Chapter 101

101-The Moon Goddess Is A Master Of All Games

“Oh, thank you,” Maynard didn’t seem too surprised that I was now aware of his lie. He told me he only dropped her home but now I found out they even had lunch together.

“Have a good day,” Maynard smiled back at her but she had only a faded grin on her face. Her eyes told me she was upset over something but I couldn’t be sure what it was.

“You must be Enya!” she focused on me next, “I am Willow,” she didn’t have to introduce herself twice because I caught her name last day.

“Hello, hope you are liking our school,” I had to say something. So shaking myself out of my thoughts and smiling at her was the only thing I could do.

“We are getting late for class,” Maynard cut us in a mid-conversation even when he saw Willow wanted to stick around and talk to us.

“Have a good day,” she then bobbed her head and walked away after Maynard showed no interest in her.

“Isn’t there something you need to tell me?” as we walked together to our classroom, I questioned Maynard?

“About what?” he shrugged his shoulders carelessly, making me not feel too happy about it.

“You smoke?” I asked him once we sat down together. It was the first thing I wanted to talk about.

“Yeah so?” that change of mood was noticeable. He was acting cold all of a sudden.

“And you took her out for lunch?” I scoffed when he didn’t explain himself first. It was like that sometimes. We would be all happy and lovey-dovey until something happens. It appeared as if lack of communication was the issue in our relationship and it emerged from his side only.

I was open to any conversation but he would turn very dismissive in a matter of seconds.

“I didn’t take her out for lunch. Geez! First, ask me what happened and then accuse me,” he almost raised his voice but calmed down when he noticed the fellows watching our faces. I didn’t like the tone he used with me.

“That’s what I did, didn’t I?” I grunted, “you know what? We will talk when you learn to talk like a fucking educated person,” I grunted and freed my hand from his hand by force.

“Enya!” he sighed, trying to reach for my hand again. I noticed he would only push to the corner when I let him. Whenever I went strong on him, he would lower his volume.

“Maynard! I said we would talk when you learn to behave,” I was not at all happy that he used that tone with me in front of Jessica. He knew now she will be on my back and bullying me over this. Why would he give others a chance to make fun of me?

He didn’t have the rest of the classes with me so I was pretty much alone and down the entire day. The moment the school bell rang, I rushed back to my room to avoid any unnecessary taunts from any fellows.

“Enya! I have been looking everywhere for you,” Maynard stormed inside the room, looking all worried and guilty

“Come on, what happened?” he sat down on his knee in front of me and held my hand by force, “I didn’t take her out on lunch. I was dropping her off when I got a call from my parents. That’s when I came to know about their struggles and it upset me. I had to stop for a quick smoke. I was going crazy and worried over the matter. She suggested I should eat something to gather up strength. I was really feeling low until I grabbed something to eat. That’s when I dropped my lighter in the café. That’s all that happened. She is not that important that I will take her out for lunch or anything. She is honestly clingy and I realized it when she came over to speak to us by the lockers. I wish I hadn’t offered her a ride back home.” Shaking his head at himself, he lowered his face and yelped sadly.

“Then why did you?” I didn’t add any more questions. I wanted to know why exactly did he offer to drop her home?

Although I did catch the lie in his statement, I remained silent. Didn’t he say his beta met up with him? I didn’t say much because I reckoned he was hiding something still.

“What?” he almost looked dumbfounded. The pale look on his face was a sign he didn’t expect me to ask him anything in return.

“Why did you offer to drop her?” it wasn’t like they knew each other. It was their first day in school and he randomly decided to offer her?

“Enya! I don’t think we should talk about that,” his tone has volumed down a lot. He even stole his eyes from me.

101-The Moon Goddess Is A Master Of All Games

“Why? I want to know. I believe I have that much right, don’t I?” the more he was resisting talking about it, the more curious I was getting.

“I don’t want you to get worried over anything. I am already dealing with so much and raising this issue will only affect our relationship,” his words were making my heartbeat slower.

What was he talking about?

“I really want to know,” I whispered in fright. I was aware whatever it was, it might upset me but I still wanted to hear it.

“Look! I have received a call from my parents and I have to go. Can we talk about it when I return?” he almost requested, it is just I don’t want to leave thinking you are upset and all sad. It will only increase my worries,” he held my hands and my heart skipped a beat.

The emotions he was feeling were not what I had expected.

It was guilt,

Fear,

And,

Deceit.

“Tell me what is it?” I couldn’t hold anymore. If he is leaving, then I would want to know, or else I will die worrying about it.

Taking a deep breath, he first bit his lips and then uttered, "You see how the Moon Goddess has given you too many mates?" the way he started explaining, my blood started running cold.

"It seems like you are not the only one she blessed with too many mates," he mumbled, carrying a guilty face.

"What do you mean by that? Who else did she give another mate to?" at this point, I was only fooling myself with that question.

I should have known what he was talking about, but I refused to.

"Enya! The Moon Goddess had given me another mate," he whispered,

"I felt the mate bond with Willow," there! my biggest nightmare had come to life.

Chapter 102

102-He Will Reject Her. Will He?

"I felt the mate bond with her back when the teacher introduced her. But I wasn't sure why and how it was possible. I stayed calm and after school, I decided to take her out for a ride to discuss it with her. I wanted to know if she felt it too and sadly, she did it too. I didn't have any other plans with her, I only aimed to let her know I have already accepted you and that's when my beta called. That's when the stress hit the roof," he had to take a pause because I didn't take the news too well.

I slid my hands out of his hands and filled my face in my hands. I broke down the moment I heard what the Moon Goddess did to me. Not only did she give me so many mates to confuse me, but just when I selected one, she sent him another mate.

How unfair!

"It always happens to me," I was crying and sabbing in my palms. My heart had split open into two and all I could feel was it to be bleeding.

"Hey! but it doesn't matter. I am not going to accept her. I have already accepted you, you are the only one I want. If you don't believe me, go talk to her. She knows because I told her. I didn't want her to have any hopes so everything is made clear to her. There is nothing she can do to make me accept her even if she comes up with the stories of getting weak after getting rejected. It doesn't matter. I accepted you," he wrapped his arms around my body and all I could feel was guilt from his skin.

