

Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South

Chapter 2849

Chapter 2849

It was night.

Charity went to the hospital to get a rabies vaccine. Considering that she was about to take care of a cat, she went to a pet shop to get cat food and a cat bed.

The following day, she called Josh, "where are you? When can I go over to pick up the cat?"

"Didn't I say I'll send it over to you?" Josh seemed to be doing something as he was panting.

The man's panting voice coming through the phone sounded sexy, and it made Charity feel awkward hearing it. "Did I call you at an inconvenient time?"

"It's indeed not the right time."

"I'm sorry. I didn't know you were doing... that?" charity's scalp heated up.

"That?" Josh was puzzled, "what are you talking about?"

"Okay, I got it."

"What did you get? I'm training." Josh wiped some sweat off his forehead. "You can just come to our training base to get the cat. It's in my car."

"Training?" Charity was surprised and embarrassed at the same time.

“Nonsense, what else can I be doing if not training?” Josh paused as if he suddenly thought of something. Then, he gritted his teeth exasperatedly. “Eliza, were you thinking of something dirty just now?”

« »

“You’re so dirty.” Josh hung up angrily.

Charity was speechless.

She drove over, and Josh’s assistant, Yelena, came out to welcome her. 1

“President Robbins, you came at the right time. The managing manager at this sports center is here. Do you want to come in and say hello?” Yelena winked at Charity. “If you want to make a donation or investment, you can work with him directly. Many brands do this too.”

“Thanks.” Charity was grateful. Sports brands did have to be familiar with people in sports centers, and what she lacked was connections and resources in that area.

“Let’s go. I’ll take you inside.”

With that, Yelena led Charity inside.

Manager Lightwood of the sports center was watching Josh and his teammates’ training.

After Charity and Manager Lightwood shook hands, Manager Lightwood smiled and said, “President Robbins, you’re so lucky. Many brands have been wanting to get Josh to be their ambassador through me. I didn’t expect he would work with Neeson Corporation exclusively.”

"I found someone close to ask Josh for a favor," Charity said humbly. "Neeson Corporation isn't as good as before, otherwise, Josh wouldn't have considered us."

"Josh will be going to New Zealand for a competition at the end of the year and is training diligently. I think he has the potential to win."

Manager Lightwood spoke while he watched the training ground.

In thick training wear, Josh was on his skis, sliding down from a place over ten meters high. After that, he did a few aerial flips. It was pretty awful when he fell sometimes. 1

Charity knew that being an athlete was not easy. However, she did not expect they would be training under such conditions every day.

Ten minutes later, Josh walked over while limping. His cool face was dark, and he looked like he was in a bad mood.

"Hey, why did you come in here?" Josh snapped. "It's because of you that my performance was affected." 1

Charity took his words seriously and quickly apologized. "I'm sorry. I-"

"Ignore him," Manager Lightwood scolded him. "When aren't competitions packed with people and with ongoing live streams? You're the one who hasn't been training seriously lately."

"Alright, manager. I'll get some stuff for Eliza and go back for training afterward." Josh ran his hand through his hair.

After saying goodbye to Manager Lightwood, charity followed Josh to the parking lot.

Through a gap in the car's window, Josh handed the cat in the box over to her. "The cat has gotten its vaccine and has had its nails cut. You can thank me for that." 1

Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South Chapter 2850

Chapter 3067

Philip chuckled and said, "It's okay. Of course, it'd be better if fewer people turn up to test my strength."

Haha.

Owen laughed and said, "Young Patriarch Clarke, you're quite humorous. However, too many people want to test you because they see you as a thorn in their sides or maybe highly sought after."

Philip frowned in confusion and asked, "what do you mean by that?"

Owen turned around to look at the defenses of Cochly Mountain displayed on the big electronic screen and said, "Here, you won't find any absolute friends, only absolute interests. Your arrival here has ruined some people's plans, so you'll be seen as a thorn in their sides, of course, many people also welcome your arrival because they have their own objectives too, and you have what they want."

Philip's eyes were cold, and he asked suddenly, "Then which side do you belong to? Do you find me a thorn in the side or otherwise?"

The atmosphere suddenly tensed.

Owen's eyes flickered as he stared at Philip. He suddenly laughed, poured himself another drink, and said, "Neither."

Hearing that, Philip's frown relaxed a little, and he said, "Is there a third faction?"

Owen shook his head and said, "You've misunderstood. I don't take sides because I have my duty, which is to guard Cochly Mountain. As for the fight between the sides, it has nothing to do with me. I don't wish to get involved either."

Philip understood, but he thought about it and asked, "Commander Greene, what would you do if one of these forces threatened Cochly Mountain and your so-called guard duty one day?"

"Of course, I'll give them a stern warning!" Owen said coldly, seemingly very angry.

"In that case, wouldn't you become an aid to the other faction?" Philip said with a smile.

This remark startled Owen. He stared at Philip for a long time and finally said with a smile, "No one has ever said this to me. You're the first. I've thought about it before, but I haven't found an answer. As far as my duties are concerned, if I can't stand neutral, I'll inevitably become the enemy of one side and aid of the other. I wonder if you have any good insight."

Philip smiled and said, "I can't say that I have an insight, but I do have a small suggestion."

Owen signaled Philip to continue.

Philip said, "You don't have to bother if anyone threatens Cochly Mountain. You only intervene when one party takes action."

Owen's eyes narrowed as if he was considering Philip's words.

After a while, Owen said, "Your suggestion is quite good."

After saying this, Owen said, "Come with me. I'll take you to meet someone."

"Who?" Philip asked.

Owen said, "You'll know later. Don't worry, there's no harm."

Philip frowned and watched as Owen armed himself before he went down the stairs.

After thinking about it, Philip followed along the stairs and came to the bottom of the mountain where Philip saw the light blue glow before.

There was actually a very large research institution at the bottom here.

The main focus of the study was on human modification.