Chapter 211 Sukie's Peril

TWO MONTHS LATER

In the large hall, two long tables were placed with chairs arranged around them. . The hall was deemed with silence as everyone present simply sat with their eyes pinned at the door. It could perhaps, be known as the biggest meeting ever held in a long time as each VampLord from all six clutches; Alphas from all seven mountains and elders from both sides were present. Just one person was missing tho, and that was King Dakota – the same person they had their eyes searching for. He was taking too long to arrive, no doubt; but neither of them could complain nor do anything aside waiting. 1 . They past time with drinks and silent mumblings until finally, the Alpha King's presence was made known. They sprang on their feet immediately, everyone watching him walk through the door with his gamma in front of him. a King Dakota, hands crossed at his back, walked in with so much gentility and pinned his eyes on Ryder when they found him. He didn't even look at the rest of the people bowing to him but just looked at the head of Ryder, his heart developing so much hatred in it Well, two months was enough time to hear all the rumours he needed to. He walked all the way to his seat at the head of the table and that was when other heads were raised. "Greetings, Alpha King" they chorused esteeming-ly. And in his usual nature, King Dakota took some time to reply. "Sit" his tone was sounding better. With a little noise, the Alphas, VampLords and elders returned to their seats. Every other guard stood behind. "Uhm... Welcome, King Dakota. I believe you had a wonderful time coming here?" One of the elders began, his dentition not being good for a smile. "I did. But I really don't want to be here; So, I'd suggest we move on with the meeting as quickly as possible" He answered bluntly. His reactions were expected anyways as everyone knew he was angry. "Uhm... Okay" The second elder cleared his throat. "The reason we're gathered here today is as a result of a very pressing matter. Two months ago, the filed a report where they requested for a change in leadership. According to them, they no longer want to be under the Wolves, but wants the wolves to be under them. This request is rightfully theirs as it was stated in the conjoined laws and that is the reason we're here today to deliberate on it". The five elders whispered amongst themselves, while the Alphas and VampLords just stared at each other. 2 Suddenly, Dakota scoffed and leaned forward. "Is this what you really want?" His eyes were directed at Ryder. "You've finally become unable to control your hunger for power" "What are you talking about, King Dakota? It wasn't just me who filed the report; it was done collectively" Ryder defended, but with a smirk.

"You can't fool anyone, Ryder, me especially. I already know you initiated the idea and you're the one who wants to be in control". "I guess that is what you want to think. But perhaps, we should ignore who started it and just go straight to the agreement". "Agreement?" Alpha Frost chuckled. "You're not just a dreamer, Ryder, but a big fool. For centuries, we've been enjoying nothing but peace. Why in the name of Selene would you want to bring about this division?" "With all due respect, Frost, 1 can take anything from you, but not you calling me names” Ryder sighed. “Moreover, I do not see the reason for a division if you’d comply”. “You deserve to be called bigger names than this” Alpha Rhose chided in. “You should know the Wolves will not remain in power forever. According to the law, power of leadership would be passed onto the Vampires at the end of the fifth century. Why do you need to be so impatient?” “I believe we have the right to ask for this, gentlemen” Lord Osric chipped in. “We demand power and that is final”. • “Power that would be handed only to Ryder” Dakota growled. “I can imagine what he would do to you when he finally claims it”. “Let that be their concern, King Dakota” Ryder said. “If you do not want to hand over power, then I challenge you to a fight – like the law demands. We fight in front of everyone and he who wins remains or becomes the leader”. Dakota’s eyes snapped. “Such nerves, Ryder; to challenge me to a fight”. “Yes, I do. Moreover, I see no reason you’d want to keep up with the struggle, dear King. You don’t even have a son; what exactly are you fighting for?” O There was a dead-drop silence, one that created a lot of shock on the faces of others. It hit Dakota so hard, he couldn’t feel his breath for the closest seconds. For the first time in a long time, he felt the impact of an insult and while Ryder fed on his pathetic shock, he was torn into pieces. Swiftly, he grew out his claws, hopped on the table and gave a deep scratch on Ryder’s face. It happened so fast, Ryder couldn’t even prevent it. He groaned and fell back with his chair, and quickly, the rest of the Alphas and VampLords had to intervene. It had to take six Alphas and three VampLords to hold back the King from pouncing more on Ryder who was bleeding badly on the floor. “King Dakota, please!” The elders flinched, already on their feet. Dakota’s eyes were glowing red already with his furs coming out and at that moment, all he wanted was to rip the man on the floor apart, but the restrictions were too much . Pishan simply stood behind but didn’t make an attempt to stop him. 3 “I accept your challenge, Ryder” He finally said in a growl. “Me and you, we fight in five days and it’ll be a fight to the death”. Ryder could barely hear him as he focused more on the pains and blood from his face. Tho, he was a Vampire, but a scratch from an Alpha King would leave a scar on his face forever. With a grunt, Dakota walked out on them while Pishan took some steps closer to Ryder.. “You’re lucky there were enough people to restrict him” He stated spitefully and also left, going after the King.

AT THE WITCHES PALACE

Deep asleep, Sukie felt disturbed when a knock penetrated through and woke her up. She tossed and yawned on the bed, and when the knock came again, she forced herself up. Her fingers were itching her eyes as she got to the door and opened it. Oh... “Sister Corrine!” She lowered her head immediately, her heart beating heavily at the book she held with her.