"It is so unfair. Just when I fell in love with someone, she stole him from me," I was not listening to him and pouring my heart out only. She can use the excuse of becoming weak after rejection what then?

"Enya! Nobody can steal me from you, what are you talking about?" he broke the hug and forced freed my face from my hands to cup it in his hands and make me look into his beautiful eyes.

"Look at me! Enya! I am only yours and you are only mine, okay?" he had a very serious look on his face, as soon as I return from my pack, I will reject her. I would have rejected her right now but I don't want an angry rejected mate to be left behind when my sweet and innocent mate is left alone. I need strength for my trip but the instant I am back, I am rejecting her sorry ass. You can tell her that on her face too if she says anything to you." he let out a little laugh to ease me up but now I was worried.

"I cannot share you with anyone," I spelled into his hands and kissed his palm. I can't even explain how much I have grown to be attached to him. In a matter of a few weeks, he had made me fall in love with him more and more.

Now him having another mate had worried me.

"I promise, you will not," he made sure to look in my eyes and tell me.

"Why didn't you tell me about her sooner?" I then asked in desperation.

"Enya! It is something we don't openly talk about especially when we don't want to accept the mate. I knew the mate bond exists between them and that was worrisome.

"Now! I have to go but please don't be stressed out and worry about me, okay?" he sounded too low after I cried in front of him.

"And guess who I will be calling from there? not her, but my sweet Enya!" after kissing my forehead, he decided to pull away because he kept receiving calls from his mother. She was the reason he had changed his plan again. In the morning, he told me he wouldn't leave but now that she was blowing up his phone and constantly asking him if he was on the way, he had no choice but to pay them a visit.

"Mom!" he attended the call but the moment he saw the look on my face, he switched it to the speaker.

"You said you were coming. And till now, I have not heard from you. Maynard! I am telling you, if you didn't come in the next few hours, I will make su," she paused when she felt like she was being heard.

"Enya says hello," Maynard groaned at her.

"Oh! Tell her hey. I am waiting for you," she changed her tone, "I am sorry because I need your mate for some time," I didn't know how to feel about her at this moment. Was she back to being angry with me?

"Hey, Mrs. Gray!" I said slyly. I was still not feeling too well so I had to fake a happy tone with her.

"Sure, he is your son. You can have him whenever you want," I added because Maynard look too embarrassed of his mother trying to control him again.

He instantly put it off the speaker and got on his feet to walk away.

"You heard her. I am coming," he was muttering as if telling her I wasn't the one holding him back and soon the call ended.

Honestly speaking, I didn't want him to stay here either. Call me selfish and insecure, but I wanted him gone so that he doesn't get to see Willow a lot. Once he returns and rejects her, all will be fine.

"Enya! I am leaving now but please don't worry about anything," he requested after ending the call.

"Are you going to tell them about her?" I had a million questions and I wanted answers to them.

"No! there is no need for that though. I don't want any more stress on them." He added before grabbing his bag and getting ready to leave.

He marched closed and kissed my forehead. I was still not sure how to process all this. I guess I will have to wait for his return and see what steps he takes and then I will act according to that.

He said goodbye to me and left in the next few minutes. I was still in my bed and worrying sick about the whole second chance mate thing. Why? Why did the Moon Goddess do that?

Firstly, she confused me by sending too many mates to me, and now Maynard?

103-The Monster In The Mountains

*Hey!"

I was engrossed in my thoughts when Lazlo entered the room and greeted me, "Maynard left already?" he asked and I nodded gently

"Have you heard from Thiago?" it was then I raised my face and watched him in bafflement, "Nobody has heard from him. He missed school today as well." The worried look on Lazlo's face increased my worries too.

"What? he hadn't returned after last night?" I asked in a whisper. My voice was still raspy from crying so much.

"It appears so," Lazlo put his stuff down and changed into a long overcoat instead of the jacket he was wearing. I was assuming he was getting ready to search for him.

"What happened to you? Have you been crying because he left?" the look on his face was something I couldn't read. Either he was too shocked I was crying because Maynard left or too impressed at my love for Maynard.

"I was getting used to him. Now him being gone will be so difficult for me," I whispered as I started tearing up again. How the hell am I going to demand him to reject her or not talk to her when I have been spending time with my mates?

"Hey, you are not alone. I am here for you. I know I haven't been a good mate but I can be a good friend," he shrugged his shoulders with a cute smile on his lips.

“Lazlo! that means a lot,” I passed him a comforting smile because a friend was what I needed at this moment.

“I am worried for Thiago. He doesn’t have anyone who can look after him. Look how he had been missing for hours, but nobody is searching for him.” I uttered in guilt, I shouldn’t be betraying myself by worrying for him but what do I do when my heart can’t stop considering my mate’s worries as my own?

“I going into the woods to search for him,” he told me as he showed me the little bag he was carrying with him with food and water bottles in it.

“Do you think it will take you some time to find him?” I questioned and he nodded sadly.

“Do you want to come?” he asked in hopes that I will join him. I bet he thought if he left me behind, I will keep worrying about everything.

“I do,” I said as I took a decision for myself without thinking about anything else at that moment.

We were walking out of the school when I got interrupted by someone I didn’t expect to see so soon. It was Willow.

Maynard had already left by now so that meant she wanted to speak to me.

“Give me a moment,” I excused Lazlo, who nodded and stepped aside. He was only occupied by the thought of finding Thiago at any cost. This is what I too wanted to focus on until Willow appeared.

“I know what you want to talk to me about,” I started off before she could even talk to me.

“So, he has made up his mind to reject me. Do you think it is fair with me?” she asked with her eyes filled with tears, “Just like you, I am also not very strong. I don’t even know if I will ever be granted another mate. I am not as lucky as you. You left the Alpha King and found another Alpha, I won’t get another mate for how long I have no idea,” I heard her utter with a lot of emotions. I didn’t get why she was telling me all this.

