Thea thought while she kissed Alaric. “I’m not looking back at them. I’m yours. You’re mine. No one else matters.”

“Mmm,” Conri said. “Easier said than done.”

“What do you and Caleb need to feel better, hmm?” Thea thought.

“To taste you, feel you,” Conri said.

“That can be arranged. What about you, Kai? Damon?”

“I know you’re mine, but Damon wants to sleep next to you,” Kai said.

“Consider it done,” Thea thought. “Ric? Axel?”

(

“This is perfect,” Alaric said, breaking their kiss to say it. He went right back to kissing her.

“Good,” Thea thought. “Because I never want to stop.”

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 64

Chapter 64 Her Wolf For the Pack?

Back at New Dawn, Thea and the triplets checked in on the new members at pack dinner. They looked healthier, happier. Clean. Relaxed. They were developing confidence. They smiled. They laughed. They had a glow about them. Thea was pleased to see other pack members including them and talking with them.

“Is it my imagination, or are they taller than they were a few days ago?” Thea said when they were in their room for the night.

“Alessia looks a lot different for sure,” Alaric said. “Taller, more filled out.”

“Do you think just by joining our pack they get whatever magic is latent in the pack? Or is it just that we treat them differently here? They can stand at their full height without being afraid of repercussions?” Thea said.

“That wouldn’t explain how they’ve filled out. They were skeletal only days ago,” Conri said.

“Could be your goddess gift,” Kai said. 1

“The witch said I didn’t have magic,” Thea said, shaking her head.

“That’s why they left me there instead of taking me with them.”

“I thought you believed you were goddess gifted,” Conri said. “What about what happened at the oath ceremony? The goddess herself was there. The things she said. You must know you're special."

"I know what we experienced during the oath ceremony," Thea said.

"The goddess did something to the men in the room. You all grew taller and fuller. She said things, but she never said I had magic. I know everyone says when we were born, the pack was blessed somehow. Maybe the goddess blessed the pack, not me-like she blessed the men during the ceremony. The more I think about it, the more it feels like there's something special about our pack, not me. I don't even have a wolf."

wolf to bless the pack?" Conri said.

"Now I do," Thea said.

"We don't know how this stuff works," Alaric said.

"I don't want to think about it anymore," Thea said, shifting gears. She ran her hands up Alaric's chest and into his hair. "I want to think about more pleasant things. What can I do to thank you all for such a wonderful weekend?"

"You don't need to do anything, my love. I'm just glad we finally were able to take you on a date," Alaric said. He bent down and kissed her. Kai and Conri came up behind and started kissing their marks.

Thea unbuckled Alaric's pants and broke their kiss to push them down along with his boxers. She stayed down, got on her knees, and took him into her mouth.

"Are you okay to do this?" Alaric said. Because of the injuries from being strangled and having her carotid cut, she had to be careful with her throat and couldn't do this since the attack.

Thea nodded. "My throat and neck feel good," she thought to them.

Alaric took off his shirt then ran his fingers through Thea's hair as he smiled down at her. She looked up at him, encouraged by the look of love in his eyes. She loved feeling him grow and harden inside her mouth, feeling his arousal build.

“I love the way you taste,” she thought. “I missed this.”

“Me too, my love,” Alaric said.

After she primed Alaric, she turned to Kai and undid his pants. He lifted his shirt off and watched her work him into a frenzy. They could feel how much she wanted this, how turned on she got from it. It enhanced the experience on their end immensely.

When she turned to Conri, he was already hard. She took him in her mouth, but he pulled her up after only a moment and kissed her.

“You are the sexiest woman on the planet,” Conri said.

She smiled against his mouth and lifted her arms so they could take her dress off. They obliged, quickly divesting her of all her clothes, not even stopping to appreciate the matching lace underwear.

“Show me how sexy I am,” Thea said.

Six hands roamed her body, tingles everywhere they touched. Three hard lengths pressed against her. Her tongue tangled with Conri’s. Kai and Alaric kissed and sucked their marks until Alaric’s patience ran out, and he turned Thea toward himself. He loved kissing her. Loved facing her head-on.

When Kai’s patience ran out, he carried her to the bed and threw her legs over his shoulders. While he ate her out, Conri and Alaric played with her top half, alternating areas. Thea reached her boiling point and threw all her mates off her.

“Condoms. Kai and Con, now,” she said.

Foils were torn open, and condoms rolled on. Thea grabbed Kai and put him on his back on the bed. She mounted him, guided his cock inside her, then kissed him. She reached for Conri and pulled him behind her. He quickly worked her backside into submission and took his place inside her. Thea pulled Alaric to her face and held his cock against her cheek for a moment. She looked up at him, rubbed it against her face before taking it into her mouth.

Kai rubbed her clit while he and Conri gently pumped in and out. Alaric palmed her breasts and pulled on her nipples as she sucked and stroked him with her hand. Once Thea had a few orgasms, Conri finished and pulled out. He laid on his back, watching and feeling Thea go wild through the matebond. He kept a hand on her leg, caressing, and shooting sparks wherever he touched.

“Where do you want to finish, Ric?” Thea said. She licked him like a lollipop.

He bent down and kissed her mouth. “In your sweet pussy, my love,” he said. She smiled. He went to the drawers to put on a condom.

Thea rode Kai. He sat up and latched onto his mark on her shoulder. She sucked on his marking spot until they both came and she molded herself to him as she came down.

“I love you,” Thea said on a sigh.

Kai flipped Thea over so he was on top of her.

“I love you,” Kai whispered, then he pulled out and rolled over.

Alaric settled on top of her. He took a nipple into his mouth and sucked, tugged, then came up and kissed her mouth. He pumped in and out of her until she was crying out his name. When she started coming, he let himself release inside her, and they rode out their orgasms together.

They all cooled down, cleaned up, then went to bed, cuddling close.

They only slept for a few hours before feral, violent growling woke the triplets.

Their first thought was to protect Thea. They all moved to put her behind them, but they only felt air when they reached for her. They looked and felt around for her, but nothing was there.

Thea was gone.

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 65

Chapter 65 Howling at the Moon

The triplets felt the cold spot where Thea should have been.

“Thea!” Conri yelled out. “Where are you?”

No one responded. Something was on the ground beyond the foot of the bed, growling violently.

The door burst open, and four Delta team members rushed in. Garrin turned on the light when he entered.

The sight before them shocked them all. A wolf stuck in mid-shift, growling instead of screaming in pain. The Delta team members looked at the triplets in bed to the mound of misshapen fur on the floor.

“Who is it?” Garrin said. “Where’s the Luna? I don’t feel her anymore.”

“I still feel her, but she’s fading,” Conri said. “Is that, is it Thea?”

“I think so,” Kai said. “I felt her pain when I woke up before she started fading. Relax, darling. Just let go. Let it happen.”