“Hi, Sukie. Looks like you were sleeping” Corrine smiled. “Well, I didn’t mean to disturb you – I just wanted you to know I’d gotten the book”. “Yes, yes. Thank you” nervously, Sukie collected the book from her. “Thank you so much for your help, Corrine. I truly appreciate”. “Oh! It’s nothing. Although.... I do wonder what you need a pregnancy book for”. The question nearly made Sukie fumble. “Oh! It’s nothing serious. I’m”trying to make a particular herb for pregnant women and just need to know more about them”. She feigned a smile. “I see. Goodluck, then. Take care of yourself”. “And you too, Corrine”

She returned to the room and shut the door, placing her hand on her chest afterwards as she panted heavily. Oh! Dear Spirits; now she had never felt so scared and nervous in her entire life. She rushed to the bed where she opened the big book and began running her eyes through it's pages. She flipped and flipped until she got to the page the "Pregnancy Symptoms". That instance, she felt her throat running dry and her legs growing cold. As her eyes read through them, she compared her present condition with her brain: Dizziness – she was almost sleeping the whole time. Cravings – recently, she's been loving a lot of meals and hating the meals she once loved. Frequent urination – the toilet was gradually becoming her bestfriend Feeling sick, tiredness and a missed monthly flow. She covered her lips and gasped. Her monthly flow! For the first time, it was two months late! Dear Spirits! What could this mean?! She was pregnant!

Sukie felt her hands shaking as she read through the book. It was confirmed! She was indeed, pregnant for Pishan! Oh, no ... She closed it up and stood on her feet, beginning to pace tho and fro. For the first time in a very long time, she felt really scared; felt so terrified that her life was in danger. First, the baby she was carrying would be called an abomination. It would be an evidence she's had intercourse with a wolf which was forbidden and would definitely cost her life and that of Pishan's! But she didn't want that to happen! Oh, no... she didn't want to endanger anyone. So, she needed to act fast.

Nervously, she hurried to her empty scripts and began scribbling on it, writing a letter to Pishan. It appeared bad as her hands were shaking "Pishan We have a big problem. I believe I'm pregnant. Please, we need to meet up and talk about it. I'll be in the cave in two days time. Hurry up, Pishan! I'm so scared!". – Done, she rolled it up and placed it on the floor. Formerly, she'd have looked for a way to deliver it to him; but three weeks ago, she discovered a new trick of sending messages through invisible air. a. Getting on her knees, she closed her eyes, placed her palms together and began the enchantment. It was going to take sometime, but at least, it was faster than sending it on land. She continued with the enchantment for a long time while until finally, the letter was no longer in front of her and had vanished into thin air. 6

WIND WALKER MOUNTAIN A

Dyani had a light smile on her face as she walked into the room with the door being held open by Griffin. The sweet smell from the burning incense welcomed her with some relief that was actually her favourite thing in his room. "How are you, Dyani? Hope you didn't have a hard time coming here?" Griffin asked warmly as he locked up the door while she took a seat. "Of course, I didn't. And you? How have you been?" She looked at him and asked. "Well, I've been fine. Although, I missed you". Dyani's stomach growled. "...I was here just a week ago" she lowered her eyes and said timidly. "Well, a week is just like a year to me, Dyani." He chuckled and reached for a drink. Few minutes later and a cup of wine was placed in front of Dyani. "Thank you" She lifted up the cup to him before taking some gulps. "So, how is Cara?" Griffin asked as he took the seat next to her. It made Dyani cringe because he was always sitting opposite; not next. "Uhm... she's doing just fine" she answered a little uncomfortably and took another sip from her cup. "That's great. And the King? How is he doing? And... are the rumours really true about the Vampires wanting to seize power?" "Yes, it is. The King is actually out on a meeting with them. I just hope they come to a reasonable conclusion". "Hm. Must be really hard for the King. Sincerely, I feel great pity for him. First, his long awaited son went missing, then his favourite wife and now, his power being challenged." Griffin paused and sighed. "There's still no news about... that wife of his, right?" • "No" Dyani's eyes drooped. The thought of Shilah always made her sad. "It's been two months already, yet there's been no word from her. Sometimes, I wonder if it's necessary to continue praying for her safety". "Hey ...it's fine" Griffin cooed with a hand on her shoulder. "You don't need to give up. I have a feeling she's still alive somewhere and will be back soon". > "B... But, how soon?" Dyani scoffed. "She went out to look for her missing son but ended up missing as well. If she was alive, wouldn't we have heard something from her already? Where could she possibly be for two months? She doesn't even know anyone aside the fake family she grew up with". "Calm down, Okay?" Griffin held her cheeks. "You don't need to panic. I just have a very strong feeling she's alive and will be back soon" Dyani sighed deeply and took her cheeks away from his hold. "I hope so, anyway" she mumbled. They both went silent afterwards with Dyani's face looking swollen. She didn't even pay attention to Griffin anymore, but not until she felt his hand on her thigh. With bended brows, she looked at him and didn't even catch her next breath before his lips came crashing on hers. "Hah! Griffin!" She gasped and sprang on her feet, looking perplexed. In shock, she touched her lips and looked up at him. "What do you think you're doing?!" "Come on, Dyani; you don't need to act ignorant..." He was already on his feet and had tried reaching for her face. "Ignorant?" She slapped his hand away. "How can you even say that to me, Griffin?" He paused and brushed his fingers into his hair, desperation being so evident. "So, simply because I decided to heed to your advice of just being friends you feel you've earned it all? I'm only here because I needed someone to talk to, Griffin and for the past two months, you made me feel like you're one. So, why are you trying to take advantage of me?" "Advantage?" He scoffed. "You call my love for you an advantage? I love you, Dyani! And each time I see you, it makes me go mad knowing you're not mine! Is that really an advantage?." Dyani nearly lost her tongue for the next three seconds. "We... we've talked about this, Griffin. I am married to the King and nothing's going to change that". She could see the hurt in his eyes; tho, they flashed for just a second. "L.. I know, okay? And I'm not asking you to change it; I just want you to give me a chance as well. Please, Dyani..." He took her hand. 2 "Have you gone crazy?" She scoffed as she pushed him away. "Do you even know the consequences of what you're asking? You really want me to give my body to you when it's owned by another? What exactly do you take me for, Griffin?" "I take you to be the first and only woman my heart has ever beaten for!" He yelled, his eyes glistening. "It's not my fault, Dyani. From the start, I had no idea you'd be taken from me. Else, I wouldn't have fallen so deeply for you. So please, stop blaming me!" Staring at him, a tear slipped