Although I didn’t want him to accept her, it was his decision first. I was aware that I too have many mates but I wasn’t sexually active with anyone else except for Maynard. I wasn’t even romantically involved with them.

“I hear you. But it is his decision only.” I uttered while not stealing eyes from her. I wasn’t lying and I was not going to persuade Maynard to accept her. I wasn’t comfortable with it so I won’t do it.

“Listen, I have no bad blood with you but I got to go,” I said while watching Lazlo gesturing for me to hurry up. We didn’t want the night to come upon us.

“But wait! Before I go, I want to tell you Maynard told me everything about the lunch you had with him,” i knew I was being sneaky but I had to do it for the sake of my mind’s peace.

“Yeah! He was smoking heavily after his parents called him so I suggested we should eat something for him to gain some energy. Little did I know that same lunch will turn into a conversation where he tells me he cannot be with me,” the look she gave me confused me. She looked angry and sad, was she angry at me or at Maynard?

“Yeah! I know all about it. Anyway, got to go. Bye!” I didn’t want to hold up Lazlo. Thiago had been gone for the whole night and day, we needed to find him.

I briskly approached Lazlo and without stopping, continued walking past him.

“What was that all about?” he asked when matching pace with mine.

“Nothing. Ignore it,” I replied, hitting the road with him, “So, the woods it is?” I questioned since I had no clue where to begin from.

“Or maybe the mountains,” Lazlo sneakily whispered but was able to get my attention. I stopped suddenly and swirled over to watch him in the eye.

“How are you bluntly pointing out the Mountains?” I placed my hands on my waist and raised a brow, waiting for him to answer me. There was something he hadn’t told me still, I guessed.

“Because I am an Alpha of a pack and I have some responsibilities,” he almost came off as defensive, “I watch the news,” he added once again when his answer couldn’t satisfy me.

“Lazlo! please be upfront,” I sighed when hearing him doing all sorts of mental gymnastics with me.

“Enya! You might feel like I am exaggerating but—” he pulled his phone out and that’s when I knew shit was about to hit the fan.

Whenever Lazlo pulls his phone out, he is coming with some receipts.

“See this?” he turned the screen to me.

“A vicious monster spotted in the mountains. Rogues and surroundings packs are terrified. Eyes on their alphas to slay the beast,” I read the heading and almost stayed silent for a moment before I gathered myself together, “Lazlo! what is this? This can’t be about Thiago. He is no monster; he is just – we saw his wolf. It was indeed a bit bigger one but — * I was struggling to fool myself when the timing was too coincidental.

“That was just the beginning of his transition. We are headed to the mountains,” he once again said to make me hear him clearly.

“What? don’t tell me the alpha wants to slay the beast?” it was then my mind picked up the unnoticed pieces from the headline.

164-The Cursed One Among Us!

“Lazlo! tell me that’s not what you are planning for. Because if that’s the case, I am not going with you. I will go alone and I make sure I save him from whatever you save planned for him,” I squared up pretty confidently. He first shoved his phone in his pocket and then scoffed at me.

“Are you kidding me? Do you really think I will sacrifice a friend to come off as a hero? He already made me a hero twice, I don’t want to gain any more medals from his name,” he reminded me of the academy and the wood’s incident. Where basically everybody thought Maynard and Lazlo saved the day

“He is not a monster,” I added once we calmed down a bit.

“I know he is not. But we know him, others don’t.” Lazlo looked comfortable enough to have that conversation with me now

“But why is his wolf being called a monster? Have you seen him in that form the others are talking about?” I wasn’t sure what others saw. But it couldn’t be a powerful wolf only. Or else they would have never made such a huge deal out of it.

“I don’t know. I haven’t seen that form of his but I guess he had been worse from the last time. It is just that we all had been so occupied by the nonsense in our lives that we forgot about him,” I noticed Lazlo was the one too worried for Thiago. I remember when I told Maynard about Thiago last night, he almost didn’t even care.

That change occurred after I accepted him.

“Then we are going to save him?” | inquired and gestured for him to keep walking.

“Yeah! If we can. I am not sure how long he plans to stay in his beastly self but if he hadn’t returned, it means-,” he didn’t finish talking because I did it for him.

"Then it means he is still transitioned in that form," I said, walking ahead of him. I am sure he didn't know what I was capable of, but I believe it was time I practice my magic after a little break.

We reached the mountains in an hour. I noticed Lazlo offering me rest and food every few minutes, thinking an Omega like me would be tired.

So! Where do we begin from?" he took a deep breath and passed a detailed glance around, can you sniff him out?" the way he said it, I was almost offended, "Come on, he is your mate. Even though you forgot you have two other mates, but that still gives you an upper hand on finding him," he didn't have to add that little sarcasm but since he did, I rolled my eyes and faced him.

"Yeah! The one who used me and the other who is dating the bitch who hates me," I smiled, giving him enough reason to turn his face to the side awkwardly. He better be kidding when thinking he deserves a chance.

"Let me try." I closed my eyes, recalling his scent.

"I will look around till then," Lazlo's fainted words fell upon my ears but I was too focused on remembering his scent that I didn't respond to him.

I only meant to recall his scent but then I lost the track of time. I had my eyes close and my mind repeated the entire wood's memories.

It was Thiago and I talking.

We kissed,

And then,

'Wait! What is going on?' I called for Nia when I couldn't open my eyes, 'Nia! What is happening? Do you feel anything?' I asked her again but she was silent.

Finally, I opened my eyes but everything was dark this time. Did I spent hours standing here with my eyes closed?

Has the night arrived early or did I waste too much time? Nothing made sense. The entire world was dark with red clouds and thunderbolts lightening the sky.

"Lazlo?" I called for him but got no answer in return, "Thiago?" I was confused and lost. I was still in the same spot but the weather and time had changed. The cold wind was blowing my hair and shirt.

Through the whooshing of the wind, I heard some whispers. On the dark mountains, I saw a light coming from the deep. There was something shining afar, just behind the trees.

