Chapter 698 Back to the Larson Group
Within a month, two of the founders of the Larson group were gone. Charis left because of therapy, while Garrett quit to come back and run his family's business.

These two important events made everyone The Larson Group will panic. After dealing with Garrett's resignation, Brandon called to Charis's psychologist "How is she?" "Fit for work," reported the psychologist.

Brandon had known him for many years and I trusted him a lot. After thinking for a while, Brandon said, "I'll visit her this afternoon."

*********

When Brandon arrived, Charis was in the middle of a painting contest with other patients. Its activity was sponsored by the hospital and the prize was a basket of chocolates. In the end, Charis's painting won the first reward.

Brandon watched silently as kindly distributed the chocolate to the others patients.

Although I was still wearing a mask, she was not as warm as before and her temperament in general seemed to have improved. He didn't seem as irritable as before.

"Looks like you've recovered well" commented Brandon lightly as soon as he approached Charis looked at him in surprise.

"Brandon, why didn't you tell me you were coming?"

"I happened to be in the area."

When Brandon's eyes fell on the small patch of exposed skin on his neck, he smiled and said, "You look as elegant and confident as before. Charis waved her hand dismissively.

"The burns on my neck are not as bad as the rest of my body. Still I made mountains of mounds of sand before. the doctor helped me to overcome my insecurities, making me less sensitive to the scars on my body. I was wrong before. I covered myself from head to toe. Which actually sealed my heart."

Now to her she didn't mind showing something of herself.

"You always had the best stress tolerance among the three" Brenda sighed.

I wasn't exaggerating Charis' mental capacity was incredible. Charis shook her head modestly.

"I feel flattered. I went through something pretty stressful, but luckily I'm on the way Recovery. After all, my biggest advantage It was never my face, but my brain." Brandon was relieved. He turned to look outside. Thoughtfully, it was a sunny day today. It was almost as if the universe was lining up for them.

After a while, Brandon He looked at Charis and said frankly.

"It's good that you're improving now. Garrett decided to take over his family business. The Larson Group needs you. Are you ready for return?".

The Larson Group really needed her.
After a moment of silence, Charis sketched a smile.

"Of course."

Three days later, Charis returned to the office and kept working.

His sudden return took all by surprise.
After all, everyone in the Larson Group had seen how crazy she had returned Charis. His presence made them uncomfortable.

And yes trying to get revenge on them? However, his worries never came true.

The Charis's current attitude towards everyone was so kind like the old Charis.

In addition, she was an efficient worker and, Of course, she was still that capable woman.

Brandon also noticed that she was on a roll in the work, so he started handing him the important projects. When Janet heard that Charis had left recovered and had returned to work, he felt shocked and helpless. It seemed that Charis would still be a tough opponent.

But Janet didn't want to focus her energy on get revenge. She was happy with her career and her life with Brandon.

It would be a waste to spend all your time thinking about his enemy.

Since his work schedule was always different from Brandon's, every time Janet came to Seacisco, prepared lunch and took it to the Brandon's office. She and Brandon had proposed to spend time together during lunch hour lunch.

Recently, the two had been getting closer and closer, like a young couple who just fell in love.

One day, Janet was bringing lunch to the Brandon's office as usual when met Charis.

Ignoring her, Janet passed next to her towards the elevator.

Suddenly Charis called out to her from behind, 'Please, wait a minute.

Janet frowned and turned to look at her "Yes?"

"There is something I wanted to talk to you, can you accompany me to my office?"
