

Returning from the Dead: His Secret Lover Chapter 1258

Chapter 1258 Check It Out

Sebastian thoughtfully went into the convenience store to buy some snacks and milk then waited for her outside the washroom.

Oblivious to him, while he was waiting outside, Sasha felt as though she had dropped to the deepest layer of hell.

Her change in emotion a while ago wasn't due to the darkening of the needle. It was due to a tugging sensation she felt in her stomach.

Then, she felt something flow out of her.

What is that?

She panicked.

She was a doctor.

She urgently dashed into the washroom.

She held her breath as she unzipped her pants and sat on the toilet seat.

But, to her dismay, she saw red on her underwear. She knew it wasn't a good sign despite the meager amount.

Her entire body started shivering as though she was surrounded by a blizzard.

How did it come to this?

She sat there unmoving for a very long time.

She was feeling lost.

She was a doctor, and it wasn't her first baby. She had taken the necessary precautions and had refrained from overexertion as well as control her food intake.

I've done all that so why is this happening?

Is it because my body is too weak?

It could be.

I was having trouble getting pregnant. But I have been blessed with a baby in the end. I knew it would be difficult for me to smoothly deliver my baby with my body being in such a weak state.

Hence the situation I'm in right now.

After combing through her thoughts, she felt a sense of ease. She promptly cleaned up then exited the washroom.

"You took a while in there... Is everything okay?"

Sebastian, who had waited very long outside, immediately approached her with concern when he saw her coming out of the washroom.

At that moment, she felt like bursting into tears.

Noticing his anxiety, a crazy thought came to her mind. She wanted to tell him that their baby was about to leave them soon.

However, she kept that urge in check and merely stared at him with glassy eyes.

No. I can't tell him now.

It's not confirmed yet. I can't do this to him.

Most of his anxiety and worries are due to me and my baby.

I don't want to see the hope in his eyes lost. I don't want to take that away from him.

"I felt a little dizzy just now, so it took me a while."

"Dizzy?"

He was soon distracted by her excuse.

"Why? Do you feel uncomfortable anywhere? Let's go to the hospital." He was about to bridal-carry her to the car.

She immediately stopped him before he could.

"No. Calm down. It's probably from low blood sugar. It's common among pregnant women. Why don't you buy me something sweet? I'll feel better right away."

She acted cute by tugging on his sleeve.

Sebastian heart softened at her cute act.

Something sweet?

She can pick whatever confectionery she wants after I carry her all the way there.

In the end, he bridal-carried her to the convenience store, eliciting envious stares from women around.

It was already evening when they returned to Jadeborough.

“Sebby, you must have something planned in the evening, so go and deal with it. I’m going to take a nap.” Sasha purposely said so once she got home.

I need an excuse to go to the hospital without him noticing.

It was good that he wasn’t suspicious at all. He merely nodded and proceeded downstairs. Not long after, she saw Devin and him leaving in his car.

She huffed out a relieved sigh, then quickly reached for her purse, preparing to leave for the hospital.

“Where’re you going? Didn’t you just got back?”

Unexpectedly, Sabrina came up with her child in her arms. She was puzzled as to why Sasha was leaving so soon after the latter had only got back.

Why didn’t I see her drop by so often before? So why is she always here after having a baby?

Sasha halted resignedly. "I'm going to the hospital. I just got a call from the doctor asking me to go for a check-up."

"Again? Are you made from glass? Didn't you have one not long ago? Has Sebastian lost his mind? You're pregnant, not sick. Does he need to be so anxious?"

"I guess I'm blessed," Sasha purposely rebutted.

She then took her purse and left.

Although she hasn't caught on yet, I know she'd bring it up with Sebastian if I didn't distract her. He might just find out the truth then.

Sasha arrived at the General Hospital with much nervousness. She went directly to Grayson's office instead of the gynecologist.

"Dr. Wallen, I'm feeling restless, so I came to see you."

After giving him the rundown of everything that happened, she straightforwardly told him the reason for her visit.