Gathering courage, I began to walk in the direction of the light. It was barely visible at this time of night but I was certain there

Gathering courage, I began to walk in the direction of the light. It was barely visible at this time of night but I was certain there was something there.

Once I was close enough, I began to realize it wasn't something shining, it was a partially ajar door.

"Lazlo?" I called, "Thiago!" the moment I said his name, I heard an echo.

"Thiago!"

My heart skipped a beat because the echo didn't sound like me. It was a whole different voice calling his name.

"Thiago Shepard! The Alpha of the Shadow Winder Pack!"

A lady was enchanting his name in that room. I stood just outside the door and peeped through the little opening of the door.

The room was all red with no furniture but candles and markings drawn on the floor and the red walls. It was like a sight from a horror movie.

A woman in a red dress was calling his name over and over again. She had her back facing me. Her long black hair was reaching her hips.

"What is going on?" I asked myself, still watching her and trying to comprehend why she was calling for Thiago.

"Thiago!" she called his name again.

Who was she? What was her relationship with him and why was I seeing her? I was confused with so many queries.

"Thiago Shepard! His wolf is Theo!" she knew too much about him. I watched her pick up something green, small, and round from the floor and then whisper on it.

"Make him blind, make him deaf, mute him!"

My heart skipped a beat when hearing her. What did she just say? I placed my focus entirely on her to make sure I hear her correctly this time and I did.

“MAKE HIM BLIND, MAKE HIM DEAF, MUTE HIM FOR THE REST OF HIS LIFE AND CURSE HIS WOLF-”

As her voice turned deep and it was then I realized she wasn't calling for him.

She was cursing him!

“N00000!” a scream left my lips as I thought I could stop her from cursing him. She groaned and turned around. Her face had too much light for me to see anything. I was blinded almost.

“NOOO!” is shouted again in despair. My heart ripped open, it seemed when little cries of Thiago suffered my heart.

“No! No!” Before I could even get a glimpse of her face, two strong pairs of arms shook me awake.

“Enya!” I opened my eyes to Lazlo holding me and scanning me in terror.

“What the fuck happened?” he was panicking, holding my shivering existence and waking me up. I was not gone for more than two minutes. It was the same sunny day with clouds approaching the mountains now.

“Thi-” I was breathing with difficulty. I swear that sight petrified me. It was so real, I felt it. I swear I saw it; it wasn't a nightmare.

“You closed your eyes and then disappeared. I returned after looking around for a minute and found you standing here and whimpering. Tell me what happened?” he instantly pulled me in his arms to rub my back and calm me down.

“Lazlo!” breaking the hug from him, I opened my mouth but didn't know how to explain anything to him.

“Hey, calm down. It is all fine. You might have dozed off,” even though he seemed not sure how it was possible, but it was a great excuse for him to calm me down first.

“Thia-go! We need to find him.” I had to swallow the fear and whatever happened and think of it as me zoning out so that we can focus on finding him.

He gave me a nod but sat me down first, “Drink some water, and only then we will move ahead,” he had only brought the water bottle out when we heard a painful cry of Thiago from the deep side of the mountains. These wooded mountains were scary and indeed creepy

Lazlo and I shared a glance before we got up on our feet in a panic.

“You were right!” I whispered, “It was Thiago!” | mumbled before rushing ahead of him to the origin of the voice.

“Hey! stay behin-d me,” Lazlo complained when I left him behind and without showcasing any fear, entered the deep woods.

“Thiago!” I didn’t hesitate to call for his name. People might see him as a monster but he was not.

“Thiag-“I haven’t finished when Lazlo shouting my name interrupted me.

“Enya! He is here,” well, I shouldn’t have left him behind., Obviously, he was aware of these woods more than I was.

Coming!” i tracked his voice, but the surprise I got was not what I have expected.

Thiago was on the ground with a silver arrow passed through him.

That sight itself was going to haunt me forever.

“Oh My God! Thiago!” I jumped down on my knees beside him. He was all bloody and grunting in pain.

“There is someone hunting the beast,” Lazlo was kneeling beside Thiago but whispering in his mouth. I had never thought this is how I will find him.

“Ugh! why did you bring her here?” Thiago complained, the arrow had crossed his right shoulder luckily but that didn’t mean he wasn’t feeling any pain. He was suffering miserably.

“She insis—ma Lazlo was cut short by me. He was talking about me so I will answer him.

“He is not the in charge of me.” I know it was no time for arguments but I needed to stop them before they think they can make decisions for me.

“He is searching for him. We need to get him out of here,” Lazlo whispered, his eyes stuck in one direction. So I assumed that’s where the Hunter was probably.

“Put him over your shoulder, I will distract the hunter,” I stated but Lazlo shook his head aggressively.

“You? Enya! Do you even know how dangerous those Hunters can be? Let me deal with it. I will go and see what I can do,” he looked so angry when hearing I want to jeopardize my life.

“La-zlo! You won’t b-e able to deal with him,” Thiago knew about me. The way he secretly looked at me and eyed Lazlo to shut up was a sign he didn’t forget what I can do.

“Thiago! I cannot let her,” Lazlo’s voice came out in a request, “she is too fragile for this shit,” I admired him for worrying so much about my safety but I would rather want him to see what I can do.

105- Am Unstoppable!

“Lazlo! if I want, I can save both of your assess. You might be the alpha but-,” I heard a branch snap and understood we were wasting time.

“We need to get out of here,” I said in a bone-chilling voice. The goosebumps around my skin made me aware of something I just realized.

I was able to sense the threat now.

I raised my face when calming myself down and saw Thiago staring into my face. I bet he knew I have found another power.

“Fine,” Lazlo gave up and grabbed Thiago’s arm to throw him over his shoulder and get up on his feet, “Don’t stay behind more than six feet from us,” he warned me when running ahead of me with Thiago on his shoulders.

“We are headed to the woods. I have a cabin there where I used to do some candies with my friends,” he cleared his throat but I knew what he meant. But it was then I also felt like I knew nothing about the mates I had been sharing a room and mate bond with. Do leven know anything about Maynard or who his friends are?