Dyani's eye. But, she quickly sniffed and wiped it off. "I'm truly sorry, Griffin; but this would be the very last time we'd be seeing each other. And this time around, I really mean it. There are many ladies out there; you should move on". Another tear dripped her eye, and wiping it off again, she turned towards the door. "No! Dyani, please!" He ran after her and hugged her from behind, tearfully. "Please, don't do this to me! I'm sorry...." No matter how determined she wanted to be, his tears broke her, she had to burst out uncontrollably. They stayed that way and wept for sometime until finally, she pushed him away and ran out the door. •

AT THE PALACE

Queen Chaska, filled with fear, laid with her legs opened in front of the mid-wife. Of course, it wasn't Ahiga but someone else who was also a good midwife. She closed her eyes the whole time, enduring all the pains and irritation that came with the woman's hand dancing inside her vagina. It was so painful; it made her feel she was going through labour. "Sorry, Queen Chaska. Just a little more .." The midwife encouraged as she dipped her hand more. And finally, just when Chaska was about giving up, she withdrew her hand. "Hah!" Came Chaska's gasp, followed by a painful grunt. It had to take her sometime to get over it and have her eyes opened. And when she did, the displeased face of the mid-wife was the first sight she saw. > "S... Sara?" She called nervously as she managed to sit up. "Talk to me. What is happening? What does the test say?" But the advanced woman was silent and just had her both hands on her waist. "Sara, please!" Chaska groaned impatiently. "We've been at this for two months now, trying to know why I can't conceive for the King. So, if you've found something, I'd suggest you don't try to keep it from me. Please...!" The pain in her eyes – it made the midwife doubt if she was to add to it. "I'm truly sorry, Queen Chaska" She said bitterly. "But...it looks like your womb is damaged".

Chapter 213 The Agony

Hearing those words for Chaska, were the worst words she's ever had to hear. She felt her heart split into two, together with the last drop of happiness she's ever had. And for the first time, she wished she was dumb and had heard wrongly. . Staring at the woman, it took her some time to find her tongue and words and more importantly, comprehend what she had just heard. The midwife could obviously feel her pain and felt more terrible for her. "Are..." Chaska opened her lips to speak, but the words were not forthcoming. So, she closed them right back as a tear slipped her eye. "I'm sorry, Queen Chaska" the midwife consoled, tenderly touching her shoulder. "You'll be fine". "How?" Her shaky voice came in a whisper. "How will it be fine? I'll never be able to carry a child again. How...how are you even sure this is correct? Did you check it properly? I can't just...lose my womb so easily". Tears dripped her eyes effortlessly. • "I'm truly sorry, Queen..." "No!". She suddenly yelled hysterically. "Don't tell me you're sorry! This cannot be true! I still need to carry a child! I can't stay this way!!” The midwife went mute as she realized no amount of words would be able to calm the poor woman. She watched her cry heavily for a long time and struggled on her feet. 6 “I cannot believe you” She whimpered. “I believe you’ve been sent by an enemy to bring this badnews to me. So, I don’t believe you!”

With her hand on her tummy and still in tears, she headed for the door.

She cried all the way to her carriage, her hand still squeezing her tummy tight. How could this be true? How could her womb be damaged? Yes; she’s been unable to get pregnant for some years and has been having missed cycles, but that was no reason to damage her womb! It was no reason to seize her ability to bare a child. How would she survive? Just how?? Mavy was dead and now she had just Unika. She needed more children! How could this possibly happen to her? The guards by the carriage noticed how tears but felt reluctant asking what the problem was as they knew the kind of person she was. She could get aggressive and send them all away; it was only on a very few times she could act normal. 1 So, they all just kept mute as she walked towards them and entered the carriage.

Chaska’s hurt kept increasing as they rode all the way to the Palace. Her heart kept getting weaker. She didn’t even realize they had gotten to the Palace when the carriage stopped moving until a guard had to call repeatedly. She shuddered out of thoughts and looked at him with a little fright. “We’re at the Palace, My Queen” . She closed her eyes and sighed, wiping off the tear that stained on it. And feeling she was calm enough, she stepped out. She walked like a semi-ghost, having her head bowed and seeming lost in thoughts. Even the maids could notice it especially when she didn’t respond to their greeting or act like she could hear them and as a matter of fact, she really couldn’t hear them. Her ears had been blocked by the hurtful words of the midwife and at so many points, she was moved to tears. She fought so hard to control it and approaching the door of her room, she could overheard Urika’s whimpers. “Please, my princess; you need to eat up. You haven’t had a thing for some horus now and it’s bad for your health” She could overhear Gina’s risen voice. 1 “Mmh! Mmmh!” Came her daughter’s mumbles next. Whatever was left of Chaska’s heart, splitted totally at the hearing of that as she realized that would be the only daughter she would have for the rest of her life. With shaky hands, she opened the door and confirmed what she had heard – the imbecile Urika on the bed with Gina trying to feed her. 3 “My Queen!” Gina gasped and stood up when she noticed her. “You’re back!” But the broken Chaska could say nothing as a tear slipped her eye while staring at her once pretty daughter. Neck bent, hand twisted; everyday of her life, she found it so hard to believe that was her own child. 6 “My... My Queen, how did the meeting go with the midwife?” Gina was already looking worried, considering the look on her face. And it took Chaska some time to utter some words. “She said my womb is damaged” Her eyes were still fixed on Urika. “What?” Gina placed her palm over her lips. For the next few seconds, she was gobsmacked. “My...My Queen! Is she sure?! I mean... could there be a mistake somewhere?” With a sigh, Chaska moved forward to the other side of the window.

