

Chapter 193

George suddenly turned around and saw Duke's black eyes, which contained hidden anger.

"Don't tell me you're doing this for your mom's reputation again."

The man's voice was cold, and it echoed in the small room.

George pursed his lips without answering. He just wanted to figure that woman out. However, he unexpectedly encountered his rival, and things just spiraled out of control. "Tell me. Why are you trying to deal with LaStar Technology Corporation?" Duke stared at George and asked coldly.

Although the codes on the screen had flashed by extremely fast, he had still been able to catch the website's address.

His son, whom he was always proud of, had actually mounted a sneak attack on the website of a newly established studio. George lowered his head and clenched his fists. He gritted his teeth, but he did not say a word. "Your hacking skills are some of the best worldwide, and less than ten websites in the country can defend themselves from your attack," Duke said sternly. "I'm going to say this for the last time. You're not allowed to attack any company with your hacking skills again." George suddenly raised his head. "I can't attack any company or I can't attack Adina Daugherty's company?" Duke narrowed his eyes. "What do you mean?" "Dad, you know what I mean."

George took off his shoes, got on his bed, and covered his head with his blanket. Duke stared at his small arching body with a deep frown.

George's animosity toward Adina was odd.

The accident was still under investigation. He really did not understand why George kept accusing Adina of being the culprit.

He walked out of the room and gently shut the door.

When he returned to his study room, Jake gave him a call. "Mr. Winters, I've investigated Jett Baldwin's network and discovered that he met the Fuller family's housekeeper two weeks ago."

Jett was the driver who caused the accident. He died after the car fell into the moat.

Duke sat down in front of his desk "Which Fuller family is this?"

"It's the Fuller family from Central City," Jake answered. "Twenty years ago, the Fuller family collaborated with Winters Corporation on a project. After the project ended, the Fuller family moved to Central City. It's understandable that you don't remember them."

Duke narrowed his eyes and pondered for a while before he finally recalled some information about the family from his memory.

At that time, his father was still alive. His father had handled the project with the Fuller family, so he did not know much.

“Send someone to Central City to investigate the Fuller family. Also, continue sifting through Jett Baldwin’s relationships. Don’t let go of any clues even if they seem normal,” he said stoically.

“Yes, Mr. Winters!”

When Adina got to her company in the morning, she felt that something was off as soon as she turned on her computer. She had intentionally added three firewalls to the company website yesterday, but the number of firewalls had become five this morning. It was totally strange.

After she clicked on the website and entered the server, she finally saw the mess.

Clearly, a hacker had attacked the internal site yesterday, and someone had defeated the hacker for her. He had even added two more firewalls for her.

There was no question about the person’s identity.