I faintly nodded but didn't take him seriously. As I stood in my spot, I postured straight and lowered my chin. My entire focus averted to the steps of the Hunter every snap of a twig and dry leaves, I heard it like it was playing in my ears directly.

I then breathed heavily and raised my hand to point at a faraway spot on the hills and mimicked a howl. But instead of my voice being heard from where I was standing, the voice came from the hills.

I didn't know how I did it but it was something crazy. The steps began to fade away as the hunter too heard and fall into my plan. He left for the hills but that's when I acknowledged this power wasn't that easy to control.

"Oh God!" my stomach churned and my throat gagged, making me bend down and throw up.

"Ahh!" the headache was so extreme that I felt like passing out. Shit! I was in the middle of the mountains and unable to run for my safety.

106-In Lazlo's Arms

'I can take over,' Nia came for my help, I nodded and let her take over. The transition was supposed to happen in order for me to leave this place and be somewhere safer.

I knew Lazlo wouldn't be able to carry us both but the woods were where he was taking Thiago so I believed he would be able to sniff me out there easily. Nia took over and a painful transformation began. My bones cracked while my body twisted. The heat I felt in my skin had never happened before but there were a lot of things that I wasn't able to feel before I got a hold of my powers. Or I thought I did. I reckoned I should have been practicing instead of waiting to find out which one of my parents had these powers. As the transition ended, Nia started sprinting towards the woods. I know she was also feeling sick but was using the last of her energy to carry us away from the Hunter.

Soon we arrived in the woods but that was all she could do for me. Her knees were shaking from the weakness, her energy went down. She couldn't stay for too long and that's when my transition back began. It was like one hell after another.

I wasn't in a state to go through another transformation but wasn't left with much of a choice. Once I was in my human skin, found my body miserably lying on the grass and my head hurting.

I still couldn't believe any power could make me this sick. These powers were supposed to make me stronger, not weak.

"Enya!" once Theard Lazlo calling for me, I let myself go. The energy and strength I had been using to stay awake weren't required anymore. I reckoned now that he was nearby, he will find me sooner.

Through my faded vision, I saw him spotting me and yelping in shock. "ENYA!" the panic in his voice comforted me, he was worried for me. My eyelids felt too heavy to stay parted from my eyes. Soon they met and my eyes closed.

"Hey! I am here," his whisper was all I could hear before I felt a piece of cloth being wrapped around my naked body. He had covered me in his long coat before lifting me up in his arms and taking me away.

The hike to those mountains had raised many questions in my head and one big threat in the name of,

Hunter!

I have been passed out for hours, it appeared. By the time I was waking up, I was cozy enough to not rush. As expected Lazlo had saved me. I opened my eyes in a small cabin. I had a blanket warming me up on the couch while Thiago was sleeping in the bed. The cabin had only one room upstairs, I suspected. —

"Ahh!" groaning and rubbing my eyes, I sat on the couch to recollect what led to us ending up in the cabin and after recalling every bit of it, I rushed to my feet to check up on Thiago.

"Thiago!" my eyes scanned him thoroughly. He didn't move. He was lying in the bed, covered in a bedsheet but the arrow was still sticking out of his shoulder.

"Lazlo!" I rushed out and found Lazlo in the living room downstairs. As I expected, there was one bedroom and a living room downstairs with a kitchen and a bathroom.

"Enya!" hearing me call for him from the top, he collected the stuff he had brought from outside and climbed the stairs to meet me there.

"What is going on? why is the arrow still sticking out of him?" I asked Lazlo, whose mood change into a bored expression when walking past me. I bet he was offended.

“Because I wanted to hang my clothes on it,” he shook his head while being sarcastic about it, “Because I couldn’t do it alone,” he let out a big scoff this time.

I get it!

– He was the one taking care of both of us from the last few hours but that is exactly what he was taught to do when he was chosen as the Alpha.

“Huh! the Alpha is tired of taking care of two people. I would love to watch him take care of his pack,” while not sparing him back, I taunted and joined Thiago again.

His sight was a reminder of what happened in the mountains.

“I can take care of my pack. Tell me how the hell you distracted that Hunter?” he put the ointments down and turned to face me.

“I didn’t,” I lied,

“Exactly! Because you fucking stayed behind and then transitioned to run after us,” there it was, the uncertainty about me and my powers “Right! I stayed behind because I had to pee,” since he was not going to believe me and I didn’t want to explain anything to him, I shrugged my shoulders and lied some more.

‘in the middle of a commotion?’ the wrinkles on his forehead almost made me crackle.

“Yeah! Ever heard of stress?” I ignored any more arguments with him and crawled into the bed to Thiago’s right shoulder, “How are we going to get help for him?” he was sleeping peacefully but he was not at peace,

His wolf!

What was wrong with him? does my dream has anything to do with reality? If so, then he is cursed but why would anyone curse him?

“We cannot get him help. We have to help him ourselves,” Lazlo picked up the scissors and stated with a little bit of uncertainty.

“Wait! You are not cutting his skin open, are you?” I was sure Lazlo didn’t mean any harm to Thiago but the way he was holding those scissors made me skeptical of his motives.

“No! I am going to rip open his shirt,” he almost raised his voice when hearing me question him over everything.

“Okay! Give me that,” i grabbed the scissors without giving him a chance to protest and his mood changed.

“What are you doing?” I heard him complain.

“I am going to take off his shirt,” the instant I said that Lazlo let out a groan in protest.

“I could have done that but no! you want to be ahead of me,” I heard Lazlo throw a tantrum and turn his face to the side before ! leaned in on Thiago and pulled the blanket off him. Holding his shirt from the middle, I ran the scissor through it.

“Are you done yet?” Lazlo inquired and that’s when I realized he hadn’t even looked our way. I was still tearing open his entire shirt. Trying to take it off completely. His abs and broad shoulders were a sight to see but I had to stop noticing those details.

