My Baby's Daddy Chapter 1495

A few members of the Payne Family were sitting around the table at the restaurant, including Leslie's grandparents, his parents, and his two aunts and uncles-in-law. They were not here today to call off Leslie's and Queenie's engagement, but they were here mainly to re-select Leslie's future wife, who would also be the future matriarch of their family.

When Queenie walked in, they couldn't recognize her and weren't sure if she was Queenie or Bonnie. "Mrs. Silverstein, w—who is this? Is she Queenie or Bonnie?"

"This is my eldest daughter, Queenie, Bonnie and Leslie will be coming right up!" Maggie explained with a smile.

"Oh, they look very alike. We can't tell them apart!" Leslie's mother, Keira Faulkner, donned an awkward smile as she tried to gloss over her social faux pas.

Although Queenie hated Leslie, she still treated the seniors politely since they weren't the target of her ire. She bowed slightly and courteously greeted the members of the Payne Family.

Not long after, they saw Bonnie and Leslie walking in together, but they were slightly disappointed when they looked at Bonnie's obviously amorous and arrogant figure. They wondered why Leslie would fall for such a prideful and vain woman.

It was obvious at a glance that Queenie was even more dignified, well-behaved, and refined than her twin!

As Bonnie took her seat beside Brandon, she couldn't even be bothered to say hello while she merely swept a dismissive glance at the members of the Payne Family.

"Bonnie, say hello to Leslie's grandparents, parents, aunts, and uncles!"

"Hello," Bonnie reluctantly obeyed in a somewhat haughty manner.

The members of the Payne Family secretly gasped in shock and exchanged bewildered glances. Queenie and Bonnie were sisters, but why was Bonnie different from what they imagined?

They assumed that Leslie had chosen the more outstanding one among the twins, but to their dismay, he had done nothing of the sort. If anything, Bonnie was the epitome of a spoiled brat.

"Oh, so you're Bonnie! Leslie has always talked about you. It's nice to finally put a face to the name."

"Mr. and Mrs. Payne, I hereby announce that my engagement with Leslie is null and void. From now on, my sister, Bonnie, will become Leslie's fiancée," Queenie affirmed in a crisp voice.

As soon as she finished speaking, Maggie and Brandon were thrilled, while the members of the Payne Family were dismayed. Bonnie was so enraged that her face twisted into a hateful scowl, and she turned to glare at Queenie. Why was Queenie so eager to pair her and Leslie up?

“We’re here to call off your engagement with Leslie. It’s not my engagement party,” Bonnie rebuked directly and looked a little upset. “How can I get engaged with Leslie right after you call off the engagement with him?”

“Bonnie, you and Leslie love each other. Since we are all here tonight, let’s discuss your engagement with Leslie right away!” Brandon said to Bonnie. After all, Leslie and Bonnie had done the deed, so he hoped Leslie would be responsible and marry Bonnie.

“We don’t have any objections as long as Leslie likes Bonnie,” concluded Leslie’s father.

Brandon had only two daughters, each of whom would inherit half of their family’s massive assets and wealth. In that case, no matter who Leslie married, he would be able to get half of the Silverstein Family’s assets in the future, which was a great advantage for them.

The members of the Payne Family looked harmonious and joyful, but each of them was filled with glee as they conspired to seize the Silverstein Family’s wealth.

“Bonnie, if you think it’s too hasty to get engaged tonight, I’ll prepare a grand proposal party tomorrow and invite all my family and friends to witness it. Is that okay?” Leslie asked. He shared the same thought with his parents. He wanted to marry one of Brandon’s daughters in order to lay his hands on the Silverstein Family’s wealth.

“Let me sleep on it!” Bonnie neither refused nor accepted his proposal.

“Queenie, don’t be discouraged. You’re a wonderful girl. I’m sure you can find a better man than Leslie,” Keira feigned empathy as she comforted Queenie.

Queenie curled her lips into a sweet smile even though her following words were anything but honeyed. “Mrs. Payne, thank you for your concern. Unfortunately, Leslie and I are not destined to be together, but I already have someone I like, so I’m also very eager to call off the engagement.”

The members of the Payne Family were stupefied. As far as they knew, Queenie once barged into the hotel room to catch Leslie cheating on her red-handed. The incident was blown up so terribly that it even tarnished Leslie’s reputation a little. So, they assumed Queenie would pester Leslie and insist on marrying him.

