Chapter 2174 Many Dangers

Sean smiled, glanced at Farley, and walked in.

Farley nodded and followed behind with a vigilant look.

It was a completely different view in the abandoned factory building. There were many rooms without doors down the winding paths.

The place was empty, and nothing could be seen.

As soon as Yvette entered the building, the strong smell of gasoline, dampness, and decaying matter flooded her nose.

She pinched her nose in disgust while Sean, who was next to her, pulled her up the stairs to the south staircase.

Yvette subconsciously broke away from him.

Sean thought she was throwing a tantrum, which was very much like her, so he did not take it to heart.

When they went upstairs, Sean did not let Yvette go ahead.

He walked in front, while Yvette walked in the middle, and Farley walked at the back.

It looked as if he was protecting her.

Yvette frowned but could not tell what was weird about this.

She looked at Farley with strange eyes.

Farley thought she was nervous, so he smiled and said, “Ms.

Quimbey, don't be afraid. The boss won't let you come if there's any danger.”

Yvette's voice was low, and she said casually, “I thought you were just a chef and didn't expect that you were more important than Tate and the others to Sean.”

Otherwise, Sean would not have brought only Farley for this trade.

At the end of the day, Sean just did not have enough trust in other people.

Farley raised his eyebrows. “The less you know about this, the better. Tate and the others are too straightforward to keep their mouths shut.”

He just made an excuse, but Yvette still understood.

It was likely that Tate was transferred to another location.

If Tate carried out an arrest operation there, Sean would know that Tate was an undercover officer once the police arrived.

That way, Tate's identity would be completely exposed.

She would not have a chance to leave then.

For a moment, Yvette's mind was spinning fast. She was extremely nervous and felt cold.

Today would determine their plan's success or failure.

Yvette touched her ear to ease her nervousness.

Once she got upstairs, she saw an ordinary man in casual clothes standing there. He looked at them with a smile.

"Welcome, Mr. Moore."

Sean smiled perfunctorily.

"Is Snakehead here?"

"Of course. Our boss values this cooperation, so he'll definitely come in person."

The man smiled politely and looked at Yvette, who was behind Sean.

"Is this your woman?"

Sean nodded. "Yvette, this is Snakehead's subordinate."

Yvette looked at him and nodded.

The man smiled and stretched out his hand.

"The boss is inside. This way, please."

Sean nodded and walked forward.

Yvette followed. When she passed by that person, he smiled meaningfully as if he was looking at her ears.

Her heart beat faster, and she immediately lowered her head.

Soon, they turned a corner and saw Snakehead surrounded by his people.

Snakehead had a very big and triangular head. No wonder that was his nickname. It was really appropriate.

He watched as Sean and Yvette approached and greeted them nicely.

“Sean, welcome to our paradise! ”

Sean went over to give him a short hug.

“Thankyou for taking care of us, Snakehead. Since we've settled down here, we'll have many opportunities to work together in the future.”

“Yes, yes! We'll be a family in the future. Let's make money together!”

Snakehead shrugged his shoulders and looked at Yvette, who was at the back.

“Is this beauty your sweetheart?”

Sean smiled and pulled Yvette to the front.

“Yes, she's my wife. We'll meet you often.”

Snakehead nodded meaningfully.

“Okay, I've prepared the goods. Bro, the price you gave me showed your sincerity. In the future, we'll contact you directly since we're brothers now! ”

Sean replied, “Sure! I'll definitely show you my sincerity on your first order, so this is not a big deal. Yvie, give him the suitcase.”

Yvette took a deep breath to suppress her nervousness and took a step forward.

The person next to Snakehead took it over.

Snakehead said, "According to our rules, the goods must be inspected first. Mrs. Moore, come with us for the inspection."

Yvette subconsciously looked at Sean.

Sean pondered for half a second before he nodded.

Yvette's heart kept sinking.

She did not know how to describe the nausea and fear in her heart at this moment. Sean really would sacrifice anything for his own benefit.

It was calm without any movement outside.

Would her savior not come?

Tate was also in danger.

After this, Yvette might also get implicated. It was also possible that she would never see hope again.

Yvette walked over dumbfoundedly and followed Snakehead's subordinate.

They went to a shabby table behind Snakehead and opened the suitcase that was filled with bags of powder.

Yvette was horrified. She heard that a few grams could land one in prison for several years. This suitcase would be enough for her to spend her whole life in jail.

Yvette did not know if she could say that she was forced to do this when Sean was arrested in the future. Tate was not around, so she did not even have a witness!

Yvette bit her lip and was just about to cry when the person next to her suddenly poured a bit of the powder out and licked it with his tongue.

The next second, the man stretched out his hand and grabbed her arm. A sharp voice rang in her ears, "Boss, there's a problem with the goods! Let's retreat!"

Yvette was startled. Before she could react, she was dragged back by someone.

Seconds later, gunshots were fired.

She trembled in fright and bent down to hide. When she saw the person beside her protecting her, she suddenly realized something.

"Yvette—"

Sean's voice roared outside.

"Snakehead, you played me!"

How could something go wrong with the goods he prepared?

Not unless this was just an excuse! Snakehead did not want to strike this deal with Sean at all.

In the blink of an eye, Yvette disappeared in the chaos.

Farley, who was behind Sean, quickly shot the other party. In an instant, the scene became chaotic.

Farley dragged Sean to hide against the wall next to them. Although they had a lot of people, it was still unknown how many people

Snakehead brought.

This was Snakehead's territory after all.

Sean wanted to get out, but Farley held Sean back.

"Boss, don't go out there. They came prepared, so let's call for backup."

Sean did not care whether this cooperation was successful or not.

What he cared about was Yvette.

Yvette went missing.

This was enough to drive him crazy!

Without hesitation, Sean shot the gun in his hand in the direction where Yvette disappeared just now.

At this time, Snakehead was hiding somewhere.

"Snakehead, give me back my woman!"

Sean shouted hysterically, and his eyes were scarlet.

Snakehead did not move at all, but his men were hiding in the dark and kept shooting at Sean.

The battle between the two parties had already begun.

Logically, the people they hired who were standing guard outside should have come up long ago.

Thus, Farley stood up in surprise and looked out.

Suddenly, his body shuddered.