“I didn’t know you are not allowed to see him shirtless,” I taunted him, watching him puff air out of his nostrils and then stretched his neck around, “I am done,” I informed him and only then he looked in the direction of Thiago again.

“Now what?” it was funny how he was now completely relying on me.

“Now we must pull this arrow out. He had this silver in his body for way too long. Besides, we don’t know what else the Hunter had used when making these arrows,” I told Lazlo while fixing my body to the right side of Thiago, where the arrow was.

“Okay! I will pull it out,” he cleared his throat and rubbed his palms. As soon as he saw me picking up a towel, he stepped back to straighten his back and watch my face again.

“What happened now?” I growled, getting frustrated with him for acting so weird.

“I have to put the pressure on it,” I said and he finally gave in. As he held the arrow tightly, I noticed a little movement in Thiago’s body.

I reckoned he was waking up. That wouldn’t end well if he is awake but before I could make a noise and inform Lazlo, he pulled the arrow out.

“ARGHHH!” Thiago had woken up by now so he felt the pain and screamed. Instead of covering his wound, my dumbass covered his mouth with the towel.

“ENYA! For fuck sake! You are going to kill him,” Lazlo slapped my hand off and grabbed the towel to place it on the wound making me cover my mouth in shock.

“I didn’t mean to do that,” i frantically mumbled, watching Thiago breathe heavily.

“Thiago! Can you breathe fine?” I am sure I didn’t apply that much pressure but in the state he was in, anything could cause him injury.

“Yo-u think such gentle hands are goi-ng to cause me pain when I am de-aling with actual pain?” Thiago woke up and decided to respond to my comment, “Get off me,” he tried pushing Lazlo away but couldn’t succeed.

“Shut up! You are bleeding,” Lazlo’s voice carried so many emotions when scolding Thiago. I was almost shocked.

It was as if he was concerned for Thiago.

“We should stitch it now,” I spoke softly but both the alphas stopped moving and turned their heads in my direction.

“I used to stitch buttons to my sweaters,” I shrugged, lifting a needle and a thread.

“No! please take her out of the room.” Thiago directly made a request to Lazlo.

“She is crazy, poor Maynard!” it was weird how Thiago and Lazlo were able to joke in a situation like this. But I believe it was necessary to lighten the air.

When it started bleeding a lot, I eventually left the room and Lazlo handled him. It was suggested that once such injuries are attained, a quick transition can result in instant healing. Sadly, it wouldn’t be the case for Thiago. His transition would cause him more pain and the attention of the Hunter.

Whilst I sat down on the couch, I heard his muffled cries.

I never knew Lazlo can stitch,’ Nia commented after staying silent for some time.

"Yeah! We know nothing about our mates,' I replied and rested my head back on the couch and stared at the fireplace.

"Do you think we don't know about Maynard too?' she must have felt it inside me. The timing was too coincidental for her to ask me this question because my phone rang the very next second.

"Hey," i tiredly attended the call. I was excited to hear from him but the day had worn me out.

"I am missing you!" those words from his lips pulled up a smile across my lips.

"I miss you too," I answered, snuggling on the couch lazily, "How is your pack and your parents?" I was feeling sad that he couldn't come with us. We really needed some help.

"They are just-fine," his tone was evident itself that they were not doing well and something was bothering him.

"I hope I am not disturbing you. You are not going to bed, right?" he asked, his voice sounding deep and exhausted.

"No! why do you ask?" I inquired and he let out a sigh.

"I just want you to stay on the call with me for some time," he mumbled in his mouth. He was extremely sleepy and so was I.

"Maynard! You are sleepy. Why don't you rest a little?" I suggested and he only groaned from the other side.

"Will you stay on the call with me?" he sounded like a lost puppy, "Please stay on the call with me," his requests were making me worried about him.

"Sure, we can do that," I cozied up and closed my eyes, imagining him beside me. "I really love you Enya!" he whispered while dozing off.

"I love you too," I laughed at him for being cute.

"Please don't ever, ever leave me," he added and then dozed off. I even heard him snore a little and breathe peacefully.

My lips carried a smile while I too dozed off. Since I was not needed upstairs anymore, I didn't see a point to keep myself awake. I decided to take a nap and then wake up and let Lazlo sleep for a bit. I was so exhausted and dozed off instantly. It was a much needed rest.

I had no clue what the following day was going to bring for me.

Definitely, not a peaceful day..

108-The Broken One

“Somebody has to go mark leave or else Mr. Tripper will come out tripping after us,” Lazlo said while packing his bag and getting ready to leave the cabin.

“Do you want me to bring your clothes or other stuff?” He stopped right when he was about to leave and asked me. I realized why he asked me that. After he brought me back, he covered me up in his shorts and shirt that he had left in the cabin some time ago.

“Sure! My charger too,” I sneakily looked away because when I woke up, my phone battery had died.

“Got it,” he nodded and left the cabin. I haven’t been upstairs and it’s been two hours since I woke up.

Lazlo had to go to mark leave for all three of us and also bring us some food and other necessities.

I had some thoughts in regards to Thiago. When I walked upstairs, I found Thiago lying in the bed but wide awake.

“Morning!” I greeted, awkwardly walking to the other side of the bed to sit down on the chair with him.

“Hm! Moming!” he replied in a much calmer voice. He had his wounds covered up but I am assuming he was going to take some time to heal, “Enya!” just when I thought I would be the one to start talking, he did.

"Thanks for coming to the mountains in search of me. I didn't really expect you to come. How can I after what I did to you?" he had turned his face in my direction to look me in the eye when admitting he had done wrong.

"It's all in the past, forget about it," I didn't mean it. In fact, I would have loved to find out more about my parents.

"What is going on with you?" I asked him a different question to divert his attention from what happened between us.

"He is crazy!" he let out a laugh before a tear left the corner of his eye, "I don't know. Maybe he is a monster! Maybe I am a monster," he finished and then straightened his face to watch the ceiling again.

"Is this why you push everyone away from you? You are afraid your wolf might hurt them?" I asked, regardless of my feelings about him pushing me away by stealing my only chance to find out about my powers and my parents.