“I know I did wrong, Gina” She sniffed. “I know I did wrong by conspiring to take Shilah’s child. But this – this is just too much” she paused and sniffed again. “I only took a child, but whatever curse she's placed on me has taken more than I did! First, it took Mavy, turned Urika into an imbecile and now, taken my ability to bare more children. What else will it do to me? Take my life?!" There was so much pain in her voice as she spoke; it broke Gina completely. s "All I did was take one child, but it has taken three things already. Wherever she is, I hope Shilah is dead! And just incase she's not, I'll kill her the very moment I set my eyes on her! I'll kill her and take the blame". 3 Another bittered tear slipped her eye and still staring out the window, she found the King riding in.

Pishan was right behind King Dakota as they rode into the Palace with the rest of the guards. Halting the horses, Dakota stepped down and grumpily began walking in, ignoring the courtesy of the guards coming to welcome him. From every indication, it was obvious he was angry and Pishan was the only one free enough to go after him. He tried as much as he could to do hasten his steps and meet up with him, but the King's angry steps could never be compared. He'd thought the King was headed for his chambers but was surprised when he took a different tum. He followed him, regardless, and it became clearer to him when they started approaching Shilah's room. Oh... The King still looked aggressive until he'd opened the door and walked in. With the door left opened, Pishan was able to go close but stopped at the doorway. The sight of the King stranding and staring at Shilah's room tore him apart. He watched the way he stared at the bed, then at the wardrobe, the window, every corner of the room from just one spot. No doubt, her memories and that of their son's were getting a hold of him again. . He looked up at the ceiling and sullenly, sat on the bed. "Go away, Pishan. I want to be alone for now" he muttered with his head bowed into his palms. Pishan, being a man that had served the King for so many years knew his limits and when the King really needed to be alone. So, without arguing it, he lowered he gave a bow and retreated from the room.

He walked with slow relaxed steps to his room, wondering if and when things would ever get any better. For the past two months, it's been pain and gloominess and it was already above frustrating. The King that was beginning to find some light, had gone back to the broken man he used to be. When would things go back to normal? Soon? Or never? His mind lingered on the thoughts all the way to his room; and getting in, all he had in mind was to take a cold bath and grab some sleep.

He was already undressing when the sight of a note on the table gripped his attention. His brows furrowed as he stared at it. It wasn't there before he left .. Curiously, he budged forward and his eyes beamed when he saw the name "Sukie" It was Sukie! She must've sent it using her newly - found trick. He quickly took it up and ran his eyes through it's content and the moment he spotted the word "Pregnant", he felt his heart stop working.

AT THE WITCHES PALACE A

Sukie never knew she could stare for so long at the mirror in her room. As a matter of fact, she's had that mirror for over five years but could count the number of times she's paid attention to it. She wasn't just looking at her face, but her tummy which her hand caressed.

It made her feel so strange knowing she was indeed, carrying a little one inside of her. Being a mother was something she had never imagined and to think the baby was actually an abomination....she didn't even know what to think. She'd continued staring at the flat tummy until suddenly, there was a knock on the door and for the first time, she was frightened by a knock. She didn't even know what she was thinking; her insecurities were heightened as she felt her condition might get discovered at any time. She took in a very deep breath, looked round the room to be sure she wasn't keeping anything carelessly and satisfied, she went for the door. She had been expecting it to be one of the sisters as usual, but when it turned out to be the Supreme Sister herself, she felt everything in her spin. Whaaat???? Kylie was standing in front of her door for the very first time?? What was she doing there??!

Chapter 214 In The Middle Of Nowhere

All Sukie felt was fear as she bowed to the Supreme Sister in front of her. That would actually be the first time she'd be coming to her room directly. Every other time she wanted to see her, she'd usually send for her, not come directly. Why was she suddenly there on a day like that? "Greetings, Supreme Sister" she tried not to stutter as she bowed respectfully. With her hands at her back, Kylie made to move in and swiftly, Sukie stepped away for her. "How are you doing, Sukie?" She asked calmly as she walked into the room, taking her eyes around in scrutiny. "I'm... I'm doing just great, Supreme Sister. Um... I'm deeply surprised to have you here. It's unexpected" ni With a light smile, she turned to face Sukie. "I just wanted to surprise you, sweetheart. Realized I've never come to your room before". @