“Why does it feel like she’s disappearing?” Alaric said. “Thea!”

He was answered with a violent growl and the sound of popping joints and breaking bones.

Suddenly, with a final roar, the mound of fur seemed to explode, Thea’s presence disappeared completely, and a huge wolf stood before them. It shook out its silver-white coat. There were patches where the undercoat was black, right where the white patches were on the triplets’ wolves—the paws, tail, and chest. The eyes were black, not turquoise. Thea wasn’t in there.

“Thea?” Conri said even though he knew he didn’t feel her anymore.

The wolf jumped up onto the bed and towered over the sitting triplets. She sniffed Alaric. Pushed his face up with her snout. Licked his neck. She turned to Conrí, sniffed and licked him, then turned to Kai and sniffed him.

“Is Thea in there?” Kai said to the white wolf in mind link.

She pushed his chest with her paw until he was flat on his back on the bed. She brought her head close to Kai’s, looking him in the eye like she was trying to push her thoughts into him. The wolf couldn’t use words, and Thea wasn’t in there to talk.

“Where’s Thea?” Kai said out loud.

The wolf growled in frustration, jumped off the bed, and padded out of the room. Everyone followed her. Maverick mind linked the rest of Delta team, woke them up, and told them to follow. The triplets mind linked their parents.

The wolf was outside in no time, running through the woods, flanked by Delta team and the triplets in wolf form.

“What’s going on?” Conri mind linked everyone.

“No idea,” Garrin replied.

“The wolf isn’t talking. I don’t know if she can. Thea’s not in there,” Kai said. “Why isn’t she in there?”

No one knew

The white wolf stopped in a clearing. She looked up at the full moon and howled.

Alpha Ulric and Luna Ada caught up with the group a few minutes later. The white wolf was still howling like she was yelling at the moon, trying to get the moon goddess to hear her. Alpha Ulric shifted to his human form and tried an Alpha command to get her to shift. The white wolf didn’t stop howling, and she didn’t shift.

“Dad, I don’t think she has a human form to shift to,” kai said over mind link

“What happened?” Alpha Ulric said,

“I’m not sure. We were sleeping,” Alaric said in mind link to everyone.

“We woke up to this wolf shifting in our room. Thea was gone. We felt her less and less as the wolf was trying to shift. When she finished her shift, I couldn’t feel Thea at all anymore.”

“I think this is Thea’s wolf, but Thea’s gone,”

Conri said in mind link.

“I don’t think she can mind link,” Kai said. “She tried in our room, but I got nothing. Maybe they need their humans to use language.”

“Her markings match yours,” Alpha Ulric said. “She feels like your mate, but she doesn’t feel like Thea.”

“What is she howling for?” Luna Ada said.

Kai, in wolf form, approached the silver-white wolf. Conri’s and Alaric’s wolves followed. They sat surrounding her and started howling along with her. As their voices united, their connection strengthened. Even though the wolf couldn’t use words, they knew she was calling out for Thea. They felt it. Delta team joined in, then Alpha Ulric and Luna Ada.

It wasn’t long before the entire pack was awake. Whether the noise itself woke them, or the need to call Thea back, everyone was awake and missing Thea. Everyone called out for her.

Something started happening. Everyone felt it. The people in the clearing saw a bright light descending on the white wolf. It merged with her, then seemed to explode, sending the light throughout the pack lands.

Everyone inside the pack lands felt and saw the light go through them. Suddenly they felt Thea again.

The white wolf stopped howling and collapsed.

Axel, Caleb, and Damon approached the white wolf. They sniffed her, then nudged her with their snouts. She didn’t wake. They shifted back to their human forms and knelt beside her. Conri stroked her back soothingly.

“Come on, baby,” Conri said. “Wake up.” He dug his fingers into her fur and shook her gently.

Alaric caressed the wolf’s snout. “Thea? Are you in there, my love? It’s time to wake up.”

Kai placed his hand on her paw. He knew wolves found that annoying. He hoped it would wake her up. It didn’t.

“Please, darling,” Kai said. He squeezed her paw in his hands. “Why won’t she wake up?”

Alpha Ulric and Luna Ada joined them in their human forms.

“I feel Thea in there,” Conri said.

“Me too,” Alaric and Kai said.

“Yes,” Alpha Ulric said. “She’s in there.”

The white wolf started to ripple, and suddenly it was Thea lying on the ground, naked.

“Oh, thank goddess,” Luna Ada said.

Everyone breathed a sigh of relief.

“Does anyone have clothes?” Alaric said.

Delta team wolves ran off into the woods to find something. A few came back with shorts. Anders came back with a shirt.

The triplets put the clothes on the unconscious Thea. Then Kai picked her up in his arms and carried her through the woods toward the pack house, Alaric and Conri on either side of him. Luna Ada and Alpha Ulric shifted back to their wolf form and trotted ahead, leading the way. Delta team surrounded Thea and the triplets, guarding their Luna in her vulnerable state.

Several of them mind linked the pack doctor.

“I’ll be in the infirmary in five minutes,” Dr. Boman mind linked back.

Kai kept whispering, “Please be okay. Please be okay. Please, Thea.”

Please be okay.”

When they reached the infirmary, the doctor met them at the door.

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 66

Chapter 66 Waking Up

“Follow me,” Dr. Boman said. He led them to one of the infirmary rooms, “Put her down here, please.” He pointed to a hospital bed with machines and IV stands around it.

Kai placed her gently on the bed. The doctor started an examination.

Lifted her eyelids, shined a light in her eyes.

“What happened?” Dr. Boman said as he continued his examination. Alaric gave him the play-by-play.

“I never realized her aura permeated the entire pack until it was gone,” Dr. Boman said. “Something woke me up, and I felt the need to call out for her. Then a light shot through the room, through me, and I felt her presence again. She holds the pack up. Like she’s the oxygen in the air we breathe.” O

Delta team nodded, agreeing.

“I’ve never heard of anything like this,” Dr. Boman said. “Shifting after the eighteenth birthday. After being marked and mated. Then whatever happened tonight. It certainly is not how shifting usually works. I don’t know what’s going on, but her vitals are strong.”

“Is she fighting her wolf?” Conri said.

“I don’t know,” Dr. Boman said. “Could be. It seems like there was drama with her shift, with it not happening on her birthday and whatever happened tonight. Maybe she and her wolf don’t get along. Maybe it’s as simple as that. Whatever it is, we have to wait for her to regain consciousness.”

“She will, right?” Kai said. “Wake up?”

“I think so,” Dr. Boman said.

The triplets pulled chairs over and sat around Thea, holding onto her.

Delta team left to give them privacy. Just her guard detail and the Alpha and Luna stayed.