When he didn't answer me, I felt triggered into finally speaking my heart out.

"Why did you betray me? you could have just asked me to help you get your files too. You knew I wouldn't have blinked an eye and helped you, but you didn't. You chose the most brutal way to break my heart," I was beginning to sniff a lot because I was fighting the tears in now.

"I don't want to talk about it," He closed his eyes and it angered me.

He was still going to avoid the confrontation?

"But I want to talk about it. Not everything will go according to you or your desires," I got out of the chair and hunched over him. He still didn't open his eyes, getting under my skin.

"I am such a fool. I almost lost my life when saving your ass back on the mountains and here you are, being almighty Alpha Thiago, who doesn't like being questioned. I hate it that I ever cared about you. Yo—" It was like I was crying to an empty shell.

"To hell with you," taking a deep breath, I rushed out of the room but only to slide down the wall and cover my face with my hands to cry a river on my palms.

My emotions were raw but justified. How could someone be so heartless? At least he could be honest with me and help me forget about the pain he had caused me, but instead, he stayed stubbornly with his eyes closed.

"I don't know what is the truth an-ymore," I heard his whisper and instantly uncovered my face. He had walked out of the room holding his hand on his bandage. He was only wearing his pants when he sat down against the railing of the mezzanine area.

"I get it. What happened to your parents is horrible. Your parents were killed by someone from my pack, but that wasn't me. Then why did you punish me?" I was back at questioning him again now that he came out of the room to answer me.

"I know it wasn't you," he said, bringing his one knee closer to his chest and resting his elbow on it while the wounded side of his body was resting comfortably.

"Then why did you take your anger out on me?" I asked and focused on how he zoned out.

"Because I do-n't know who did it. Because every time I think about it-my wolf misleads me. He tells me -,," he paused when breaking his stare from the hollow space and making eye contact with me, "That you did it. He tells me the Alpha King did it. He doesn't know who did it and I don't remember." His eyes streamed tears, his voice was rough and full of emotions too.

This would be the first time I saw him displaying so many emotions at once.

It shook me to my core when I heard his confession.

"I try to be a g-ood person. I tried to be a go-od mate but when you said your father's name back in the woods, my wolf told me he killed my parents until he denied it later on. I am h aving this battle inside me every day, Enya! I try not to think of everyone as a murderer but I can't help it," he was shaking in anger and crying too, "You know what's the worst part?" he didn't even wait for me to respond

"I was a fucking witness to what happened that night but now I don't remember anything. I just go blind, deaf and mute whenever trying to recall that n-ight," as he finished in tears and closed his eyes to relive the trauma of not being able to remember his parent's murder, I was struck with fright.

His words reminded me of the nightmare I had back in the mountains.

Chapter 109

109-11 Was One Scary Night

Author's POV:

Years Ago:

That night was scary for an eight-year-old. As the clouds rumbled and the thunderbolt lightened up the red sky, Thiago closed his eyes and prayed for their safety in his mind.

"What happened? Is my little boy afraid of the storm?" Mrs. Shepard was a lovely lady. She mated to her alpha mate when they turned 18 and after a year, they had Thiago.

That night she was driving Thiago back home to his father. The two had planned to spend a few days in Paris but then Thiago wished to be back with his father.

Mrs. Shepard was missing her mate too so the plan of returning back in the pack didn't upset her either.

They hadn't told Alpha Shepard that they were returning, a surprise was what they have planned for Lord Shepard.

"I'm not afraid. I'm just worried because you are driving," being sneaky and cunning, Thiago smirked when his mother faked a pout.

"Daddy will have no idea we are arriving. He will be so shocked when he will see us in the pack house," Thiago couldn't wait to meet his father and see the expression of shock on his face.

"You are really a little devil, aren't you?" Mrs. Shepard joke but soon their fun little conversation was put to halt when their car broke down.

"Oh shoot!" Mrs. Shepard cursed in her mouth realizing they were stuck in the middle of nowhere with a bad storm approaching them.

"Mom! Are we in trouble?" Thiago frowned but fear was what he was feeling inside.

"No! It's just that I'll need to get out and fix the car, okay?" she turned to him and gave him a smile.

Thiago didn't like the idea but he couldn't argue to it. They had to fix the car in order to travel back home. Her phone had no signals too due to the storm, so her getting out was the only option left to her.

"I will be on the lookout," Thiago voiced when his mother left the car and popped the hood open which blocked her from Thiago's vision,

He had to constantly wipe the window clean whenever the fog blurred his vision around.

“Okay! That looks like is a mechanic’s job,” she exclaimed with a sigh of exhaustion. She knew she shouldn’t have asked the guards to not follow her. Mrs. Shepard was a fierce beta and a strong-headed Luna. She had been known by everyone as a perfect Luna.

She was once pursued by the Alpha King but Mrs. Shepherd chose her mate instead of a crown of Luna Queen that she never craved.

While stuck in a middle of a road, she feared her son will be terrified if she told him they might need to walk to the nearest mechanic shop to get help.

Her worries withered away when she saw a car approaching them.

“Thank goodness,” she let out a sigh of relief and waved her hand in the air for the car.

The car stopped right beside her and a guy came out of the car.

“Alpha King!” she was surprised to spot him here. It was like a coincidence that he came right when she was in need.

“Mrs. Shepard!” Alpha King Shaun smirked, stepping out and secretly glancing at her from head to toe in that blue dress she was wearing

He was also driving by himself, which was unlike him.

nnnn

109-It Was One Scary Night

“What brought you into standing here cluelessly!” he tried to joke and she did let out a laugh.

“My car broke down,” she replied sweetly, expecting him to fix it for her.

“Oh! Let me help you with it,” He offered and stepped to the side. Thiago had watched a car but it seemed to him that his mother knew this man.

“Thank you so much,” she stepped to the side but didn’t know what his true intentions were.

The moment he felt like he had been given a chance, he pulled out injection and injected the wolfbane into her neck.

