Feel the Way You Feel, My Love Chapter 1158

Joyce opened her mouth after sitting down. "You no longer have any competition now. So surely you'll have to go back to work. That's why I have brought some blueprints for you to amend."

"You can give them to me tomorrow when I go back to the company. There's no need to come purposely for that." Natalie displayed a confused look.

Upon hearing that, Joyce let out a sigh. "I thought so too. But these are quite urgent. I took them to the textile mill, and they said there were some problems. But I have no idea what went wrong as I'm not a designer. That's why I come to find you. After you finish checking, I still need to send them back to the textile mill."

"I see. Let me have a look." Natalie gestured for the kids to stop massaging and go to play by themselves.

After the kids went upstairs, Natalie looked through the blueprints one by one.

After a short while, she let out a chuckle. "It's the layout. The design is too complicated so it can't be made using the usual layout in the textile mill. The clothes won't be in the right shape with that. We'll need to use a different layout."

"I see." Realization dawned on Joyce. "I was sure such outstanding designs can achieve big sales after we launch them, but the textile mill told me they couldn't be made. So it turns out it's a problem with the layout."

Natalie grabbed her pen and started amending the blueprints. "Yes. By the way, these designs look lively. I got attracted to them at first glance. Do we have a new designer in the company?"

From what she knew, currently, no designer in the company would come out with such work.

Maybe most of them knew they have limited talents, so they rarely took risks creating new designs.

But all the blueprints in front of her eyes seemed extraordinarily bold and unique.

I'm sure our designers didn't design them.

Joyce nodded. "Yes, it's a new employee. Not long after you went overseas, a designer quit as she was pregnant. Then, I hired a new one. She's a graduate of design school, and her works are outstanding. By the way, she's your junior. She's from Laurent Academy of Design too."

"Is it?" Natalie was startled momentarily. "Only real talents can enter Laurent Academy of Design. It looks like we found ourselves a treasure. No wonder the textile mill couldn't recognize her layout. They are mostly used overseas."

"You should meet her tomorrow. Not to mention, she's your fans as well." Joyce smiled.

Natalie raised her eyebrow. "My fan?"

"That's right. That was the first thing she mentioned when she came for an interview." Joyce nodded slightly.

Natalie handed the blueprints that she amended back to Joyce. "I'm interested in her too. Let's meet her tomorrow. Please send these to the textile mill and ask them to change the layout."

"Okay, I'll excuse myself then." Joyce packed the blueprints and left.

Natalie stretched lazily and went upstairs.

The following day, Natalie went to the company and met the new designer.

Just like what Joyce said, she was indeed Natalie's fan.

But Natalie did not remember seeing her back in Laurent Academy of Design.

Nonetheless, there were over three hundred students there, and each student was under different mentors. Thus, Natalie figured it was expected that they had never met before.

Meanwhile, at Thompson Group, Lucy reported for work as well.

As Silas had already informed the HR department, Lucy got her staff ID in the blink of an eye. Later, she got brought to the janitorial department.

The staff in charge of her there could not wrap their heads around it.

Why would a young girl like her get a job as a janitorial staff? She can go elsewhere and easily find a job better than this one.