Kai laid his head on her. He started whispering her name, and he didn’t stop until she started to stir some time later.

“Thea?” Kai said. He sat up.

Thea groaned.

“Hey, babe, how are you?” Conri said, rubbing her leg.

“I feel like I’ve been hit by a bus,” she said. She opened her eyes and saw a group of people she didn’t recognize around her. Something smelled amazing. “Where am I?”

“The infirmary, my love,” someone said.

She looked toward the sexy voice and noticed its owner was holding her hand. He had piercing, crystal blue eyes, dark hair in a crew cut, a chiseled face, and lots and lots of muscle.

Another man who looked just like him held her other hand. The only difference was his hair. He had a messy pompadour. One more identical man, this one with long hair, had his hand on her leg. Everywhere they touched, sparks erupted and sent pleasure through her. It was nice—really nice—but it didn’t seem normal.

“Who are you?” she said. She took her hands from the identical men and rubbed them together in front of her chest.

The matching men’s faces fell. They looked at another, bigger man who stood at the foot of her bed.

“Dad?” the one with the long hair said. The bigger man shook his head.

identical men backed out of the way. “Do you know your name?”

She thought about it then shook her head.

“I’m Doctor Boman,” the doctor said. “Do you remember anything?”

“No,” she said.

“Okay,” Dr. Boman said. “Nothing to worry about. Amnesia can be temporary. We’ll just have to wait and hope your memories return. I’m going to give you a neurological exam.”

Thea nodded. The doctor had her follow his finger, shined a light in her eyes, and a few other things. She didn’t feel sparks when the doctor touched her.

“Everything looks good,” the doctor said. “How do you feel?”

“Tired,” she said. “Achy. What happened to me?”

“We don’t know,” Dr. Boman said.

That wasn’t reassuring.

“You don’t know like I’m a stranger you found on the side of the road and took in like a stray cat?”

.

Thea said.

“No. You live here. We know you,” Dr. Boman said. “I just don’t know what’s going on with you.”

“What happened to me?” Thea said.

“You shifted for the first time tonight, but the circumstances were abnormal,” Dr. Boman said. “Now you don’t remember anything. This has never happened before.”

“Shifted?”

“You got your wolf,” Dr. Boman said.

“Huh?” Thea said. “Is that code for something?”.

Dr. Boman looked at her for a moment, thinking.

“True or false,” Dr. Boman said. “Magic is real.”

Thea chuckled. “False,” she said. “Do people with amnesia usually get that wrong?”

Dr. Boman ignored her question. “Who was the first president of the United States?” he said.

“George Washington.”

“What’s the square root of pi?”

“One point seven seven two four five.”

“How old are you?”

Thea paused. She tried to find an answer, but there was nothing there to find. “I don’t know.”

Dr. Boman asked a few more questions then stopped

“It seems your amnesia is selective. You don’t remember anything about your life, but you have the basic knowledge of human things.” 2

“Like her wolf side got cut out?” the long-haired man said.

“I really have no idea,” Dr. Boman said..

“Human things?” Thea said. “You say that like we’re not human.”

“Doctor?” the man with the crew cut said.

“We’ll have to wait and see if she gets her memories back,” Dr. Boman said.

The three identical men stared at her. She thought she could sense their emotions. They were scared, sad, anxious. They wanted to hold her. It was overwhelming.

“They’re our mates, Thea,” a voice in her head said.

“What?” she thought. “What are mates? And why do I hear voices in my head?”

The identical men looked like they wanted to say something, but the one with the crew cut stopped them.

“I’m Zoe, your wolf,” the voice said.

“Wolf? Why is everyone talking about wolves?”

“We’re werewolves.”

e were

Thea suddenly had a headache. “I’m too tired for this,” she said.

“Okay. Sleep then,” Zoe said.

Thea fell asleep almost instantly. The next time she woke up, the identical men were still in the room, but they were each sleeping in chairs.

She

could hear their heartbeats, and she thought that was odd.

“Zoe?” she said in her mind.

“Yeah, I’m here, Thea,” Zoe said in her mind.

“That’s so weird.”

“You’ll get used to it.”

“I’m not sure I want to. Wouldn’t that make me a crazy person?” Thea thought.

“You’re not crazy. Just give it some time.” O

“Why can’t I remember anything?”

“It’s a long story.”

“I don’t think I have anything else to do. Do you?”

Zoe gave her a rundown about werewolves and mates.

“Those three gorgeous men are your mates,” Zoe said. “You can trust them.”

“A voice in my head tells me I can trust three strangers. Sounds reliable,”

Thea said to Zoe in her mind. “Is that why I felt those tingles where they touched me?”

“Yes, and they are what smells good.”

“Why do they look the same?”

“They’re identical triplets.”

“Is that normal?”

“Nothing about you or them is normal.”

“Oh boy,” Thea thought.

“Multiple births are rare in werewolves,” Zoe said. “We have fast pregnancies. Too fast to support multiple births- they almost always end badly. The pups are either deficient in some way, or they don’t survive.”

“That seems like quite a design flaw.”

“It served a purpose for a long time. Long pregnancies were difficult to survive in a more primitive world. When a female is pregnant, she can’t shift into her wolf to fight. We’ve had a lot of predators over the centuries that would take advantage of that, including rival packs. The goddess sped up our pregnancies for our protection.”

“But there’s a downside to everything.”

“Yes. A fast pregnancy can only support one pup. That’s why our DNA is programmed to only send one egg at a time.”

“Then how do these triplets exist? They look healthy.”

“The goddess knew you would need a lot of protection,” Zoe said. “She split the egg into three, so you would have three mates to grow up with, who would love you and do anything for you. They’re healthy because your magic made them develop perfectly.” O

“Excuse me,” Thea said in her mind. “Did you say magic?”

“Yes. We have something called a goddess gift. Every so often, when it’s needed, the moon goddess gifts one of her children with extra magic.”

“Moon goddess,” Thea said in her mind. “That feels familiar.”

“Good,” Zoe said. “It should.”

“Keep talking. Why don’t I remember anything?”

“Some bad people wanted to take our magic. I had to hide it. The only way to do that for sure was to leave you. When the bad people came for you, all they saw was a human. Once I knew we were safe, I came back. Except that’s not how these things work. I broke our bond when I left. When I came back, I kind of forced my way in, and I ended up kicking you out. I think you went to the moon goddess. I called out for you and asked the moon goddess to bring you back and fix what I broke. I was just trying to keep you safe after all—it wasn’t your fault. Everyone in the pack joined in, asking for you back. Here you are, so it must have worked. Do you remember anything?” 1

“No,” Thea said to her. “Werewolves, magic. This all sounds crazy.”