For some reasons, Sukie felt her tension die down a bit. "I'm so honored, Supreme Sister" she bowed again with a blushful smile. "Pl... Please, have a seat while I get you something to...." "Please, Sukie; I am no visitor" she interrupted genially. "I actually didn't plan on staying as I have somewhere to go. I just ..." She paused and took some steps round the room. "I also wanted to tell you we'd be going out tomorrow morning". What?! Oh, no! Sukie was meant to journey out first thing in the morning! "Uhm... Supreme Sister, where are we going?" She asked nervously, feeling grateful she was actually standing behind her. "I don't even know yet. I just want it to be me and you, Sukie – some alone time even for a few hours". "Oh...that.... that would be great. But, Supreme Sister, I was just about coming to inform you that I'd be traveling first thing tomorrow". Kylie's brows arched. "Really? Where are you going?" "Uhm..." Sukie lowered her eyes to the ground. "One of the people I do help in the Oaks Village wrote to me. She said she needs my help – urgently". "I see" Kylie mumbled and resumed with her few steps. "Well, I guess she'd have to wait, Sukie. I really want us to have that time. Perhaps, when we're done by noon, you can leave". O Traveling by noon – Sukie thought. It wasn't too bad, afterall. "If you say so, Supreme Sister. I'm fine with it" She bowed again. "Good. I must take my leave now. See you later, Sukie" She started towards the door while Sukie followed. But gripping the door's hinge, she paused and turned to Sukie. Her eyes for locked into hers for while until swiftly, she moved close and gave a kiss. For the first time, Sukie could feel nothing from her kiss; absolutely nothing. Done, Kylie broke the kiss and finally left without uttering anything else.

NEXT DAY

LORD RYDER'S CLUTCH

The news of the Alpha King's fight with Lord Ryder was circulating so fast; so fast, it was extending to non-wolf villages. The date had been finalized, everyone was anticipating and getting themselves ready to make sure they'd be present. Of course, who wouldn't want to witness a kind of fight that hadn't been witnessed in centuries? Not even in the blind would want to miss it.

The news was sparking a lot of reactions from people as well as some believed Ryder was just being foolish while others believed he was doing the right thing. Of course, there would always be two parties to a fight.

Lady Cami walked into the room with a goblet of fresh blood in her hand, her heart fluttering at the sight of Lord Ryder seated in front of the bed. She cleared her throat slightly as she stood in front of him and proffered the goblet. There was a deep cut on his face – one he had gotten from the Alpha King. 1 "It's ready" She muttered. Gently, Ryder received it and took a sip. "You can leave, Cami" He grunted. Tentatively, she turned around but suddenly paused and turned back to him. "Uhm... My Lord" She bowed. "If .. if you wouldn't mind, I'd love to talk to you about something". When Ryder said nothing, she took that as a go-ahead and went on. "Your fight with the Alpha King, does it really have to happen? I mean.... from my own opinion, the Alpha King has been fair to everyone. He doesn't give preferential treatments, not even to his own people. Besides, we have a rule for transfer of power. Why don't we just wait until it gets to our turn? Moreover, it's a fight to death. I feel scared that... if you lose, you may die and the Alpha King would get to hate us. Then, he'd start being partial to the Vampires". "Who asked for your opinion, Cami?" He suddenly cut in, making her heart give a beep. "Didn't I tell you to leave?" 2 "I'm... I'm sorry; I just ..." "Why don't you admit you're only concerned about your dumb sister and nothing else?" He dropped the goblet and got on his feet. "No! It's not her. I'm concerned about every..." A hard slap shut her up; one that made her wince and hold her cheek. "You have no right whatsoever to give me an opinion, Cami. Now, GET OUT OF MY SIGHT!". Whimpering, she turned and ran out of the room. .

AT THE WITCHES PALACE

Sukie zipped up her bag containing everything she'd be needing for her journey with the Queen, and her journey to see Pishan. Done, she hung the bag and looked round the room – her lovely quiet room. A rueful smile touched her lips, recalling how much comfort it had given her – especially her bed. It used to be a wonderful place, but now; she wasn't even sure she'd be seeing it again. Her hand moved up to her tummy as she caressed it. The baby in her might end up changing her entire life. She couldn't tell; she had no idea what would happen. But she really hoped for the best. Taking a really deep breath, she forced herself to bid goodbye to her room. Tho, it was painful, but she had to leave.

She walked outside with her bag and found Kylie already on her horse. Oops. Seated with her red long cloak, she stared keenly at Sukie's face as she approached her while Sukie kept praying they don't take long, wherever they were headed. A part of her instincts had told her to sneak out at night, but she felt that was meaningless as no one knew of her secret yet. Besides, if they had found out she was missing, it'd have risen a more dangerous alarm. Standing in front of Kylie's horse, she bowed her head: "Greetings, Supreme Sister. Sorry for keeping you waiting". "It's fine, Sukie. Get on let's go" She responded and swiftly, Sukie got on hers. "Supreme Sister, are you sure you do not want company?" Sister Remata asked, having an obvious loath on her face. "Yes, I'm sure. I want it to be just me and Sukie for today" Pulling the reins of her horse, she began riding out and Sukie followed.

