

No. 1 Supreme Warrior Chapter 3031 - 3035

Chapter 3031

If they had not known that the stage had a barrier around it and that they could not get on, they would have rushed up there to protect Lesley!

The flames raged for a few moments before slowly receding. The frostfire wolf slowly got closer to the part that was burning the most intensely. After the flames receded, a charred, almost blackened figure was revealed, and everyone could barely recognize him.

The moment the sight registered, they forgot to even breathe.

Lesley had been burned to a crisp. Looking at him, there was no doubt that he had died. Cries of shock and agony could be heard in the spectator stands. Everyone turned to look at the source of the noise, and they saw that the place where the disciples of the Deer Pavilion were gathered rang out with cries. They knew very well that Lesley was dead.

It was far too unexpected. Everything had happened so quickly, so much so that they were caught off guard. They did not expect the beast's power to be so immense that it burned Lesley alive. Even Lesley's corpse was mutilated!

"Goodness gracious, that beast was that strong! Lesley was already quite strong, but he's blown up from just one attack. He died in such a bad state-completely charred. I can't even look at him!"

"Lesley probably never expected that he'd lose this badly. Honestly, I never thought that this beast would be so strong. It's unbelievable..."

Jackie raised an eyebrow, not showing that much emotion on his face. He had expected this much, so he was not surprised at all.

The people around him, on the other hand, never expected this, which was why they were filled with surprise.

After it made sure that Lesley was dead, the frostfire wolf walked around in circles as its body started to glow radiantly. After that, it turned into pure energy and was absorbed by the surrounding array.

The moment the frostfire wolf turned into energy, the barrier around the stage disappeared as well. The disciples of the Deer Pavilion, who had been waiting around the stage, frantically rushed up. When they saw Lesley's blackened body, they looked like they had lost their fathers.

It was far too depressing. The results were something they could not accept. The disciple that mocked Jackie in the betting area immediately fell to their knees as tears flowed from his eyes.

“Lesley! How did this happen?!”

The other disciples from the Deer Pavilion all knelt down as well, crying out in agony.

“Rest easy, Lesley... No one expected the beast to be so strong. You weren't too weak, you were just unlucky. If you chose any other beast, the results wouldn't have been like that...”

The disciple who had mocked Jackie cried incredibly intensely as if he had lost his whole family overnight. The other disciples around him hurriedly helped him up, offering sincere consolation.

“Arne, don't be too sad. We should bring Lesley's corpse away for now...”

They did not lower their voices as they spoke.

Jackie was relatively close enough to the stage, so he had heard their conversation. Thus, he heard the name of this particular disciple, Arne.

Chapter 3032

He had also heard that Arne's family name was King. It looked like he and Lesley were close and should have been blood relatives. No wonder the two of them acted the same way.

The match's result was determined in the blink of an eye as the skull-masked caretakers started to walk toward the stage, coming up to clean the aftermath. If no one carried the corpse away, the caretakers would have gotten rid of the body like trash.

The disciples of the Deer Pavilion would naturally not let Lesley's body be treated that way. All of them held their sadness back as they picked up Lesley's corpse and left the stage.

It was only then did everyone calm down from the shock. The battle had exceeded their expectations. They had thought that they had already seen the results, but the beast actually fought back and killed Lesley.

That beast's strength had exceeded any of their imaginations. It was stronger than any regular beast!

“Lesley was too unlucky. It looks like that beast was probably the strongest among the five!”

When everyone finished lamenting, the truth started to hit them. At that moment, some could not resist cursing.

“I was so stupid to bet on him. I didn’t have that many spirit crystals left and thought that I’d win this time. I can’t believe I lost. Fifty thousand spirit crystals went down the drain!”

“Tell me about it... I thought that Lesley would win here! He bragged so much before, saying that he’d win. He even took offense to anyone who betted on the beast. No one expected him to lose so badly!”

“If he didn’t have the skills to back it up, he shouldn’t have been so arrogant! He gloated about himself so much that everyone believed him. Now, he’s not only defeated-he’s dead! It’s one thing to embarrass himself, but he even dragged everyone else down with him!”

“I wasn’t planning on betting on him. If he hadn’t been standing there staring at everyone, I would’ve placed my bet on the beast! It’s all his fault. If not for him, I would’ve made a fortune!”

“I’m so furious! Aren’t the disciples of the Deer Pavilion supposed to be all-powerful or something? Are they still parading themselves now? Bragging is all they know!”

The moment their benefits were concerned, everyone suddenly lost their earlier fear. Some of them had basically bet what little they had left on Lesley and ended up completely broke!