Zoe sighed. “This isn’t the way things usually work. If a wolf leaves its human, it’s usually permanent. Werewolves aren’t meant to be apart from their wolves, so the human side usually withers and dies. You hadn’t shifted yet when I left, so I thought you’d be fine. I guess this hasn’t happened before, so I don’t know what to expect. I’m back, though, and I’m here for you. I’ll teach you what you need to know if you don’t get your memories back.”

“Thanks, I guess,” Thea thought. “Do you know where the bathroom is?”

Zoe laughed. “I’m sure there’s one around here somewhere. I can sniff it out.”

Thea got off the bed and let Zoe lead the way. There was a bathroom a few feet from her bed.

She used it, then came back out.

The triplets were awake, staring at her.
all sounds crazy.”

Zoe sighed. “This isn’t the way things usually work. If a wolf leaves its human, it’s usually permanent. Werewolves aren’t meant to be apart from their wolves, so the human side usually withers and dies. You hadn’t shifted yet when I left, so I thought you’d be fine. I guess this hasn’t happened before, so I don’t know what to expect. I’m back, though, and I’m here for you. I’ll teach you what you need to know if you don’t get your memories back.”

“Thanks, I guess,” Thea thought. “Do you know where the bathroom is?”

Zoe laughed. “I’m sure there’s one around here somewhere. I can sniff it out.”

Thea got off the bed and let Zoe lead the way. There was a bathroom a few feet from her bed.

She used it, then came back out.

The triplets were awake, staring at her.

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 67

Chapter 67 Being a Wolf?

“Uh, hi,” she said.

“Thea?” the one with the crew cut said.

“That’s my name, right?”

The triplets looked sad, but they nodded.

“And we’re all werewolves?” she said.

They nodded, hopeful.

“Okay, so the voice in my head is telling the truth.”

“You have your wolf? You can hear her?” the long-haired one said.

“That’s what she keeps saying.” Thea got back in her bed

“What has she told you?” the one with the messy pompadour said.

“Some weird stuff, but right now, she wants me to mark you, whatever that means. It seems really important to her.”

They smiled in relief.

“What are your names?” Thea said.

“I’m Alaric,” the one with the crew cut said.

“Conri,” the one with the long hair said.

“Kaiser,” the one with the messy pompadour said.

A shiver of pleasure shot through her as each one said his name. She felt like she could trust them. She also felt a strong desire to take them all to bed. “Woah,” she thought. “That’s inappropriate. I don’t even know them. I should not be thinking about that.”

Alaric tried not to smile. Conri looked frustrated.

Kaiser looked stoic.

“Yes, you do know them,” Zoe said. “That’s the mate pull. You’re supposed to be together. You were made for each other.”

“I don’t know what that means,” Thea thought.

“This is too much.” Thea felt antsy. Like she needed to move, or she might jump these gorgeous men.

“You want to go for a run? See what it’s like to be a wolf?” Zoe said.

“Um,” Thea said out loud. “My wolf, Zoe, wants to go for a run. Is that possible?”

“Yeah,” Alaric said. “We’ll show you the way.”

Thea followed the triplets out of the infirmary. A group of serious-looking men with matching tight crew cuts sat in the hall, and they stood up as Thea passed them. They followed Thea and the triplets outside and towards the woods. She could feel their eyes on her. It made the hair on her neck stand up. When it was clear they weren’t going to stop following her, she spun around and yelled.

“Hey, back off!” She felt something flow through her into the words. The men looked stunned as her Alpha tone compelled them to take a step back. Thea saw the confusion and surprise in their faces. Maybe they didn’t have nefarious intentions.

“Why are you following me?” she said in a regular voice.

“That’s Delta team. They’re your guards,” Conri said.

“Why do I need guards?”

“It’s a long story,” Alaric said. “But you do need them.”

“Remember that goddess gift I mentioned?” Zoe said in her mind.

“Right. And the bad people who want it,” Thea thought.

“These are the good guys who protect you from the bad ones. Be nice to them,” Zoe said.

“I’m sorry,” Thea said to the group of big muscular men. “It’s alarming when strangers follow you. What are your names?”

“I’m Liam,” the sandy blonde-haired one said.

“Owen,” the dirty blonde-haired man said.

“Chase.” He had brown hair.

“Hunter.” He had light brown hair.

“You’re going to keep following me around?” Thea said.

They nodded, still a little stunned.

“It’s kind of a twenty-four-seven situation,” Conri said. “They’ll switch off with other Delta team members later.”

“Okay,” Thea said. “That’s going to take some getting used to.”

“Are you ready to keep going?” Alaric said.

“Sure,” Thea said.

They continued toward the woods.

“Okay, Thea,” Zoe said. “This is going to hurt the first time, but just relax and let me do it, and it will go smoother.”

“Go for it, voice in my head,” she thought.

Zoe took control of her body and pushed Thea to the back of their mind. Joints started popping, bones cracking. Thea was scared but also intrigued. She didn’t believe anything would happen and was shocked when they landed on all fours. Her sight and hearing were different. She watched all the men morph into wolves too.

“What the hell?” Thea thought. “Wolves. Werewolves.” She looked down, and instead of human feet, she saw paws. “Isn’t that something?”

“Thea? You in there?” Alaric said in her head.

“Yeah. How are you talking to me?” Thea thought.

“Mind link. We can all talk to each other,” Kaiser said.

“Sure. Why not? As if this day couldn’t get any weirder,” Thea thought.

“Werewolves in the same pack can mind link and talk to each other,”

Conri said. “Mates can hear each other’s thoughts.”

“You can read my thoughts? Can I block that?”

Thea felt the sadness from each triplet when she said that.

“Yes,” Zoe said. “With your mates, you’re always open, so you have to close it. It’s like you choose to ignore them, and that puts up the wall.”

She realized they heard her thoughts about taking them to bed. That’s what they were reacting to earlier.

“Can I block hearing other people’s voices too?” Thea thought.

“Yes,” Zoe said. “Same kind of thing. You ignore it, and it shuts off. Think of them again, and it will turn back on.”

“Okay.”

The triplets were standing next to each other in wolf form. Zoe walked in front of them, going down the line and rubbing up against their chests. Thea felt the sparks erupt wherever they touched. Zoe turned around and did it again the other way. The triplet wolves sniffed her, and she took off into the woods. They followed close behind. Thea let Zoe do her thing. She was mesmerized by the sights of the woods flying past them. The smells. The feel of the wind in her fur. It was amazing, and those triplets smelled divine. She wanted to get closer to them.

“I know,” Zoe said. “They were made for us.”

Zoe came to a halt and faced the triplets. The Delta team circled them from a distance. Zoe ignored them and focused on the triplets. They mind linked while they chased each other around, getting to know each other. They rubbed up against each other to get their scents on each other. They wrestled and played. Eventually, the human sides got impatient, and the wolves ran back to the pack house. They shifted back to their human forms.

