Chapter 2149 Who Entrusted Him?

Yvette sat there with two police officers opposite her. Initially, Yvette was very excited when she saw the police and could not wait to tell them about all her grievances in the past few days.

However, she suddenly became very quiet.

Yvette could not say a word.

Without evidence, how could they bring Sean to justice? She sat there and listened to them absently.

The police officers were also a little anxious, but somehow, they had intriguing expressions.

Facing their serious inquiries, Yvette gritted her teeth. Her eyes suddenly felt sore. Her heart was moved.

"Wait, I'll tell you what happened."

Even if it was a sliver of hope, Yvette wanted to give it a shot.

No matter how powerful Sean was, he was not invincible, so what if she succeeds? The police officers looked up at her.

Yvette took a deep breath and told them everything she went through since New Year's Eve, including what happened at Tattle Bar and the nightclub where the old master held his birthday party.

The police officers looked at each other and stood up, looking serious.

"Ms. Quimbey, thank you for your cooperation. From now on, you must pay more attention to your safety. If you need anything, please contact us at any time."

Yvette pursed her lips.

"Can you arrest him?"

The police officer paused. His expression was solemn.

"Actually, we've been eyeing this underground organization for a long time. We've also sent some personnel to investigate the situation. Unfortunately, they're very cunning and left no evidence. Ms. Quimbey, Sean Moore is a new member of the organization. He's also eager to gain a higher position in the organization, so this is their weak link. As for that old master..."

They hesitated to speak.

Yvette's heart skipped a beat.

"Although he sent me home, I didn't hide anything from you. That old man looks kind, but he has done many illegal things and has a high status in that organization. Even Sean and Mr. Cash have to listen to him. But I don't know who he is..."

The police officer paused before he spoke again.

"He's the drug lord that we've been tracking for more than twenty years. His whereabouts are uncertain, and he has multiple identities. That's why we haven't been able to catch him for so long. Although we received news that he appeared in Atlanta this time, we still didn't get any details of his exact whereabouts. It's a pity that we didn't get in touch with you sooner...Ms. Quimbey, we have a presumptuous request."

Yvette sat upright and looked at him solemnly.

After the police left, Yvette sat there with a pale face and stared into space. Not long after, there was a knock on the door of the ward.

Nicole, Ian, and Julie came together.

Yvette immediately put on a smile and looked at them.

"Are you guys here to visit Lance?"

Nicole and Julie walked over and hugged Yvette.

"You're finally back!"

Julie looked at Yvette worriedly.

"I heard about your incident when I was abroad, and I thought Nicole was joking. I'm so glad you're okay."

Yvette smiled. She seemed to have matured at once. She did not cry or make a fuss and was expressionless. She also did not share what happened to her during this period of time.

What was there to say anyway? It was not anything pleasant.

Yvette looked at Ian.

"Carter, I thought your honeymoon would last for two years!"

Ian, who had been abroad on his honeymoon all this while, was speechless. He scratched his head and looked at Yvette.

Ian sighed and said, "I should've brought you along. I'd rather you be a third wheel than go through all this."

Yvette snorted and smiled.

Nicole looked at Lance and turned back.

"Yvette, where have you been these days?"

Yvette looked inside and at her friends. She paused before she said, "Sean Moore did this."

Nicole, Julie, and Ian were shocked. Ian cursed out loud. Julie frowned in shock.

"What does he want with you? You guys broke up so long ago. Is he still hung up on you?"

Nicole was silent for a few seconds.

Then, she looked up at Yvette.

"I investigated him. His company has been losing money, but it's not showing any signs of bankruptcy because he has a steady stream of capital filling in the losses. I thought that it was very fishy. Sean was vigilant and made it seem like he wanted to cooperate with Stanton Corporation, but he wasn't sincere. How could he do this? Is it because..."

Nicole hesitated to speak, but she had a strong suspicion.

Yvette's face turned pale. She lowered her eyes and nodded.

Nicole was shocked.

"What about now? Is he willing to let you go?"

Yvette said, "That's a long story. Sean gave me to his boss, and it just so happened that someone entrusted his boss to let me go."

Julie asked, "Who entrusted him?"

Yvette shook her head. She did not know either.

Nicole had a solemn expression.

"You must have someone to protect you at all times.

Why don't I get a few bodyguards for you?"

Yvette squeezed her hand and shook her head solemnly.

"No, don't. Please don't get involved in this. I already have a solution."

Nicole was surprised.

Ian said a few words and insisted on following them out to dinner. He would not leave no matter what.

Yvette finally left him be.

The group found a private room in a nearby restaurant.

When Ian mentioned Tattle Bar, Yvette froze.

"You guys shouldn't go to this place anymore."

They looked at her. Yvette pursed her lips.

"I'll explain later. Anyway, just don't go there."

Tattle Bar was a small business with a nice atmosphere, but in the dark, it was actually a money printing factory.

No one would believe her even if she told them.

Yvette also remembered that the police officer told her not to tell anyone about this for the time being.

They tried hard to forget about the unpleasant events, so Ian talked about the happy memories.

It seemed like everything was like how it was back then when they were carefree.

However, Yvette only looked relaxed and happy on the surface.

Her heart was heavy with a secret that she could not forget.

Yvette only returned to the hospital when they left.

When she got to the door of the ward, she saw Nicole standing there and smiling.

Yvette's eyes were sore.

Nicole saw through Yvette's act earlier but did not expose her.

Nicole walked over.

"I know that even though you're back, this isn't over yet. Here, this is for you."

Nicole took out a gold velvet box with a pair of diamond earrings in it.

Yvette looked at her, puzzled.

Nicole explained, "There's a GPS in here. As long as you don't turn it on, it can't be detected. Your whereabouts will be made known to us immediately as soon as you turn it on.

Yvette, Grant gave this to me. I felt bad that my family wasn't of much help in this. But because of what happened with Angie and Tyler, the military has been keeping an eye on Clayton and my family. My sister-in-law is also pregnant again, so Grant couldn't take any risks. That's why..."

Nicole lowered her head and felt remorseful.

If Nicole was alone, she would sacrifice everything she had to help Yvette.

However, Nicole had to consider the safety of her entire family if she wanted to go against an unknown criminal organization.

Her selfishness was tormenting her.

Fortunately, Yvette came back safely.

Otherwise, Nicole would hate herself for being a coward.
