

The Charismatic Charlie Wade Chapter 4075

Orion Exeor's remarks made Jian unable to refute for a while, and his heart was even more shocked.

And Orion Exeor seemed to want to wake up this old friend once and for all, so he continued: "Jian, you must understand that your son did not simply usurp your position, he instigated the civil and military officials to overthrow together. With your dynasty, your desire for Huichundan is already obsessed, and preparing 200 billion dollars just to compete for Huichundan will definitely stimulate your descendants and other shareholders of your board of directors."

"In other words, you are like an old emperor who did not hesitate to exchange the power of a country for his longevity in ancient times. Your descendants and your civil and military officials can't stand it anymore, and they not only no longer support you, but also don't support you. If they trust you again, they even regard you as a stupor and a tyrant, and they just want to overthrow you and get everything back on track!"

"Think about it for yourself, if you didn't lose everyone's support yourself, how could your eldest son take away your power so easily and completely?"

Speaking of which, Orion Exeor paused for a moment and said with emotion: "Jian, everything has a cause and effect, you have to reflect on yourself!"

At this time, Jian was struck by lightning.

Before that, he only knew that it was his son who seized his power and took away the dynasty he had worked so hard to create.

But now he understands that it is he who is single-mindedly seeking longevity, which has also caused himself to lose the basis of support and trust in his own dynasty.

In this case, what else do you want to take back power? It's just a fool's dream!

Thinking of this, Jian was speechless and burst into tears.

And Fei Kexin was also awakened by Orion Exeor's words.

She hoped that her grandfather could live a long life, so she strongly supported his grandfather's longevity and rejuvenation pill.

But in addition to her filial piety as a granddaughter, a large part of this is also based on her own interests.

She and her father, as well as her brothers and sisters who share the same mother and father, have always lacked sufficient foundations in the family, and only rely on the blessing of the old man to live easier.

If the old man died early, her father, as Jian's youngest son, would only get the least benefit.

That's the crux of the matter.

I want my grandfather to be alive, but it doesn't mean that other people think the same way.

At this time, Charlie suddenly said coldly: "Back then, after King Yan Zhu Di rebelled and drove his nephew Emperor Jianwen out of the palace, he still had trouble sleeping and eating, and he spent his whole life searching for Emperor Jianwen's whereabouts, you are now Also be careful that your son kills you as much as possible."

Jian looked at Charlie and smiled bitterly: "He... shouldn't be so vicious... He told me frankly on the phone just now, what he meant was that as long as I don't go back to the United States, Just let me live the rest of my life in China, and when I die, let Ke Xin bring my body back to the United States for burial."

Charlie smiled playfully, shook his head, and said seriously: "In my opinion, the reason why he said this is based on the premise that he thinks you can live for a month or two at most, and he probably also thinks, After such a stimulus from him, you are very likely to die on the spot at the auction, or you may not recover since the auction, so that the few days left will continue to be greatly reduced."

Speaking of which, Charlie looked at him and said indifferently, "If I didn't save you just now, he might have got his wish now."

Hearing this, Jian's expression became extremely horrified.

charlie's expression froze at this time, and he continued to ask him: "Just imagine, if he knew that you have an extra year or two of life now, would he still be so calm and let you spend the rest of your life in China?"

charlie's question made Jian and Fei Kexin's heart skip a beat!

Jian thought that although he lost the power of the Fei family, he would have at least a year or two more lifespan, and charlie's rejuvenation pill would continue to be auctioned next year, so he might still have a chance.

But when he heard this, he realized that he was thinking a little too optimistically.

The son wants to die in the country, which is based on dying faster.

What if I die too slowly?

Thinking of this, Jian felt a chill.
