

Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South

Chapter 2841

Shaun was shocked.

He never thought things would escalate that far.

All he did was go to the company in the morning.

"Where were you this morning?" Shaun pulled Ken over, who was stunned.

Ken clenched his fists, with regret written all across his face. "Young Master Jewell told me to accompany Miss Robbins to the meeting in Jewell Corporation. He was afraid Chairman Jewell would make things difficult for her at the company."

"Are you silly? He could've informed me if he wanted to protect Eliza. I could send people over." Shaun was exasperated. "You're his right-hand man and the only one left that he can trust. You should be by his side at all times."

"I'm sorry..." Ken stammered, "I didn't think Chairman Jewell would do such a thing. No matter what... Young Master Jewell is his son."

"How can he be considered a father?" Shaun gritted his teeth. "Call the police and sue him for attempted murder. My last name isn't Hill if I don't lock him up to teach him a lesson."

"We can't," Ken said hastily. "In addition to Young Master Jewell's current condition, if Chairman Jewell also goes to jail, with Madam Jewell's personality... There's also her illness. She'll definitely faint from anger, and I don't think Cindy will be willing to donate blood when that time comes, or she'll want to reap great benefits if she does. However, that's not the most troublesome thing. What if something happens to Madam Jewell?"

After that reminder, Shaun remembered how Madam Jewell would faint out of nowhere.

In the past, he always thought he was unfortunate because his parents did not love him.

Thinking back now, Chester was even more unfortunate.

He could neither scold his parents nor ignore them.

If things went wrong, he had to carry the name of being a son who angered his mother to death.

That was probably the reason why Hunter could be so arrogant.

"Prepare for him to go overseas immediately. Assign someone to go over there as soon as possible to contact the hospital so that we can send Chester there tomorrow. Also, don't let the Jewell family members know Chester's location. That way, they won't bother him."

Shaun gave instructions.

In the evening, Catherine contacted Shaun. "Attorney Hill, where are you? I haven't heard from you all day. It's already mealtime, yet I still don't see you. Were you not going to call to inform me that you're not coming home? You're so arrogant."

Shaun facepalmed himself. "I've been so busy that I forgot about the time. I'm outside right now. That b*stard, Hunter, brought people to the ward and caused a commotion this afternoon."

Because of that, Chester's condition has deteriorated. The local doctors said his leg can't be saved anymore and has to be amputated, so I'm currently working on the procedures to go overseas and the paperwork for discharge. I'm trying to send Chester to Country R for treatment tomorrow and see if his leg can be kept."

"How did this happen?" Catherine was shocked. "Wasn't he recovering after the operation and would be sent overseas for treatment once he got better?"

"Chester wasn't supposed to move after undergoing the operation. However, Hunter tortured him by dragging him down to the floor. As a result, it agitated and worsened the wounds."

Shaun sighed. "No matter what, Chester was always there to help me when my company was in trouble, so I can't just ignore him now that he's in trouble. I might have to accompany him overseas, but I'll come back after his treatment plan has been finalized."

"I'll help you to pack your luggage in a bit."

Catherine showed her support for Shaun with her actions.

Although she did not like Chester, he was Shaun's best friend and a brother who lent a hand when Shaun was at his worst.

Moreover, Chester got hurt from rescuing Charity.

After hanging up, Catherine hesitated for a moment, but in the end, she gave Charity a call. "Do you know Hunter caused a commotion in the hospital today and worsened Chester's condition?"

Stunned, Charity said with a hoarse voice, "Is it bad?"

What replied Catherine was silence, so she asked again, "Are you going?"

"Mm? I will." Charity returned to her senses and said, "I'll go with you."

"Okay."

After Catherine finished her meal, she drove to pick Charity up.

It was nighttime when Charity stood at her neighborhood's entrance wearing a coffee-colored coat, she seemed like she was deep in thought, with her hand dancing in the night breeze.

Catherine drove the car up to Charity and honked. However, Charity was in a daze and did not seem to hear it.

"Let's go, Charity." Catherine had to stretch her head out and called out to her.

Charity snapped back to her senses, got in the car, and looked backward. There were clothes and toiletries in the backseat.

"I'm guessing Shaun will be staying at the hospital tonight, so I brought some stuff for him," Catherine explained.

Charity lowered her gaze. "Logically speaking, I'm supposed to be accompanying Chester. After all, he saved my life."

"You only got discharged recently, so you should recuperate at home. Besides, you're a woman. It's not too convenient for you to care for a man." Catherine consoled her. "Especially... Since you're not planning to get back together with Chester, it's better to keep a distance from him."

"Yeah."

Charity leaned against the seat and felt guilty as she looked out the window. "It's all my fault. If I didn't let Ken protect me today, he would've been at Chester's side. If I gave up on my voting rights, the situation wouldn't have turned out like this."

"Don't be guilty. The person who should feel guilty is Hunter. He's trash."

Catherine scolded him throughout the journey.

Chester was unconscious and on an IV drip when they arrived at the hospital. Shaun said, "He woke up for a short while in the evening, but because his leg was in extreme pain, I told the doctor to give him painkillers. After that, he fell asleep."

Catherine asked, "Have you contacted the doctors in Country R?"

Shaun nodded. "We'll send Chester over first thing tomorrow morning. I've already prepared a private airplane. I might have to be there for about half a month."

"Be careful, and don't fool around there."

Catherine took the opportunity to yank him out of the ward.

On the other hand, charity did not do a thing, she simply stood by the bed and stared at Chester quietly.

For some reason, she still remembered their first encounter.

His good looks were unmatched.

He was so handsome and dazzling.

However, his face was now similar to a dead person's, and he was covered in wounds.

Who would have thought he was the haughty, evil, arrogant Chester she knew?

After standing for about 10 minutes, charity said in a low voice, " Chester, get proper treatment overseas. I'll keep an eye on your company for you and ensure there won't be a place for your dad in Jewell Corporation."

What answered her was silence.

The next morning, charity stood on the field of a garden.

She looked up at the blue sky.

There was a trace of an airplane flying through and leaving.

In the meantime, the video of Hunter barging into the hospital and beating up his son because he lost the position of chairman was uploaded to the Internet.

The netizens were shocked.

[Is this true? Is this person really Chester's father? Look at the state his son was in, yet he still laid a hand on a patient who was in a severe condition. Even animals aren't as cruel as him.]

[My friend works at that hospital. I heard Chester is gravely injured. The doctor didn't manage to save his leg even after a whole evening of trying, so Chester has been sent overseas for treatment.]

[Wait. Is his son nothing compared to the position of the chairman?]

[Wealthy people prioritize power and status more. Perhaps he did not do it on purpose and was just too angry. I heard Chester helped his father's competitor. In my opinion, this son deserved it.] 1