She was first shocked but then suddenly grabbed his hand to pull the injection out and throw it away.

“What did you do?” she gasped in fright, watching his eyes display lust.

“What did I do? What did you do? You left me for that Alpha. All these years, I had to live with this rejection. But finally, I’m going to get my revenge on you. After I fuck you and leave you here tonight, I’ll see how your mate accepts you,” he put the hood down when she trembled and got on her knees.

It was hard for her to keep her posture intact and keep standing now.

. The instant he put the hood down, Thiago frowned. He couldn’t see his mother anymore until Shauri grabbed her arms and pulled her up by force.

“Let me go,” she cried, unable to move a muscle.

He forced her onto the hood of the car and lifted her dress up. Thiago’s heart skipped a beat when watching his mother getting manhandled by some man.

“Hey!” he rushed out of the car to help his mother but she only cried more when acknowledging her son had watched her in that state.

Shaun was not going to give up, he forced her legs to spread and adjusted his body between her legs.

He didn’t even care that he had a witness watching them.

“You set my mother free,” Thiago rushed for his mother’s help but Shaun grasped his arm and twisted it, breaking his bone and tossing little Thiago to the ground.

“No! Don’t hurt my baby,” Mrs. Shepard cried. Thiago groaned but got on his feet, he wasn’t ready to let his mother suffer and she was afraid of him watching it all happen.

“Thiago! Run! Run and tell the world what a scumbag the alp,” she couldn’t talk when Alpha King covered her mouth and thrust inside her.

Thiago realized he couldn’t watch his mother getting violated and also because he couldn’t help her.

Chapter 110

110-Caught Kissing Thiago

Enya's POV:

"I am sorry for what I did to you. But I don't know who in your pack hurt my parents. I just can't trust anyone from your pack," he had to close his eyes to display sadness.

"I understand," I didn't lie this time. I truly meant what I said. I now understand why he wants to punish us all. Somebody cursed him into silence and he couldn't bring justice to his parents.

"I didn't like your sister though. I contacted her because I wanted to use her to get into that vault and get the papers. I couldn't bring myself to use you until you didn't show disapproval of my friendship with your sister. That night, I meant to help you but then when I was there, my wolf started to act up and I ended up betraying you." He was finally opening up and admitting everything. I felt bad that he couldn't trust me into sharing his condition with me.

"I wish we had talked," I murmured, "I wish we had connected more," I was talking in whispers. It was not a lie that the matel wanted so bad was Thiago in the beginning. It was still a lot that my heart was able to feel his pain and suffer for him.

"It happened for the best," his side of the statement didn't please me.

"If you had stayed with me, my wolf would have hurt you," he replied, not even looking my way.

"Right!" I nodded awkwardly.

And you are with Maynard. He is a good guy but makes sure you don't ever settle for less. You are special Enya; you don't need anyone to protect you. You just need to find love, the one who is truthful to you," his words upset me once more. I have seen him display jealousy at times, but whenever he was fine with me accepting somebody else, I felt hurt.

"Okay!" I didn't want to talk about anything anymore, especially my mate's bond with my mates.

"When I – when I was looking for you on the mountains, I heard a Hunter coming after you. What happened there, who was he?" I inquired and Thiago opened his eyes once more.

"I don't know him personally. But ever since I have been transitioning, I have noticed someone chasing after me. I believe he is the one who knows what my wolf is, or else he wouldn't be shooting my right arm. He had a chance to shoot through my heart but he missed it." Thiago explained what happened between him and that man.

"So, he doesn't want you dead. He actually wants to trap, is that what you mean?" I asked, it was even scarier this way.

If the Hunter wanted to catch him, he must have some deadly intentions behind it.

"I just want to find out what happened to my parents, who was responsible so that I can die in peace," the certainty and confidence he showed when talking about his short future plans stunned me.

"Don't you think you are being too harsh on yourself? Why would you want to die?" I questioned out of frustration.

"Maybe you have not seen my wolf yet. Once you see him, you will want me dead too. I am a danger to everyone, I need to be put to rest but not before I get revenge on the faulty ones," he almost gritted his teeth until his shoulder hurt and his attention transferred back to his injury.

"Oh! But maybe there is a way to help you out? It seems like-" I didn't know how to tell him about the dream I had. It could be the biggest clue or it could be nothing.

"It seems like what?" he tilted his face while batting his eyelashes steadily. He looked sleepy.

"Has your wolf always been that way?" I asked and he nodded without any doubt.

"Ever since he woke up, he was crazy. So I know, this is who I am," he shrugged his shoulder when trying to tell me there is nothing that can be done.

"Enya! Don't focus too much on me. I am not repairable, live your life with your mate. Forge-t about everything I said," he closed his eyes and took a deep breath. I was staring at him silently after he asked me to not worry about him.

How could I not when we still share the mate bond?

I watched him fall asleep right where he was sitting. He was probably tired and still under medications. But the dried-up tears on his cheeks were aching my soul.

"Thiago!" I whispered his name, he barely opened his eyes and raised a brow to acknowledge me, "You should return to the bed," || suggested.

"Hm!" forcing his eyes open, he pushed his body up but tripped so I rushed for his aid.

“Here!” I grabbed his left arm and pulled it over my shoulder, supporting his body and leading him into the room. Once I laid him down, I stood beside him and watched him fall asleep instantly.

I was feeling bad for him; his suffering has brought me to tears too. It is truly heartbreaking that you know what happened to your parents but you can't testify to it. He might even be accusing himself of not remembering what happened to them.

I covered him in a blanket and after giving it a thought, hunched over him to gently kiss his forehead. It wasn't anything sexual, I wanted his wolf to know he was not alone. They had their friends with them now.

“Sleep well, Thiago! You are not alone.” I said under my tone and smiled weakly. I wished to help him, I wished to help his wolf. But that was it for now. He had fallen asleep and I needed to get downstairs.

The moment I straightened my back and turned around, I saw Maynard standing there and watching me.

“May-nard!” My lips spelt his name in concern, he looked extremely pissed off.