The two ladies rode for a long time with Sukie wondering where they were actually headed. Maybe to an hotel? Or a bar? Or just somewhere she wouldn't want to be? They were both riding speedily on their horses with hers being behind Kylie's since she was the one taking the lead. But at a time, Kylie slowed down her horse and began strolling with it and of course, Sukie did same. They were in the middle of nowhere – in the woods – and their pace got reduced in such a way they could chat. "The sky looks so beautiful today, doesn't it?" Kylie suddenly asked, although she wasn't looking at the sky and that made Sukie ponder. "Uh...it sure is" Sukie looked up and replied. Beautiful? The sky was just normal. Silence dropped in afterwards with just the hooves of their horses being held. Sukie couldn't figure it out, but there was a little difference in Kylie's attitude. "Do you remember the first time we met?" She suddenly asked, sparking a brow-reaction from Sukie. "It was on the tenth year anniversary of my mother's death and you had just discovered your witch powers. You were so..." she paused and smiled. "... brave – the only person who was bold enough to come console me despite my rage. You became my favorite, Sukie; became my bestfriend. And it was so... lovely" she chuckled. The memories rang a bell in Sukie's head, but she wondered why Kylie was suddenly bringing it up. "Remember the mornings you'd make me breakfast even before I was awake? And the evenings you'd get me mixed fruits before I go to bed? It was your hobby for ten months, Sukie, until I had to stop you". Abruptly, she stopped moving her horse. And Sukie did same. Her horse was slightly behind Kylie's, so she couldn't see her face. "Aside my mother, you were the closest person I'd fallen in love with. You...you became more than a bestfriend to me. You became my lover. I was ready to give you my all, Sukie. I was ready to have you rule beside me for as long as possible. I gave you... everything I could and that's the reason this betrayal is coming as the hardest thing for me". 3 Now, that was the moment Sukie realized the doom setting in. It started getting clearer... 1 "You" Kylie cocked her head to glance at her, her eyes looking so dreadful. "You dare cheat on me with another and carry his child? How long did you think it'd take me to hear the tiny heartbeat of that thing in your womb?"

Chapter 215 The Sacred Rule

Sukie's heart jumped out of her chest right that moment, hearing those words from Kylie. Her entire skin grew goosebumps as she felt herself go completely numb. No; she was probably dreaming. 5 "How could you, Sukie?" Kylie's voice gave a light crack. "How could you be so foolish to betray me in a way like this?" a. It wasn't a dream – Sukie realized. It was all happening! Her pregnancy had been discovered by Kylie! But, how...?! O Her hands began shaking, her lips couldn't go closed again. Dreadfully, she pulled the reins of her horse and tried riding away, but Kylie was faster as she stretched out her hand towards her and magically pulled her off the horse. "Ahhhh!" Sukie screamed as she fell roughly to the ground, her back and ribs aching. She whimpered in her breath as she laid on the ground, trying to get over the pain. "Do you know what I did what I did when I left your room yesterday?" Kylie asked as she climbed down from her horse, walked closer and stood before Sukie. "I wasn't having any meeting to attend; I just gave that as a flimsy excuse. I had returned to my room, and cried all night. For the first time since the death of my mother, I soaked my sheet with tears as I wondered how you could do a thing like this to me. I gave you everything, Sukie. We were meant to be together forever. The whole time, you were cheating on me with a flimsy male?" A tear had slipped Sukie's eyes. She wanted badly to get on her feet, but the pains from her ribs wouldn't let her. "When Corrine had told me you requested for a pregnancy book and suspected you were pregnant, I couldn't believe it" she went on.

Sukie's eyes dimmed. Corrine??? Corrine was the betrayer? "I didn't want to believe it, Sukie; but I also couldn't deceive myself. I started connecting the dots, comparing how you acted and it became so clear that you were indeed, pregnant. I confirmed it when I heard that little heartbeat yesterday" she paused and sighed, tears resting at the brink of her eyes. "You've hurt me, Sukie, in a terrible way. And now, I want to know – who's responsible for that thing in your womb?" "Supreme... Sister..." Sukie called feebly. "I've been thinking" Kylie sniffed like she hadn't heard her. "How were you able to get so much information on the Alpha King's wife? How did you know so much about the wolves? Some time ago, Remata had accused you of having a secret affair, but I defended you 'cause I trusted you. Little did I know she was telling the truth. Regularly, you kept going out to heal people, but the whole time, you were only seeing your secret lover. Now, it has become so clear – you, Sukie were the one that tried to break the Alpha King's curse. About a year ago when he'd ordered a lockdown in his mountain and tried lifting his curse, I figured out a witch was there to help him and now it's all clear you were that witch. You've been their ally all along 'cause you've been sleeping with one of them! "Admit it, Sukie; you haven't been mingling with a mere human. A Wolf is responsible for this child, isn't it? That's the reason you know so much about them, that's the reason the Alpha King didn't wage war when he'd accused of shooting his fourth wife. That's the reason you defended his wife in the cave and was against us killing her. And at the last meeting we had with the Alpha King, I noticed how his gamma looked at you". 9 Sukie's heart gave a mighty leap. Oh, no...no. Not Pishan, please. "The whole time while the King and I were talking, his gamma was only interested in staring at you and now, I'm just thinking of how close he is to the King. It's all making sense..." "Please" Sukie sobbed in. "He's...He's not the father of my child". "Then, who is, Sukie?!" She roared angrily. "Tell me who the fool is!!!" Sukie bursted into more tears. "Two months ago, we were hunting Ayita's daughter. I had no idea you were becoming Ayita yourself. You've broken our sacred rule – multiple times – and deserve death. But, how do you expect me to kill you, Sukie? Just how?!" She turned around and let out a tear. "This is the reason I brought you out here, 'cause I didn't want the sisters to know how much of a betrayer you are. So, you tell me, Sukie; right after I kill this child, what do I do next?" a Kill her child? Sukie thought dreadfully.

