

Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South

Chapter 2897

Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South Chapter 2897

“Yes, what’s wrong with my mother?” Charity’s heart skipped a beat, and she hurried over to ask.

The medical examiner: “We found a polyp on her cervix.”

Charity’s face turned pale with fright, “This...is this serious?”

Dean Edwards came over and took the test form from the medical examiner, “Well..., this polyp is a bit big.”

“Yes, surgery is required.” The medical examiner knew the Dean Edwards, and quickly nodded respectfully, “Dean, we are only responsible for the examination, related For the treatment, the patient must be transferred to the gynecology department.”

“It’s hard work.” Dean Edwards nodded, “You can contact Dr. Irwin of the gynecology department, hand over the patient to her, and let her prescribe the procedures for admission to the hospital.”

After the arrangement is made, Dean Edwards said to Charity, who had an uneasy look, “Fortunately, it’s just a polyp, just cut it off, it’s not harmful, but this polyp is too big, if you don’t care, it will definitely cause bleeding and follow-up gynecological diseases.”

Charity heaved a sigh of relief after hearing this.

Dean Edwards added: “However, after the polyps are removed, a pathological examination should be done to rule out whether there are any lesions. I will tell you Dr. Walker’s phone number. You can take your mother to the gynecology department to find her. Dr. Walker is the gynecological expert in our hospital and have the most experience in this field of treatment, you can talk to her about anything.”

Charity nodded, “Thank you, Dean Edwards.”

After Mrs. Robbins came out, she quickly went to the gynecology department to find Dr. Walker.

Dr. Walker had received the notice and immediately went through the hospitalization procedures for Mrs. Robbins. Mrs. Robbins was admitted to the VIP room of the hospital that day.

It was the first time that Mrs. Robbins went to the hospital to perform an operation by herself.

“It’s not a major operation, but it’s not a small one. You still need to pay attention after the operation. People will definitely feel uncomfortable, so bear with it.” Dr. Walker said with emotion, “Mrs. Robbins, you are also careless, and you have such a large polyp inside your body. You don’t usually feel it. Fortunately, I came to see it. If it is diseased, it will be troublesome, and I see that you still have third-degree cervical erosion, which is very serious. If you don’t treat it, it will easily cause cervical cancer. You really don’t know about cervical cancer in women. How high is the probability now, people in their fifties are even more at risk.”

Mrs. Robbins shivered, her face pale.

Charity looked guilty. If it wasn’t for Chester to take Mrs. Robbins’s pulse this time, Charity really didn’t know how serious the consequences would be.

After completing the hospitalization procedures and paying the fees, Mrs. Robbins said with lingering fears, "Thanks to Chester this time, if he hadn't given me a pulse and saw so many problems, Charity wouldn't have brought me for a physical examination. They all thought that they were just a minor problem."

"Yeah." Charity nodded tacitly this time, and she gave Chester a favor.

It's different to have a friend who was a doctor beside her. Although she didn't know anything about it that someone reminded her.

Mrs. Robbins said: "You can go back and forget it. Anyway, I have to have the surgery the day after tomorrow. You can just ask a nurse to take care of me. You still have to take care of Lisa. Alas, it's all my fault. It's not the right time to be sick."

Charity: "It's alright, I hired a nanny."

"Then we still have to have family members watching. Who knows if those nanny will bully Lisa while we're not paying attention? Are there still few cases of those nanny beating people online?" Anyway Mrs. Robbins did not worry about her baby granddaughter.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon, after the nurse drew Mrs. Robbins's blood, there was a sudden knock at the door.

Charity turned her head to look, Chester walked in with a cane one after another, he was tall, wearing a brown sweater on his upper body, and had an elegant temperament.

Kaiden was behind him, carrying two thermal insulation boxes on the left and the right.

Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South

Chapter 2898

Let me go, Mr. Hill Author: Shallow South Chapter 2898

This scene, let alone Mrs. Robbins was shocked, even Charity was not much better.

His legs and feet were inconvenient, and he even came to deliver food?

“You guys have been busy all morning, so you probably haven’t eaten yet. I asked the chef to make food.” Chester said and asked Kaiden to put the insulation box on the table, open it. The meals were boiled tofu soup, as well as fresh shrimp and seasonal vegetables.

Mrs. Robbins and Charity had been busy all the time, they were not hungry, and they even forgot to eat, but when they saw these meals, they felt restless and hungry.

“How embarrassing this is! I asked you to send it here on purpose. We can just eat something in the cafeteria.” Mrs. Robbins said politely.

“Auntie, please don’t say that. I have eaten several meals with you in the past two days, but I didn’t dare to ask the chef to cook too much greasy food for you. Before the operation, it would be better to eat light and digestible food.” Chester picked up a lunch box and handed it to Mrs. Robbins.

To please a woman, the man must first please his mother-in-law and Chester understood this truth.

Mrs. Robbins laughed and Charity secretly sighed, but she also took the lunch box and ate the lunch.

When people were hungry, everything tasted delicious.

Chester comforted the two of them by the side, “Don’t worry, this operation is not big, and now the medicine is advanced. It doesn’t need to use a knife, but use a laser to remove it. Dr. Walker is the best gynecologist in the hospital, and she has cured a lot of cervical cancer.”

Perhaps because Chester was a doctor, So Mrs. Robbins was comforted by him, and her uneasy heart gradually calmed down.

...

At four o’clock in the afternoon, Mrs. Robbins insisted that Charity go back to feed the baby, so Charity and Chester walked all the way downstairs.

“Thank you so much today.” Charity walked on Chester’s right side, walking a little slowly to match his pace, “If it wasn’t for you, I probably wouldn’t have brought my mother to the hospital for a checkup, let alone that. Immediately let my mother be admitted to the hospital, and let Dr. Walker perform the operation himself.”

“What’s the use of just saying thank you.” Chester suddenly raised his eyebrows, “It is also necessary to express in action.”

Charity was stunned, “Then what do you want to express?”

“When your mother is discharged, let’s have dinner and watch a movie outside.” Chester said expectantly.

It was self-evident what it meant for a man and a woman to eat and watch movies.

Charity frowned, a little embarrassed, but it was a fact that Chester helped her.

Moreover, the grievances between Chester and her had already been paid off, and he didn't owe her anything.

"Don't worry, I won't force you to associate with me." Chester seemed to see what Charity was thinking, and smiled indifferently, "I am satisfied as long as I see you every day, and I can have a meal with you. Watching a movie is like winning the lottery."

"Okay, after my mother gets better." Charity nodded.

"You're probably going to escort you in the hospital during this time. You just stay here and I will take care of it for you. Don't worry about my inconvenience in one leg. I still have Kaiden by my side, and does the nanny have any intentions? I can still see from taking care of Lisa, the most important thing is that Lisa seems to like me very much." Chester said with a smile, "I hug her, she is quite happy."

"She is still so young, who hugs her? I'm not unhappy either." Charity poured cold water, "Unless you look very ugly."

Chester choked.

When the two came out of the elevator, they suddenly heard someone shouting, "Chester.."

Charity paused, Chester's face turned cold, he ignored the voice and continued to walk towards the door.

"Chester, Chester, wait for me." Mrs. Jewell chased after him.