“Ah! You didn’t tell me I’d be naked, Zoe!” Thea thought as she tried to cover herself.

“Oh, yeah. You get used to it.”

“I think not.”

Alaric handed Thea some clothes.

“Thanks,” she said out loud. Sparks erupted when their hands touched.

The triplets pulled on basketball shorts while Thea put on the shirt and shorts Alaric gave her.

“Are you hungry?” Alaric said.

Thea nodded, still embarrassed that they saw her nude. They took her to a dining hall. Someone brought them plates of food. She dug in like she hadn’t eaten in days.

“So, huh, our wolves seem very comfortable with each other,” Thea said.

The triplets nodded while they ate. They didn’t seem to know what to say. Thea could sense their sadness. They finished their food in silence.

“You need more?” Alaric said.

“No, this was good,” Thea said.

“Come on, we’ll show you your room,” Alaric said.

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 68

Chapter 68 Faith

Thea followed the triplets up to the top floor of the giant pack house. The room smelled like the triplets. Intoxicating.

“We shared this room, didn’t we?” Thea said.

They nodded.

“It smells like you guys,” she said. Zoe wanted to rub herself all over the bed and bask in the triplets’ scent. “How weird is it that I can smell them? Like, I can tell they live in this room because I can smell it? What the hell?” she thought.

“You can tell that you lived here with them, right?” Zoe said.

“Yeah. It’s obvious we lived together,” Thea thought. “I just don’t remember it.”

Thea felt the triplets’ worry.

“I’m sorry, I don’t remember anything. It seems like we were close,” she said out loud.

“We grew up together,” Alaric said. “We knew everything about each other.”

“I guess it just means we have to let you get to know us all over. That could be fun,” Conri said.

“Or we could remember for you,” Kaiser said. He stepped up to Thea and pushed her hair behind her ear. Sparks shot through her body. “We can tell you everything about our life before.” 1

Thea looked up into his crystal blue eyes.

“You would do that for me?” Thea said.

“We’ll do anything and everything for you,” Kaiser said.

“Don’t you have better things to do than babysit someone who doesn’t remember you?”

“We spent all our time with you before. That’s not going to change unless you tell us to leave you alone,” Kaiser said.

“Don’t you dare,” Zoe said. “I will take over before I let you—”

“Calm down, Zoe,” Thea thought. “I’m not kicking them out.” Thea couldn’t imagine telling these men to leave her alone. It seemed more plausible that she would beg them not to leave.

“All your time, huh?” Thea said out loud.

Kaiser nodded. “We’ve always been inseparable,” he said.

The tingles she felt when he was near were thrilling. The sparks from his touch were exhilarating. Smelling her own scent mixed with theirs in this room made everything feel so familiar. All their scents combined smelled right.

“I like the sound of that,” Thea said. She couldn’t stop herself from leaning into him.

Kaiser trailed his fingers down her arm and lightly interlaced their fingers, caressing her palm with his thumb.

Thea’s free hand went to Kaiser’s waist, pulling him closer. He brought her hand up to his lips. He kissed the inside of her wrist, then down her arm until it was wrapped around his shoulder, and he was kissing her neck. He reached a spot that made Thea gasp, moan, then melt into him. Zoe felt drunk inside her head.

Then there were sparks all over her body as four other hands joined Kaiser’s. Two other mouths found similar spots on the other side of her neck, and she was putty in their hands.

“What is happening to me?” Thea thought. “How are they doing this?"

"These are our marks, babe," Conri said to her in mind link. "It's how we let everyone know you're ours."

"You're going to mark them too," Zoe said. "So everyone knows they're yours."

"They're mine?" Thea thought.

"We're yours, darling," Kaiser said in mind link.

"It's so weird that you can hear me think," Thea thought.

"Once you mark us, you'll be able to hear our thoughts too," Alaric said in mind link.

"Why didn't I mark you before?" Thea thought.

"You didn't have your wolf, so you couldn't,"

Conri said in mind link.

Thea could feel the desire in each of them. It wasn't even physical. They all wanted her to remember them, to love them. It was overwhelming. She didn't know if she could be the same person she was to them before. If she didn't have any memories, how could she? Would they still want her when they figured that out?

"Don't think, Thea," Zoe said. "Feel. What do you feel?"

"I don't know, Zoe," she thought.

"What do you feel from them? What do you sense in them?"

"They're good people."

"Yeah. They are. Trust that. They're your mates, and they'll never hurt you. They'll always protect you."

"How do I know what I'm supposed to do? Who I'm supposed to be?"

"Have faith that the moon goddess has a plan for you. Have faith in your mates. They'll help you, teach you, support you. You're their everything. They'll always be there for you."

Thea felt more emotion from the triplets.

“I thought we lost you,” Kaiser said in mind link. He sucked the mark on her neck like it was his lifeline. She felt their connection through it. Like he was trying to reach her soul. “I was so scared when I couldn’t feel you anymore.”

“I wish I could remember for you,” Thea said. She felt his heartache, and she wanted to heal it.

“You don’t have to remember. Just don’t leave us,” Conri said in mind link. “Please.” His hands gripped her tightly as he kissed and nibbled on his mark.

She felt his sincerity, his absolute need for her, but she didn’t want to make a promise she didn’t know she could keep.

“I won’t let you leave them,” Zoe said. “They’re my mates too. It will be painful and make us weak if we’re away from them. We’re meant to be with them.” 2

“I feel safe with them. It feels like I belong here,” Thea thought.

“You do,” Alaric said. “You’ve always belonged right here with us.” Waking up and not remembering anything had been a shock, but things were settling in place. She was a werewolf. It still sounded crazy, but she’d just run through the woods as a wolf. She knew that was true. She didn’t understand it, but everything was telling her she was destined to be with these men. She wanted them. She knew that from her first moments of being awake. The more time she spent with them, the more she needed them.

“You’ll stay with me? You won’t leave me if I’m not who I was? If I can’t remember—”

“We’ll never leave,” Kaiser said.

“You’re ours,” Conri said.

“We’ll take care of you forever, no matter what,”

Alaric said.

She recalled the concept of soulmates. This felt more intense. Like they were part of her. If they left, she wouldn’t be whole. A possessive instinct flared at the thought.

Mine.

It burned inside her. Suddenly, she knew she’d kill for these men. They were hers. Even if she didn’t remember them, they were hers. They belonged together. So why were they so far apart?

“I need,” she said. “I need.”

“What do you need, darling?” Kaiser said.

“Anything you want, it’s yours,” Alaric said.

“Tell us. We’ll do anything for you,” Conri said.

“Closer. I need you closer,” she said. “These clothes are in the way.”

Thea took off her shirt and shorts, grabbed

Kaiser’s shoulders, and climbed onto him.

