

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1124-1125

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1124

Chapter 1124 Raina took a deep breath as she quivered and said, "I might sound stupid for saying this, but even after half a month of heartbreak, I was still making excuses for George."

"He didn't mean it, he's just ignorant. If he had known about this, he would definitely be by my side. He's not the kind of person who would leave me at times like this, even if he has no feelings for me.

"Even during those times, I was still worried he had gotten into an accident. I resented God and wondered if he'd call it quits when he finally took all that I had from me.

"But those thoughts stopped when I accidentally heard what the patient in the ward next to me said." Raina's gaze turned cold as she zoned out. "The VIP ward next door occasionally had bodyguards guarding it. One day, as I passed by the ward, I instinctively stopped when I heard them mentioning the Winters family. "A voice inside me told me to eavesdrop and listen to what they had to say and find out the truth. In the end, I now found out that the legendary heir of Winters Corporation is George Winters. According to them, the "George" they mentioned possessed the same character, appearance, and even siblings as the "George" that I knew, other than his identity.

"Turns out, my boyfriend was a chairman of a reputable company, someone clearly out of my league. Turns out, he never cared about me, and that must be why he never told me anything about him. Turns out, this relationship had always been one-sided. It was a burden to him, and I was the joke.

"I thought he was just popular among the girls in school. I didn't know that countless daughters of wealthy families dreamed of being with him. In an instant, he became so distant and out of my reach.

“They were discussing which lady would be the chairman of Winters Corporation’s perfect match. They said, to be his partner, that lady must be of equal social rank. As they listed down a list of names, I heard a couple of prestigious celebrities’ names.

“I wasn’t even aware how I left, how long I got lost in my thoughts, or what I was thinking about. Before I knew it, I had reached the legendary Winter Corporation’s headquarters.

“Across the street, I saw him. He was wearing a handmade suit. His expression was ice-cold. He was looking elegant and poised. The presence was overwhelming. A group of assistants in suits and formal attire followed behind him. I’d never seen him like this before, and it was his true form.

“I didn’t have the courage to walk to him and emerge in front of him.

“I used to have a family and relatives. I was once full of enthusiasm and I was a fighter. But right now, I’m heavily in debt, my father died in spite of their best attempts to resuscitate him, and my younger brother is still in the ICU. I’m in a tight corner, and have no courage to stand in front of him again.

“What’s more, he doesn’t even love me.

“What am I supposed to do? Kidnap him? He’s benign and openhearted. I have kidnapped him long enough. How do I have the heart to make him stick with me for the rest of his life?”

Raina chuckled and shook her head. “He didn’t do anything wrong. He just doesn’t love me. At that moment, I figured out everything. I decided to move on, and let him go.

“So...” Harold then said in a deep voice, “So, you’re the one who wanted to break up, and you lied to him, saying that you’ve moved on?”

Raina was silent for a while before saying, “That’s right. Only in this way, he’ll truly let go of his sense of responsibility for me and no longer be bound to me. “But what if what binds him to you is not the sense of responsibility, but his feelings for you? What if he really loves you?” Harold said sharply, “Would you regret breaking up with him?”

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1125

Chapter 1125 Raina was stunned. She laughed at herself. "Did he say that? Did he say that he loves me? That's impossible!" she laughed as her eyes gradually teared up. "If he did, why didn't he come here on his own? If he loves me, why would he disappear without leaving a word to me? If he loves me, why would he be wary around me and avoid me at every chance he gets?"

"You said he loves me, but the way he looks at me, his words, and his actions never once showed that he does. She shook her head and smiled as her vision blurred. "Are you saying that true love means to avoid and hide from the person you love? I don't believe you."

Her question also left Harold and Ninian speechless.

George had broken Raina's heart, lowering her self confidence. She was certain that he did not love him, and that was determined to cut her off.

They finally understood that she wanted to break up not because of a moment of misunderstanding or impulse, but instead, of an outbreak of suppressed feelings of disappointment and loneliness over a long period of time.

"Raina..." Ninian felt a tightness in her throat as she said in a hoarse voice, "Have you ever wondered if George is just not good at expressing his love for you? He grew up as our eldest brother and the heir of the Winters family and learned to be introverted. That's why..."

"If he truly loves me, if he wants to continue this relationship, he would've taken the initiative to come talk to me." Raina said, "I don't blame him for his reticence, but he keeps everything to himself and won't share anything with me. He doesn't trust me. He's always vigilant and indifferent to me.

"I used to be the closest person to him. If he really cared about me, he wouldn't have kept everything to himself. When I felt sad, he would try to cheer me up and ask me why I was sad. Whenever he learned that I really wanted to know him, he'd say some irrelevant words to coax me. But now, he does nothing at all."

"I followed after him like a fool to see what brings him joy and what makes him sad. Meanwhile, I don't exist in his life.

"Ninian, trust me," Raina said earnestly, "This is not true love."

"But Raina..." Ninian said hurriedly, "George has neither gotten drunk nor cared for anyone this much before. After you two broke up, he got really drunk and kept saying your name. He's really heartbroken, and he couldn't move on from you... "If love isn't a person calling his lover's name when he's drunk, or thinking endlessly about his lover day and night, what is love?" Ninian was puzzled. "George has been keeping a close eye on you for the past three years. He only has eyes on you, Raina. Are you really going to let him slip through your fingers? Are you really willing to let him go?"

LITTLE

Raina could not refute what Ninian said, causing her hard to breathe.

She raised her head, holding back her tears.

After a long pause, she said hoarsely with misty eyes, "... Yes."

At that moment, a figure was about to barge into the cafe, but he stopped.

LU

George stood outside the glass window, looking at Raina, who was not far away, as he teared up.