"I'm sorry, Supreme Sister", she wept. "I didn't mean to hurt you; I didn't mean to break your trust. But please, don't harm my child". "That thing is not surviving, Sukie!" Kylie turned to her yelled. "That thing is forbidden and must be killed!!" Angrily, she stretched her hand towards Sukie and released the force against her belly. "No!!!!" Sukie cried out in pains. Acting fast, she released her force against one of the trees closest to Kylie. She made it uproot from the ground and made to hit Kylie, and in a bid to escape it, Kylie had to step back. But when the tree fell, it stood as a barrier between her and Sukie. Lucky enough, Sukie's horse was on the other side with her. With excruciating pains and all the strength she could gather, she staggered on her feet and struggled to reach her horse. She looked back at Kylie on the other side of the tree and guessing she might want to attack her again, she had to do something she didn't want to. She conjured a heavy wind and threw it towards her so she fell roughly on the ground. And while she tried getting a grip of herself, Sukie seized the opportunity, got on the horse and rode off as fastly as she could.

AT DAKOTA'S PALACE

Pishan was restless, moving to and fro in his room with Sukie's letter in his hand. Ever since he had gotten the letter the previous day, he'd been restless and unable to eat nor sleep. His mind wouldn't stop lingering about – Sukie was pregnant for him; but it was forbidden. And she sounded really scared in her letter. Where could she be and how could she be doing? Probably, she should be at the cave the next day, but he couldn't tell if he could wait that long as he badly wanted to see her and make sure she was fine. The King's fight with Ryder was in two days time and he needed to be there for him; but how would he be there for him when Sukie would be in trouble? Why did both circumstances have to happen same time? Just why? He finally settled on the bed, his head in his palms. And right there, he made a short prayer to the goddess, asking she makes everything right. &

Sukie continued riding for as long as she could until it became totally impossible. Blood was dripping down her legs, so heavily like urination and it came with unbearable pains down her pelvic. She didn't just stop the horse but fell from it as her legs had become too weak to hold on. She grunted painfully as she landed on the ground, her eyes going to her thighs which had blood rolling on it. "No..." She whimpered, her heart beating rapidly with tears equally strolling down. The pains she felt was like nothing she had ever felt before; it was unimaginable. She placed her hand on her tummy and tried making a protective spell: “Kaptsiel, Malakhel, avra ke-davra” she said with a shaky tone, but it obviously wasn't working as the pains only increased. “Kaptsiel, Malakhel, avra ke-davra” She repeated it three more times, but nothing still worked as it was obviously too late. “No, please...” She wept profusely, holding her tummy tight. “My baby...I don't want to lose you. Please ...” Alone in the isolated area, she laid helplessly in pains. § *****

The Sisters were surprised when they found the Queen returning alone; and they were actually more confused to find her in a way they've never seen her before. As she rode in and slowed down to stop, three of the sisters rushed to her. “Supreme Sister...!” “Welcome back, Supreme Sister..” “Supreme Sister, are you alright?” But Kylie said nothing as she climbed down from the horse and dumbly, began walking away. The sisters followed her, anyways – throwing glances at each other and wondering what was wrong. Kylie looked just pale as she walked in and stopped when she got to the throne room. Her mood had attracted a lot of the sisters who were muddled seeing their Queen that way. Her hair was ruffled with her eyes swollen like one that had been crying. She looked sister, . “Supreme Sister...” Remata called as she hurried towards her. “Are...are you alright? Did something happen?” She looked at the sisters behind her and asked if they had seen anything, but they all shrugged. And finally, Kylie made to speak. “Let it be known this day...” she began. The rest of the sisters got their ears ready as her words sounded precious at that moment. “...that Sukie is no longer a part of us. She is pregnant for a wolf and thus, broke the sacred rule. As we speak, she's currently on the run and the moment she's found, her judgement will be passed”.
2 The shock that crept into the faces of the sisters was one that could never be fathomed. Remata's lips were dropped open, an intense silence filled the air. And even as Kylie walked away, none of them could utter a word.

Chapter 216 Exposed

Pishan paced restlessly to and fro the cave. His heart was beating so hard, he could literally hear it. “Oh! Sukie, where are you?” He gritted, making a fist of his hands. It's been two days; two days since Sukie was meant to be there, but she wasn't and it was badly eating him up. Where could she be? Why was she taking so long? Could she be in danger? Did her sisters finally discover her secret? He was extremely worried and couldn't even breathe. Maybe, he should find a way to get to the witches Palace and know if she was still there. Urgh! He was thinking lamely. There was no way he'd make it alive to the withdrawn Palace. But, if something was wrong, Sukie would've written to him, right? Yes! She'd have let him know. So, why didn't she? He found a place to sit and buried his head in his palms. His child...oh! For the goddess sake; he really hoped they were safe. He couldn't afford to lose either of them. He stayed morosely for a long time, until he heard strange footsteps coming from the entrance. It sounded weak; and when the footsteps stopped, he swiftly lifted his head to behold Sukie standing right there, dressed in her usual red cloak with it's hood over her head. But the look on her face....it was killing. "Su...Sukie?" Pishan faltered as he feebly got on his feet, his breath seizing. Shock and happiness battled inside him, but shock eventually won when his eyes found blood dripping down her legs. He grasped his next breath in a gasp as his eyes dimmed in disbelief, and that was when it became all clear to him – the look on her face; that was when it became so clear. They stood apart for the while, just staring at each other until swiftly, Sukie reached for the floor. "Sukie!!!" Pishan yelled as he ran to her, but she had already landed before he could. Nevertheless, he lifted her up and placed her head on his thighs, his eyes still catching the blood. . "What happened to you?" He asked in a shaky tone. "What... happened?" As Sukie stared into his eyes, seeing the tears in them, she let down hers. "I'm sorry, Pishan" She whimpered weakly. "I lost our child; it's gone". Her words were like a two-edged sword piercing through Pishan's heart. He felt stabbed, felt betrayed, felt hurt. His hands shook as he held onto her dearly and his heart ached more as her words echoed in his ears. The child was gone? He wasn't going to be a father?

