

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 631

Chapter 631

She kept convincing herself to hold on, and after a few seconds, she made sure to tell him off in a shy manner. "You have Catherine's perfume all over you now. There are even lipstick stains on your shirt. If you want to touch me, you should take a shower first."

It turned out that she was still jealous.

Earl's intense expression faded slightly.

He smelled his body, and there was indeed a very strong scent of perfume.

He took off his coat, curled his lips, and said, "Wait for me. I'll take a shower first."

Adina lowered her head and collected the glass pieces on the ground. "Take your time. Don't fall in the bathroom again."

"Am I that dumb?"

Earl chuckled and entered the bathroom.

Adina lowered her head, and her tears almost fell.

She quickly cleaned up the glass shards on the floor and later reentered with a bottle of red wine.

When Earl stepped out of the shower, there were two glasses of red wine on the tea table in the bedroom.

"Come and have a drink." Adina flashed him a ghost of a smile. "The night we received our marriage certificate, we drank like this too. Then..."

She looked down, and it was obvious from her side profile that she was blushing.

Earl sat down as she requested..

It had been Duke in the past, but it would be him every day from now on.

Only he would be in all her memories in the future.

Earl put his hand on Adina's shoulder, gently squeezing and caressing it.

Adina tried her best to endure it. She smiled bashfully and said, "Duke, do you still remember the first day we met?"

Earl was a little annoyed, and he drank half of the wine. "Why do you keep mentioning things that have happened in the past? We should talk about the future."

"Okay, let's talk about the future." Adina continued to smile. "Mom says she wants another granddaughter, but there are already four children in the family, and I don't think I want to have any more. What do you think?"

"Of course we should have more." Earl seemed happy. "We'll have a few more daughters like Mel, then the family will be livelier."

"I think it's enough to have Mel," Adina said softly.

"No, of course it's not enough."

Earl held her shoulders with his other hand.

No matter how adorable Melody was, she was not his biological daughter.

He longed for light, and he also longed to have his own kids.

He slowly moved his lips closer.

Adina closed her eyes and looked extremely obedient. She silently waited for the kiss.

She also secretly counted down.

Bang! Once she counted to eight, the man rolled over and fell on the couch.

Adina sighed in relief.

She got up, pretended to be worried, and said, "Duke, Duke! Wake up! What's wrong? Are you drunk?"

She shouted several times, but the man did not move at all.

Adina raised her leg and kicked him away. Then, the unconscious man rolled onto the carpet.

She sneered, and her eyes were full of indifference.

She took out a flashlight from the drawer on the bedside table before she squatted down and looked at the man's face carefully

His familiar features were so beautiful that she could not find any trace of plastic surgery.

Adina was a little frustrated. Had she guessed wrongly?

Did Duke really have a split personality disorder?

She was not willing to give up. She took a few close-up pictures of his face with her phone, uploaded them to a private cloud album, and deleted the photos from her phone.

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 632

Chapter 632 Adina sent the photos to a plastic surgeon whom she had met abroad.

(His face is simply perfect. He's a gift from God. No matter from which angle I look at him, I can't find any flaws. As for the plastic surgery you mentioned, I'm sorry. I can't see any trace of surgery on his face. Of course, if the plastic surgeon is extremely skilled, I'll take back my words. But there aren't many plastic surgeons who are better than me in the world...]

Upon reading the large paragraph of words from the plastic surgeon, Adina fell into silence.

Even one of the top three plastic surgeons in the world said that he had not undergone any plastic surgery on his face. It seemed that his face was real.

So, was this man really Duke?

Was this the same man who used to love her deeply?

Adina set her sights on the man who was lying on the carpet.

She suddenly remembered that when they were in love, she had seen a green birthmark under Duke's abdomen before.

She squatted on the floor again. She opened the man's bathrobe and pulled his shirt down.

However, she found a tiger tattoo. The tattoo's green pattern whether there was any birthmark.

Adina pursed her lips and stood up. Then, she anxiously paced back and forth in the room.

She always trusted in her sixth sense. This time should be no different.

She pulled open the closet and changed into a plain nightgown. After that, she messed up her hair, pulled open the room door, and walked out.

It was already late at night. The servants were already sleeping, and there was only a lit night light in the living room downstairs.

She entered the kitchen, took a cup, and smashed it on the ground.

There was a room behind the kitchen, and due to the loud noise, someone opened the door. Mr. Brown put on a jacket and walked out. "Mdm. Winters, why are you in the kitchen at this late hour? Are you hungry? I'll wake the chef up to make you some food."

"I'm sorry." Adina lowered her head and picked up the broken pieces. "I just wanted to get some hot water to drink. I'm sorry for waking you up," she said in a hoarse voice.

Her voice was exceptionally husky and hoarse. It sounded like she had been crying.

When Mr. Brown looked at her carefully, he noticed that her hair was messy, and her eyes were red. Dressed in a plain nightgown, her face appeared pale too. It was as if she had suffered a great grievance.

Mr. Brown's heart skipped a beat..

The master had returned home an hour ago. Did he quarrel with the madam again?

"Madam, are you alright?" Mr. Brown asked with concern.

"I'm fine..." Adina sniffed. "It's late. Please get some rest, Mr. Brown."

Right after she finished her sentence, her tears fell uncontrollably.

Mr. Brown thought, 'Oh, no.' He immediately pulled out two tissues and handed them to her. "Madam, what... what happened?"

He was not supposed to nosily ask about the master's family affairs, but it was the middle of the night, and there was nobody else by her side.

He was really afraid that the madam would do something rash.

Perhaps he should go upstairs and wake the master up. It would be better for them to solve the matter on their own as a married couple.

“Mr. Brown, Duke has been very strange lately.” Adina covered her face, allowing the tears to stream down her face.