In truth, quite a few of them wanted to take a risk and bet on the beast, but Lesley had been looking by the side. Whoever betted on the beast would end up being mocked and stopped if their background was not strong enough. They were forced to remain silent as they betted on Lesley, but no one expected that the result would be like this!

Quite a few people frowned in anger.

Lesley had been way too full of himself before, which already displeased everyone. On top of that, Lesley had caused them to make a loss, so everyone suddenly exploded in anger. Since Lesley was dead, there was no reason for them to curse at him. All of the blame ended up being pushed to the Deer Pavilion instead as a few people started to shout at the disciples of the Deer Pavilion.

“You disciples of the Deer Pavilion are only good at bragging! We lost all our spirit crystals thanks to him! You have to pay us back!”

“That’s right, they should be paying us back! They bragged so much before and had everyone bet on Lesley. He’s not even all that strong! He got killed by the beast in one attack, and he calls himself a chosen disciple from the Deer Pavilion. He said that he’d win. What a joke!”

Quite a few of them hounded the Deer Pavilion to pay them back. Quite a few warriors had lost their whole fortunes due to this bet. Due to their trust that Lesley would win, they had lost all of their spirit crystals!

Chapter 3033

Facing the crowd, the disciples of the Deer Pavilion trembled in anger. They felt like everyone was causing them trouble for no reason.

At that moment, Arne was incredibly emotional. After all, Lesley had died such a horrible death. Thus, he was the first one to verbally engage with the crowd.

“You ignorant fools! You were the ones who were betting so frantically. Did we force you to go place your bets? You were the one who chose who to bet on, so what does it have to do with us?!”

The moment he said that, it was like he had thrown ice into a pot of boiling oil, and it suddenly exploded. Some of the warriors were so emotional that they started to quarrel with the Deer Pavilion.

“How dare you say that! The choice was ours, you say?! Were you not standing there and staring, mocking anyone who betted on the beasts?!”

After Arne heard these accusations, he laughed coldly as he said in disdain, “We were just speaking the truth. We never forced you to choose Lesley! In the end, you were the ones who took out your spirit crystals and betted on Lesley. Who is there to blame? You should’ve gone against us if you could!”

The moment he said that, some almost spat out blood in their frustration. This guy was crossing the line. He was actually accusing them of not being firm enough and for not fighting back!

Arne was basically saying that the Deer Pavilion never physically forced them to pick Lesley, and that they were the ones who placed the bet in the end.

He basically said that the Deer Pavilion was not to blame for anything. Even Jackie’s lips twitched in exasperation after hearing that while Rudy started to tremble in anger. His whole body started to stiffen.

Rudy turned to look at Jackie. “These guys are too much, especially that Arne guy! How could he say all of that? He’s pinning the blame on others. Even if they didn’t directly force others to vote for Lesley physically, they were standing at the side and threatening those who were of lesser backgrounds! If it wasn’t for that, quite a few of them would’ve chosen differently! Didn’t they threaten us back then? They’re despicable!”

Rudy really felt like those people were completely shameless and despicable. Even at this state, they could still say things like that.

They were relying on the laws of the Whirling World. No matter how angry the warriors in the stands were, they could not do anything!

The man with a mustache who was sitting next to Jackie was completely red in anger. He gritted his teeth and looked like he was about to rush forward. Yet, he could not do anything.

He shouted out, "These despicable fools! They should go to hell. If we could attack them, no one would be able to stop themselves! The Deer Pavilion? The top seventh-grade clan? We don't care anymore! They're just way too shameless!"

Some of them could not stop themselves from using Jackie as an example.

A gray-robed man, who was sitting in front of Jackie, suddenly stood up and pointed at Jackie. "This guy was smart to not pick you guys, yet all of you mocked and threatened him because he didn't bet on Lesley! Heck, everyone heard you people! There was that guy in the green clothes as well. These two are the perfect examples, so stop trying to talk your way out of this!"

Chapter 3034

Arne's words had been difficult to swallow, and they ignited everyone's anger.

Everyone started to feel righteous indignation.

After the person in front of Jackie aired his grievance, his anger never left him as he looked at Arne with gritted teeth. It was as if he wanted to see how the Deer Pavilion would try to talk their way out of it.

It would have been one thing if he had not pointed Jackie out, but the moment Jackie became part of the topic, Arne's anger boiled over.

Everything Jackie was etched into Arne's mind vividly. He could not forget how Jackie had looked at them in disdain, completely looking down on them.

Jackie had even won the bet in the end, which caused Arne to hate Jackie even more. He narrowed his eyes, turning to look at Jackie. Anyone could see the venom in his eyes. He looked like a snake, ready to strike at any moment.