Kaiser’s hands went under her legs and held them around his waist. She pulled herself flush against him, skin to skin. He was still in just the basketball shorts. All the triplets were.

With her forehead pressed against Kaiser’s, she tilted her hips against his hard abs.

“That’s right, darling,” Kaiser said. “That’s right.”

“I’ve known them for less than a day, and I can’t stop myself. What kind of hussy am I?” Thea thought to Zoe.

“They’re your mates. This is right,” Zoe said.

“You’ve only ever been with us, my love,” Alaric said in mind link.

“You’re anything but a hussy.”

Thea felt the respect Alaric had for her. He was disturbed that she would think she had a reason to feel ashamed. She was flawless in his mind.

Thea wanted to consume him.

“Please,” Thea said. She grabbed one of Alaric’s hands and guided it to her breast. "I need you to touch me."

"Whatever you want, my love," Alaric said in mind link. He slid his other hand to her other breast as he sucked on his mark. Thea leaned into his touch.

Satisfied with Alaric, she turned her thoughts to Conri and where she wanted his hands. Her general knowledge included the basics of sex. Even if she didn't specifically remember doing this before, she knew what she wanted.

"Conri," Thea whined. She was too embarrassed to say it out loud, but Conri could read her thoughts.

"You got it, babe," Conri said to her in mind link. One of his hands slid to her front, his fingers working her clit. The other went under her, his fingers sliding into her wet heat. Thea rolled her hips, pressing into Conri's fingers and making noises she didn't know she could make.

"Goddess, yes," Thea thought.

She ran her fingers into Kaiser's hair and pulled him into an open-mouthed kiss. His hands squeezed her buttocks, holding her in place.

After a while, Thea tasted blood and pulled back from Kaiser. His bottom lip was bleeding from two minor cuts. The cuts healed right before her eyes, and Kaiser licked the blood off. She felt something sharp against her bottom lip. Her eyes went to his. He looked at her with so much love in his eyes. It brought tears to hers.

"Your canines are out, darling," he mind linked her.

"What does that mean?" she thought.

"Your wolf wants to mark us," Kaiser said in mind link.

"Can I? Should I?" Thea thought.

Thea finally became aware of Zoe in her head. "Yes! Yes! Do it! Stop making out and listen to me! Mark him now! Mark him!" It sounded like she'd been shouting for a while, but Thea hadn't noticed.

Kaiser's eyes glazed over. He mind linked his father to ask him. A moment later, he was back.

"You can," he said. "When you do, try to push the feeling out to include the whole pack."

"What do I do?" Thea thought.

"Find the sweet spot between my shoulder and neck and bite down,"

Kaiser said. "You'll know it's right. You'll feel it."

Thea dragged her mouth over his skin until she found the spot that made Kaiser shiver and sent pleasure coursing through her. She felt like she was on a drug. She breathed in the intoxicating scent of Kaiser, which seemed to be more potent at this spot. She couldn't stop herself from moaning and biting down.

Kaiser tensed, then relaxed, and his hands squeezed her. A connection was building. Intense pleasure filled her. She felt Kaiser even more. His emotions were sharper, clearer, like they were her own. She could hear his thoughts. He was lost in the intense pleasure of being marked, relieved that Thea still wanted them, relieved and overjoyed that she marked him. He felt like they were going to be okay.

"Push this feeling out with me," Kaiser thought to her.

She could feel what he was doing, and she joined him. They pushed out that full, complete feeling, the feeling that there was nothing between them, that they were one soul. They felt it come back and course through them. She felt the joy of every member of the pack.

When it felt complete, her canines retracted, and she instinctively licked the wounds on his neck. They healed quickly, and a golden pattern started to form in his skin. She could smell her own scent coming from the mark, mixing with his to create an intoxicating aroma. She breathed it in, and the possessive need flared inside her. “You’re mine,” she growled. “I’m yours, darling,” Kaiser whispered. She felt the contentedness in him. Like everything was finally right in the world. At that moment, she knew he loved her and would always love her. She could rely on him. He would always be there for her. Even without her memories, she felt safe and complete.

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 69

Chapter 69 Single Combat

Kaiser carried Thea to the shower, and Alaric and Conri helped him bathe her. When she saw them naked earlier, she averted her eyes so quickly she didn’t get a good look. After what they’d just done, she couldn’t keep herself from staring. She’d seen several naked men that day. These men were well endowed. Giant. They were muscled, tall, strong, gorgeous.

“You like what you see?” Kaiser thought to her.

She looked up. He had the biggest grin on his face.

So did Conri and Alaric.

“I’m supposed to want that, right?” Thea thought, embarrassed. “I have no control over it?»

“Yeah, babe,” Conri said out loud. “We’re yours.”

“All yours,” Alaric said. “Every part.”

Thea’s heart raced.

“When you’re ready, darling,” Kaiser said.

Shortly after, they were all lying in the oversized bed that already smelled like all four of them.

“Is it normal for one person to have three mates?” Thea said.

“No,” the triplets said in unison.

“Hmm. I must have done something good in a past life to wake up to you three.”

“We’re the lucky ones,” Alaric said.

“That seems unlikely. I’ve known you for a matter of hours, and I’m convinced no one on the planet could compare to you, and there’s three of you.” Thea gasped. “I just realized, I was so caught up in what you guys were making me feel, I didn’t do anything for you.”

“That’s okay, babe,” Conri said. “You don’t have to,”

“That doesn’t seem fair,” she said.

“You’ve done plenty for us in the past, darling,” Kaiser said. “And you marked me. That’s the best thing in the world.”

“That was incredible,” Thea said. “You all already marked me, right?”

“Yeah,” Alaric said.

“And I need to mark you two still?”

“Yeah,” Conri said.

**This morning, I didn’t even know what mates were. Or who you guys were. I wasn’t planning on any of this. I couldn’t fight it, though. I think you three could convince me to do anything. I know I’ve only known you for a few hours, but I can’t imagine living without you.”

Thea felt the relief in each of them, which made her feel even more sure in whatever this mates thing was

“I don’t even know what my last name is, but I feel completely one about everything because I have you guys. How strange is that?”

“Your last name is Lyall,” Alaric said. “But you could change it to our last name, Valko. We haven’t talked about that yet.”

“Are we _” Thea paused. “Are we married?”

“Kind of, but no. We’re mated. We marked you in a mating ceremony,”

Conri said. "That's the werewolf equivalent of a wedding. The marks are what bind us together. The human legal ceremony doesn't mean much to us. Some mates get the paperwork done. It just depends on the couple."

"But I wouldn't be able to marry all three of you legally," Thea said.

"Oh yeah," Conri said. "I guess you'd have to choose one of us."

"I don't like that." They were silent for a bit. "What are our lives like? What do we usually do?"