However, they were caught off guard by Queenie’s remarks and were dumbfounded for a few seconds. Keira even stammered awkwardly, “O—Oh! I—Is that so? You like someone else!”

“Yes, I have someone I like. I’m eager to give way to Bonnie so we can marry the right person! See, she and Leslie were so in love that they couldn’t keep their hands off each other before I called off the engagement with Leslie! I didn’t want to be in their way, so I quickly broke off the engagement!” Queenie chuckled.

Maggie, who sat beside Queenie, tugged at Queenie’s sleeve under the table, urging her to stop talking. After all, this matter did tarnish their family’s reputation.

Bonnie’s face turned a little red in embarrassment. Was Queenie implying that she was shameless? Leslie also felt discomfited by Queenie’s seemingly accidental social blunder.

Was Queenie trying to ridicule him in front of his family?

“Queenie, I’m sorry I cheated on you, but I love Bonnie. I can’t let Bonnie down, even though you like me.”

“Oh, please, you think too highly of yourself. I’ve never liked you. Also, the man I like is much better than you,” Queenie sniffed proudly.

After hearing her remarks, the members of the Payne Family were disgruntled. Did Queenie mean to say that Leslie was unworthy? This meant that she somehow looked down on their family!

“Is that so? You’re so lucky, Queenie. It’s unfortunate that Leslie doesn’t like you,” Keira said in a passive-aggressive manner.

“Oh, I should thank Leslie for allowing me to find someone better. I wouldn’t have had the chance to take a fancy to someone else if Leslie hadn’t hooked up with Bonnie while we were engaged!” Queenie smiled.

Feast your eyes on the trash that is your son! He cheated on me with my sister while we were still engaged. How shameful! Queenie thought. At this point, the members of the Payne Family looked outraged. Keira didn’t want to say another word while Leslie’s grandfather covered up his embarrassment by drinking water.

“Shush, Queenie. Stop talking,” Brandon muttered discretely. Even though he did feel that Queenie was running her mouth today, he also felt rather proud that she was being particularly eloquent.

On the other hand, Bonnie’s paranoia was running high as she started theorizing about Queenie’s actions, Queenie said she likes someone else. Is it Nigel? Are they really dating?

“Queenie, how can you say that? You can’t force someone to like you. Although I heard you also like Leslie, he will be your brother-in-law. As Bonnie’s sister, you should be more gracious and open-minded. You should give them your blessing!” one of Leslie’s aunts rebuked furiously after Queenie ridiculed Leslie in front of them.

She was definitely mocking Queenie for being petty.

At this moment, Queenie's phone rang. As she laid her eyes on the caller ID on the screen, she smiled and said, "Excuse me, my boyfriend is here. I'll fetch him over and make sure to introduce him to all of you later."

Bonnie, who was drinking water, jerked her head up abruptly and looked toward the door. What the hell? Was Nigel really here?

Leslie's expression also changed. Who did Queenie ask to come? Boyfriend? Hah! He didn't believe that Queenie had a boyfriend within a few days.

She must have asked one of her male friends to pretend to be her boyfriend to save face.

Queenie pushed the door open. As soon as she came out, she saw Nigel standing in the corridor in a white shirt and black trousers. He looked like an elite businessman who had just gotten out of a meeting.

At this moment, Queenie was so touched that her eyes turned slightly red-rimmed. She was all too grateful that he came to back her up and give her a helping hand.

"Mr. Nigel, you're here!" Queenie smiled as she looked at him.

Nigel couldn't help but frown when he saw her red eyes. "What's wrong? Did someone upset you?"

Queenie shook her head. "No. These are tears of joy. I'm so glad you came! I was so worried that you wouldn't show up!"

"I gave you my word, so I will definitely attend!" Nigel narrowed his eyes with a determined expression.

"Alright, let's go in. Later, I'll call you Nigel, and you'll call me Queenie," Queenie whispered.

At the dining table, Bonnie was so anxious that she could feel her heart hammering against her chest rapidly. Her eyes were fixed on the direction of the door. Was it really Nigel?

Was Queenie so capable that she could win Nigel's heart in just a few days? Bonnie secretly balled her hands into fists under the table.

In the meantime, Leslie knew Queenie's unyielding personality very well. He was curious to see which friend she had invited to play her fake boyfriend in order to regain her dignity after being dumped by him.