Arne snorted. "This guy was just pretending before this, I can't believe all of you couldn't tell. Even if he won, it's all because he got lucky. He just insisted on trying to go against the grain to make himself stand out. It's not convincing at all to use him as an example. His conflict with us before this was just to make himself known. He's a mere wandering warrior, so how could he be able to tell who's stronger and who'd win?!"

Arne completely diminished Jackie's victory and even added snide remarks. He felt like Jackie had just been lucky, that he was just an insignificant guy who wanted to stand out.

Arne looked visibly disgusted when he spoke, too. It was as if Jackie was just a piece of trash thrown to the roadside.

Rudy was furious after he heard all of that. Arne was trying to twist the truth and went after Jackie altogether. He would not have been able to hold back no matter how good his temper was.

He immediately stood up from his seat and pointed right at Arne's face.

"You shameless, despicable person. How are you saying that we just relied on luck? Are you blind or something? Maybe there's something wrong with your head? You seem to have forgotten everything that happened. Jackie had already said that he had betted on the beast for a very simple reason, Lesley would lose! There were so many people around when he said that, and all of them had heard everything! You were standing nearby, so there's no way you didn't hear it!"

Rudy felt like he was about to get sick from the anger alone. He had met a lot of people who disgusted him before, but none of them could topple Arne.

Arne was not just disgusting but also revolting, he was a man who knew nothing but to slander others!

After Rudy said that, Arne's expression did not change.

"My ears are working just fine, thank you, and so are my memories. It's precisely because I remember what he said that I'm sure that he did all of that just to stand out! If he was so sharp, then have him tell us why he was so sure that Lesley would lose! What was the reason? Don't tell me it's intuition, because even a child wouldn't believe that!"

Arne pointed right at Jackie, which caused all of the warriors there to go quiet immediately.

A few of them looked at Jackie curiously, wanting to know how Jackie was so sure that Lesley would lose before the battle started.

Chapter 3035

Could he have the amount of insight and knowledge?

Was it just like Arne said-that Jackie had merely been lucky in his gamble and wanted to stand out by voting in favor of the frostfire wolf instead?

Arne narrowed his eyes as he looked at Jackie mockingly as though daring him to do something.

Rudy was so angry that he started to pant. His eyes turned red and his hands trembled, looking like he was prepared to rush over at any moment. He was not able to outspoke Arne.

Arne's ability to twist the truth was far above Rudy, and Rudy felt incredibly suffocated at all of that. The truth was clearly not that way, but Arne seemed to have turned Jackie into a show-off in just a few words.

Jackie raised an eyebrow and sighed helplessly as he looked up at the person in front of him. If that person had not pointed him out, he would not have been dragged into this. He was not someone who enjoyed unnecessary trouble like that. Furthermore, there would not be any results from these arguments at all.

They could not fight each other, after all, and all they could do was run their mouths. He never expected that someone would drag him into this, causing him to feel exasperated and a little angered at the same time.

He sighed as he looked up at Rudy, who was about to die from anger. He knew that there would probably be even more disgusting words thrown in if he did not say anything.

Jackie was not scared of trouble. He reached out and grabbed Rudy's arm, pulling Rudy back.

Rudy would not be able to beat Arne in a war of words, and he would only stand to lose if he continued. He was completely red in anger.

It was as if a fuse had been lit as he told Jackie, "This dog is crossing the line! If not for the various restrictions, I would've run up there and slapped that nasty face of his!"

Jackie sighed, he could understand Rudy's feelings and knew that he was standing up to shout at Arne because he was at his limit.

He said silently, "You can't beat him like this, so there's nothing worth arguing for."

After saying that, Jackie stood up himself and faced Arne.

Arne was noticeably looking for a fight when he saw Jackie standing up, as if he was prepared to go through three hundred bouts against Jackie with words.

Jackie lightly snorted and said in disdain, "You truly are Lesley's brother, Arne, both as stupid as each other! You were clearly the one trying to threaten everyone into doing what you want, but you pinned the blame on others. Lesley was the one who bragged so much, which was why everyone thought that he would win! He said that he was a chosen disciple of the Deer Pavilion, but to me, that title was just an accessory...”

“Everyone knows that Lesley’s relationship with the head elder of the Deer Pavilion is really close. I had a very simple reason for thinking that Lesley would lose. That’s because I knew that Lesley didn’t have the skills of a chosen disciple at all. At most, he would’ve just been an inner disciple. He was merely given the title because of his relationship with the head elder!”

Jackie said those words righteously, leaving no room for doubt.

When everyone heard his explanation, their expression brightened as though something had clicked. His words made sense!