Silently, he kissed his lips on her hair and wept. He tried consoling her that everything would be fine, but deep down, he needed to hear those words from someone else. *****

NEXT DAY

Pishan walked into the cave with the two baskets filled with fruits, food and water. His heart cracked when he found Sukie sitting on the rock, her hands wrapped up like one shivering from cold. Her red hood was over her head and coupled with her broken mood, she looked just like a shadow of herself. Pishan shook his head and sighed, then gathering every courage he could, he budged towards her. "I'm back" He muttered as he placed the heavy baskets behind where she sat. Sukie said nothing nor lift her head to see him. And tenderly, Pishan went to crouch in front of her. "How're you feeling? Has the bleeding stopped?" He cooed as slowly, he lifted her chin so she could look at him. "I...will be fine" She stated inaudibly and lowered her head again. Her broken sight was ruining Pishan in a terrible way. "I know it hurts, Sukie" He touched her cheeks. "Believe me, it hurts me too. But .. you just need to move on. You need to get strong". Silence dropped in for a few seconds until Sukie exhaled and stood up. Finally... With her hands still wrapped around her, she took some steps away from Pishan and turned to back him. "Move on to what, exactly, Pishan? She uttered. "Move on to where? My home? I can never go back there 'cause I'm sure I'll be killed on sight. And here? I can't stay here either 'cause it's totally dangerous for me. If a wolf gets to see me, they'd raise an alarm and have me killed. I'm rejected, Pishan; I don't have anywhere to return to", "Please, don't say that .." Pishan strolled to her. "But, it's the truth!" She sniffed. "My life has been ruined; I lost my child, and I lost my place. I...I also put your life in danger because if anyone gets to know you've been helping me and you were responsible for that baby, you'd be dead as well. I'm actually lucky the magical map was destroyed two months ago else, my sisters would've stormed this place already. But the Supreme Sister was working on a new map and I'm not sure how long it'd take to get ready", . "And I don't care" He held her cheeks. "Your problem is my problem and I'm telling you – we'll get out of this way". 7 Tears slid down her cheeks, but Pishan was there to quickly wipe them off. "I feel so terrible that I lost the child that caused all these” She went on, “Although...I just had it for a few days, I felt so attached to it and was already getting ready to become a mother. 1... I was looking forward to it, Pishan; and it’s quite unfortunate it went too soon”, a “There are still a million opportunities to have more, Sukie” He cooed. “You’re still a woman; you still have a womb, and if you give me the permission, I’ll make you carry as many babies as possible because I believe we’ll have forever to ourselves”. Sukie bent her head and chuckled tearfully. “How can you be so sure about that? Our union is forbidden”, “It’s forbidden in the eyes of others, but not for me” He responded. “Don’t lose hope, Sukie. We’ll get through this”. Afterwards, he pulled her into a hug and they stayed that way for a long time. “I’m sorry, I’ll be gone for a couple of days” he said as they finally seperated from the hug. “The King’s fight is tomorrow and we need to ride out today. So, I’m likely to be away for...” “It’s okay; I understand” Sukie smiled ruefully. “I... actually hope your King wins. And I hope you’re safe too”. “Sure, I will” Pishan sighed. “I brought enough food, fruits and water that should last you while I’m away. And there are enough woods over there, just incase you need to warm any of the meals, you could start up a fire and do so. I’m sure you’ll be safe in here as people hardly come to this area. But just incase anything comes up and you need my help, do not relent to write to me. Okay?” “Okay” Sukie muttered with a slight nod. Afterwards, Pishan pulled her into another hug. ; “I love you – so much” He whispered. • And in a faint tone, she responded: “I love you too”.

Pishan rode back to the Palace and went straight to the King’s chambers to know if he was ready. Thinking about the fight the next day made him kind of nervous. Of course, the King was a powerful one, but what if Ryder had al ulterior motive and came up with a trick? That was the reason Pishan needed to be there to make sure negative things do not happen. He knocked on the King’s door and went in when his voice ushered him in. “Greetings, My King” He bowed. “Where have you been, Pishan? Do you realize we have a journey ahead of us?” King Dakota grumbled as he fixed his collars in front of the mirror. “I... apologize, My King. I had something important to fix” Pishan answered with his head bowed. “You should go get ready and meet me at the stables. By the way,” Dakota paused and took a letter from the table. “A letter came in not long ago from the witches”. Pishan’s heart skipped a bit at the mention of that name. The witches?! He couldn’t even cloak the surprise from his eyes. “The... The witches?” He scoffed. “Why?” “They sent a letter not just to me, but to every other Alpha and VampLord. The Supreme Sister claims one of the witches named Sukie is pregnant and she strongly believes a wolf is responsible for it. Thus, the sacred rule has been broken and an investigation needs to be carried out. She claims the witch in question is currently on the run. I don’t know, Pishan; do you think this is true? Which of our own would fall for a witch? I truly don’t believe it”. > Pishan could swear his heart wasn’t beating anymore and he was only but a standing corpse. This was it...it was all getting exposed, He gulped hard and tried finding the right words to say, but couldn’t. “Pishan?” Dakota called. “Are you alright? Have you been listening to me?” “Uh...Of course” He shook his head. “I’m... just shocked, you know? But, I think it’s possible”. “Maybe we should talk about this later on. We have a journey ahead. So, let’s go” Dakota turned away and retreated to his inner room. But it took Pishan some time to be able to move his feet. 5