"We train in martial arts. We go to school. We used to lead training for the rest of the pack, but we stopped that recently. Otherwise, we're usually doing stuff for the pack," Alaric said.

"I'm assuming we've had sex already, right?"

Thea said.

"Yes," Conri said.

Thea saw the images in Kaiser's mind, and they made her stomach clench in anticipation.

"What do you guys like?" Thea said.

"Sex-wise?" Alaric said.

"Yeah."

"We just like you," Kaiser said.

"Hmmm. What do I like?"

The triplets smiled.

"I think you like us," Kaiser said.

"That makes sense," Thea said. She thought about what she saw in the shower, and it filled her with desire. "Could we go for another run? I suddenly have all this energy."

"Of course, my love," Alaric said.

This time, Thea stayed in charge of her body as they ran through the woods. She played with the triplets as they ran. She faked them out and ran in the opposite direction.

She felt something pull her. She needed to go that way. She didn't realize she lost the triplets and Delta team until she felt a change in the land like it no longer belonged to her.

“Thea, where are you?” Kaiser thought to her mind.

“I don’t know,” she thought back.

Suddenly, she felt a dark presence. Her fur stood on end. She growled and heard a growl in return.

A big grey wolf stepped out into view, teeth bared.

“Get ready to fight,” Zoe said to Thea,

“I don’t know how

“Yes, you do.”

“If you say so.”

The grey wolf approached. When it got within striking distance, it lunged. It seemed obvious what he was going to do. Thea sidestepped out of the way and sunk her teeth into the grey wolf’s flank as he passed. She bit down fast and hard, shook her head then released. A chunk of flesh hung from the wolf’s side, blood gushing from the wound.

The grey wolf circled Thea, favoring his injured side. She could tell he was going to lunge for her again. She baited him, turning her head slightly to expose her neck. He lunged for it, stretching out and baring his own neck to reach her. She anticipated his trajectory, ducked, and got under his head. She closed her jaw around his throat, whipped her head to the side, and tossed him several feet

The wolf backed away, bleeding from his neck. She could have gone for the kill with his throat in her mouth. He knew it. He tried to lick the wound on his side as Thea watched him.

Somehow she knew she had already beat him. She acted on instinct and shifted back to her human form, not noticing her nudity this time. The wolf looked at her and thought he had a chance to kill her. He started toward her. She looked him dead in the eyes, and he halted.

“Shift,” she said. The wolf cowered. “Shift!” she felt something extra in her voice again, and the wolf turned into a human male.

Just then, the triplets and Delta team came upon them.

“Thea! Are you okay?” Kaiser said in mind link. His wolf got between her and the male clutching his side and neck. Alaric and Conri flanked her in wolf form, sniffing to see if she was injured. O

“I’m fine,” Thea said. “This isn’t my blood. It’s his.”

“I don’t care if you have a wolf now, you bitch, you ruined my life!” the male cried out. His voice sounded garbled. His throat was healing from the bite,

The Delta team wolves growled at him.

“What’s he talking about?” Thea said.

“That’s Xavier Knight,” Kaiser thought to her. “He’s wanted for crimes you helped uncover. He’s been missing for a week. What made you come out here? We’re off our pack lands.”

“I felt drawn here,” Thea thought. “Like there was something I needed to see or do. I think it was this Xavier guy.”

“Luna, what do you want us to do with him?” one of the Delta team wolves mind linked her.

She was confused for a moment. “Did he just call me Luna? I thought my name was Thea?” Thea thought.

“It is. Luna is the title for the female leader of the pack,” Kaiser thought to her.

“Why is he calling me that then?”

“We’re the future Alphas, the male leader of the pack. Since you’re our mate, you’re the future Luna of the pack,” Kaiser thought to her.

“But I don’t know anything about anything. How can I lead a pack?”

“Don’t worry about it for now. Tell them to take him to the dungeons,” Kaiser thought to her.

“We should take him to the dungeons, right?”

Thea said out loud.

“And notify Alpha Knight that we found him,” Alaric said in mind link.

“We need to get you back on pack lands, Thea. Let Delta team take care of Xavier.”

“Okay,” Thea said in mind link. She shifted back to her wolf and trotted off the way she came, the triplets flanking her.

“Don’t lose us this time,” Kaiser said in mind link.

“I won’t.”

“Did you use an Alpha tone to force him to shift back there?” Conri said.

“What’s an Alpha tone?”

“Tell us what happened,” Alaric said.

She told them.

“Oh my goddess,” Conri said. “Thea, Xavier is the oldest son of a neighboring pack’s Alpha. You just beat him in single combat, and he couldn’t fight your Alpha command.”

“Did I do something wrong? Did I get us in trouble?”

“No. Well, yes,” Conri said. “Don’t go running off alone. Our land is surrounded by neutral lands, so you’re not trespassing, but there are dangers. You don’t remember, but people have been trying to hurt you or kidnap you. You have a guard detail for a reason.”

“I’m sorry. I didn’t realize.”

“It’s our fault for not telling you,” Alaric said.

“But I didn’t get us in trouble? That wolf attacked me. I was just defending myself.”

“No. That’s fine. Goddess, you don’t even know about rogues anymore,” Alaric said.

“What are rogues?”

“Werewolves without a pack,” Conri said. “They usually get kicked out of their packs for breaking the rules. They tend to be feral, evil, vicious wolves. They kill indiscriminately.”

“Eesh.”

“Thea, there are a lot of dangers,” Kaiser said. “Just, don’t go anywhere without us.”

Triplet Alphas Gifted Luna By Samantha Doyle Chapter 70

Chapter 70 Wolf Etiquette

The bigger man from the infirmary stood outside the pack house, waiting for them. Thea and the triplets stopped in front of him.

“Delta team is right behind you with Xavier,” the man said.

“Who is he?” Thea thought. She felt a strange kind of kinship with him.

“That’s our father, Ulric, the Alpha of our pack.

The boss,” Kaiser thought to her.

“Don’t look him in the eyes too long, Thea,” Zoe said. Thea tore her eyes away from him.

“Why?”

“You know how you just stared down that wolf back there?” Zoe said.

“It’s an Alpha thing. A challenge. We don’t want to challenge this one.”

“Should I bow or something?”

“Goddess,” Zoe said in her mind. “I can’t believe I have to teach you remedial wolf etiquette. We’re supposed to be working on our goddess gift by now!”

“Excuse me? If I remember correctly, you’re the reason I don’t remember anything!” Thea thought to her.

Zoe growled in her mind. Thea growled out loud.

“Thea? You have a problem?” the Alpha said.

“Sorry, Alpha, sir, I’m fighting with my wolf,” Thea said in mind link.

“She’s kind of a bitch.”

The triplets heard Thea’s thoughts, and they looked at each other, afraid of their father’s reaction.

