Janet's eyes widened.

I had lots of guesswork as to why Brandon had cold with her suddenly, but never He considered that he might have lost his memory. It was like a scene out of a movie!

“Did the doctor say something? Can you still get the memory?” Janet asked anxiously, wringing hands.

His hair stood on end when all the pieces seemingly unrelated puzzle they began to gather.

First, he had an accident automobile, plummeted and then Brandon suddenly became ill and fainted during search and rescue operations, when woke up, he had mysteriously lost his memory of the last two years.

And when Janet was trapped on the island, someone had sent assassins to kill her.

When he came back alive, he had no time to think in everything that had happened due to the change sudden in Brandon.

Only now did he realize that something was terribly wrong who sent to those assassins after her?

Although everything seemed not relate to the beginning, when Janet thought about everything that happened carefully, a shiver ran down his spine spine, but he didn't say what he thought of immediately, but calmed down first, and waited for Let Brandon explain.

“The doctor was not very helpful. He said there was many possible reasons behind my loss of memory. Charis was the one who told me I was in the boat with the search and rescue team when I fainted. The next time I woke up, no he could remember something from the past two years. In Actually, all I know about the last two years Charis taught it to me.” Brandon narrowed his eyes. and pursed her lips tightly.

“It worried me that my competitors used my loss of memory for your benefit, so I didn’t tell no one, including you. I don’t know anything about our past.”

After explaining everything to him, Brandon fell into a thoughtful silence.

Janet wanted to tell everything to Brandon, especially all the bad things that Charis had made them. But he couldn't.

Brandon had lost his memory of the last two years.

Which meant he didn't have feelings for her now, let alone confidence.

Also, she had no evidence to prove what Charis had done, and Brandon he trusted Charis more at this point.

After all, she was working second to command of the Larson Group.

Janet swallowed everything she wanted to say, now that Brandon's mind was practically a blank slate, it was likely that Charis had bad-mouthed Janet in front of him.

Thinking of this, Janet shifted uncomfortably.in the bed.

The mere thought that her husband she trusted the woman who had hurt her more than once it upset her a lot.

Worse yet, both Years missing from Brandon's memory were the two years in which they had reached understand and love each other.

No wonder he alienated her in these days. It all finally made sense.

With tears in the eyes and a lump in the throat, Janet he asked in a low voice: "Do you want to know about our relationship in the last two years? If you have time, I can tell you everything..."

Usually, Brandon would not have wasted his precious time listening to the stories of this woman.

He was a very busy man and spent his whole life to work, not boring stuff like this.

But after hearing what Janet said, without hesitation, unconsciously replied, “Go ahead.” Janet pursed her lips sadly.

Realized that Brandon really wasn't that interested in what had happened between them in the last two years and that he was only forced to please her.

However, Janet wanted to tell her, so she He cleared his throat and began to speak. In brief words, described what happened between them during the last two years.

She told him how he pretended to be a poor young man when they got married.

It was only later when his true identity revealed that the two obtained trust and love of the other.

“That’s why I couldn’t accept the fact that suddenly you were so indifferent to me” , added to final.

Brandon was silent and listened attentively and patiently.

There was tenderness in her eyes when