Alpha Ulric burst out laughing. He laughed for a good five minutes until tears were coming out of his eyes.

“Oh, it’s nice to have some levity after everything that’s happened,” he said.

The Delta team wolves came trotting up. One of them was dragging Xavier. Alpha Ulric opened the doors that led to the dungeon, and they all filed in.

The wolf tossed Xavier into a cell. Alpha Ulric chained him inside, then closed and locked the cell door.

“I have to call Alpha Knight,” Alpha Ulric said as he started walking out of the dungeon. “Liam, what are your thoughts on Thea’s condition? Should we keep it a secret?”

All the wolves shifted back to their human forms.

“I don’t think we should advertise it, but I don’t think we should lie about it either. It will eventually come out, one way or another. Plus, that pup has seen her. Unless you plan on using an Alpha command to silence him.”

“Maybe it’s better if people know she has her wolf now,” Alpha Ulric said. “That she beat an Alpha in single combat, and he submitted to her Alpha command. It will give them something to focus on.”

“Or it paints a target on her back,” Conri said.

“Everyone will want to challenge her.”

“I don’t think she’ll have a problem facing any challenges,” Alpha Ulric said.

“She doesn’t remember anything,” Alaric said. “Including how to fight.”

“She beat Xavier, didn’t she?” Alpha Ulric said.

“As a wolf,” Alaric said.

“She’s a quick study. She’ll learn what she needs to know,” Alpha Ulric said. “Kai? What do you think?”

“She can take anyone that would challenge her, and we have her back,” Kaiser said.

Alpha Ulric looked at Kaiser, nodded, then did a double-take. “That’s quite a mark,” he said, smiling

Kaiser smiled. Thea felt pride swell in him.

“Prepare yourselves, sons,” Alpha Ulric said. “There’s going to be a lot of gossip tomorrow. Be alert.”

They reached the doors. There were basketball shorts stacked along the wall. All the males grabbed a pair and slid them on before they walked outside. Alpha Ulric walked off with his phone to his ear. Thea spotted a pile of shirts and grabbed one along with some shorts. When she joined them outside, a group was gathering out in a field.

“What’s going on there?” Thea said.

“Pack training,” Alaric said.

A blonde girl broke from the crowd and ran towards them. Thea growled, thinking she was coming for the triplets.

“What is going on with you?” the blonde girl said, eyebrow raised, hand on her hip. She completely ignored the triplets, only looking at Thea.

“Who is she?” Thea said in mind link.

“Lizzy, your best friend,” Kaiser said over mind link. “Were you just jealous?”

“Yes.” She didn’t bother hiding it. “I thought she was coming for you guys.”

Kaiser hugged her from behind. Conri and Alaric each grabbed a hand, smiling.

“Thea! Talk to me!” Lizzy said. “I’m woken in the middle of the night by an intense urge to call out for you. The entire pack is howling. A light explodes somewhere. Then we feel another mark! What the hell? What’s going on?”

“I don’t know where to start,” Thea said out loud.

“She got her wolf last night,” Alaric said. “But now she has amnesia and doesn’t remember anything or anyone.”

“You got your wolf?” Lizzy mind linked her,

“Yes? Her name is Zoe, and she’s a bitch,” Thea said back in mind link.

Zoe growled in her mind,

“Oh my goddess!” Lizzy jumped up and down and hugged Thea. She pulled back. “Wait. Does that mean you don’t remember me?”

“I’m sorry. If it makes you feel better, I don’t remember these guys either.” Thea motioned to the triplets.

“But the matebond is hard to fight,” Lizzy said.

“I like them a lot,” Thea said, shrugging and smiling. Kaiser kissed the mark on her neck, and she melted into him.

Conri told Lizzy what Thea had just done to Xavier.

“Xavier’s in the dungeons?” Lizzy said. “I want to go in there and kill him myself.”

“You know him?” Thea said.

“You don’t remember?” Lizzy said. “Why would you? You don’t remember anything. Oh, this is strange. I wonder how school is going to go tomorrow. You’re coming tomorrow, right?”

“I don’t know,” Thea said.

A car pulled up, and Alpha Ulric called the triplets and Thea. A large man and a teenage boy with brown hair got out of the vehicle.

“Alpha Knight,” Alpha Ulric said.

“Alpha Valko. Thank you for the call. Thank you for keeping him alive and turning him over to me. I think it’s important that my pack see his punishment. You all are invited to witness it as well. We’ll do it right when we arrive. People are already gathering. We put the pole up last week.”

“Sons, Thea, do you want to go?” Alpha Ulric mind linked them.

“Yes,” they all answered.

“Go get dressed in proper clothing,” Alpha Ulric mind linked them.

“Come, let’s get your son,” he said out loud.

The Alphas went to the dungeon.

Alaric told Lizzy in mind link to inform the Moonlit Pack members staying at New Dawn about Xavier.

The triplets and Thea ran up to their room. Thea quickly rinsed off the blood, then went into the closet and saw all the boys’ clothes.

“How long have we been living together?” Thea said.

“In a sense, all our lives,” Conri said. “But officially as mates, a few months.”

Thea looked through the drawers. There was a ton of matching underwear. She put on a set then threw a wrap dress over it.

They climbed out of an SUV at Moonlit Pack a short while later. The triplets took their places around Thea, holding her hands, Conri with his hand around her waist. It felt natural to her.

They watched as Alpha Knight dragged Xavier – now dressed – from the car to a dais with a large silver pole on it. He used silver handcuffs to cuff

Xavier to the pole.

Alpha Knight shouted out his crimes, and Thea's jaw dropped. He had done horrible things.

“Zoe, how did we know where to find him?” Thea said in her head.

“It's part of our goddess gift,” Zoe said,

“What is?”

“Sensing life. Intentions.”

“That's how you knew when it was safe to come back?”

“Yep.”

“So, we can tell if people are good or bad, and where people are?”

“Not just people. Look, it's going to take time to master the skills.

There's a lot to it. Frankly, we need to get practicing.”

“Okay. We will. I'm sorry I called you a bitch.”

“I'm sorry I was being one.”

Thea laughed inside her head.

Just then, Alpha Knight reached inside his son's mouth and ripped a canine out. Xavier screamed, and so did Thea, her hand going to her mouth. Quite a few people in the crowd screamed, so no one paid attention to Thea except the triplets and her Delta guards.

“Babe,” Conri said. “Are you okay?”

“Why is your canine hurting?” Alaric said. He felt it through the matebond. So did Conri and Kaiser,

Delta team felt it through their blood oath bond.

Everyone was worried.

Thea couldn't think straight. She felt everything

Xavier felt like it was happening to her.

Alpha Knight went back in for the other canine. When he yanked it,

Xavier passed out, and so did

Thea