There was an element of acting and some sorrow that she had suppressed for a long time.

Her partially-fake tears made Mr. Brown feel very apologetic.

He immediately said, “Madam, please have a seat on the couch. Let’s talk.”

Adina left the kitchen and sat on the couch with a blanket. Her gaze was a little blank.

“Mr. Brown, I don’t understand why Duke has seemingly become another person after our marriage.” She chuckled in resignation as she said, “It’s rare for him to come back at night, so we drank some wine and had a deep talk. He kept saying that the happier he felt, the sorrier he felt for someone. I don’t know who he feels sorry for. Is it his ex-girlfriend? Is it his former lover?”

“He misses that person, so he’s neglected me and the kids. Besides, he didn’t come home for a month?” Adina massaged her forehead. “If he really loves another woman, I can divorce him.”

Mr. Brown’s heart sank.

He was the housekeeper of the Winters family, but he could feel that Mabel, the master, and the kids treated him as family.

A month ago, the master had gathered all the bodyguards of the Winters family to look for someone on a large scale, and he knew about it.

He was aware of who the master had set out to find.

He knew that the master had destroyed all of that man’s property in Sea City. He knew that the master did not want that person to have the means to step into Sea City anymore.

Mr. Brown had always thought the master hated that person and his hatred ran deep into his bones.

Unexpectedly, the master would feel sorry for that person in the middle of the night.

No wonder the master had been acting so strange recently. It turned out that this was the issue.

Did this mean there was a possibility for the master to reconcile with that person?

Adina looked to the side a little and noticed that Mr. Brown seemed to be at a loss.

She sniffed before she continued to cry and say, "He's drunk now, and he keeps saying sorry. He's apologetic toward that woman, but he also feels sorry for me. Can he just neglect me like this after marrying me? This marriage is so meaningless. I'll divorce him tomorrow. I'll leave the Winters family with the kids and let him marry the woman he loves."

"Madam, you've misunderstood." Mr. Brown quickly explained, "Ever since the master was little, there have been no other women around him, let alone a woman he loves. You're the only one in his heart. Please don't overthink it..."

"But he said the happier we are, the more apologetic he feels toward the other person. Who else could it be other than a woman he loves?" Adina chuckled in resignation.

"Mr. Brown, you don't have to advise me. In fact, I can accept this. I can accept that he doesn't love me, and I can also accept divorce."

She took out a document from behind her. "Look, I've also prepared a divorce agreement. I'll get him to sign it tomorrow."

Mr. Brown was so anxious that he kept sweating.

This was a huge misunderstanding!

However, he could not divulge the Winters family's secrets!

But if he did not tell the madam anything, she would divorce the master tomorrow!

"Madam, I'll tell you the truth!" Mr. Brown gritted his teeth and said in a low voice, "The person whom the master feels sorry for is not a woman, but his biological elder brother!"

Pang!

Lightning struck Adina's mind.

She had suspected it for a while, but she still found it unbelievable when Mr. Brown actually said it out loud.

She hid her shock as she looked down and resumed crying. "Mr. Brown, don't lie to me. You don't have to make up such a lie just to comfort me," she said.

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 633

Chapter 633 "Madam, this is the Winters family's biggest secret, and I shouldn't have told you about it. But I really don't want you to continue misunderstanding the master."

Mr. Brown looked serious. His eyes seemed slightly glazed over as if he was recalling the distant past.

“The master has a twin brother. When he was born, he was diagnosed with congenital heart disease. If a sick child appeared in a big family like the Winters family, it would trigger a lot of gossip from the outside world. It wouldn’t be conducive to the kids either, so the Winters family hid the matter.

“The eldest young master was sent to the hospital to undergo treatment for his heart disease. In an operation, he nearly died on the operating table. At that time, he was only three months old. The three-month-old was so small. The doctor gave up on the treatment, saying that he could only live up to a year at most. Back then, the late Mr. Winters and Mrs. Winters went everywhere to find help for the young master, and they finally found a church to pray for him.

“The priest in the church allowed the young master to stay there, and after the priest took care of him, the young master miraculously lived past one year. Therefore, the late Mr. Winters and Mrs. Winters left the priest to take care of the young master and raise him up. Besides, they also followed the priest’s instructions to hide the young master’s existence. Aside from the late Mr. Winters, Mrs. Winters, and me, no one else knows that there was another young master in the Winters family.”

Adina suppressed her shock.

When Mr. Brown paused, she continued to ask, “Then? What happened after that?”

“In short, the young master has never returned to the Winters family all these years, but he has enjoyed the glory and wealth of the Winters family.” Mr. Brown sighed and said, “Meanwhile, Young Master Duke grew up in the Winters family. He naturally became their heir and inherited everything. Now that he’s married you, his life is complete, but his brother is still wandering out there, so he feels guilty.

“Madam, the master just feels sorry for his own brother. It’s not that he misses another woman. This is all a misunderstanding.

“But please don’t tell anyone about the things I’ve told you tonight. This is the Winters family’s secret. It is not the time to make it public.”

Adina pursed her lips. “If Duke’s brother is still alive, he should be twenty-six years old. His heart disease should also be cured. Why don’t they bring him back?”

Mr. Brown sighed heavily again. “Madam, it’s not my place to say anything. Once the master has sorted out his thoughts, he’ll tell you.”

Adina knew that Mr. Brown would not tell her a more earth shattering secret than that no matter how she asked him.

Nevertheless, knowing that Duke had a twin brother was enough.

She softly said, "Mr. Brown, thank you for easing the trouble in my heart. I won't tell anyone about this. It will be a secret between us."

Mr. Brown nodded. "It's great that you've thought it through. It's really late now. Please go ahead and rest."

Adina pursed her lips and flashed him a smile before she slowly walked upstairs.

She closed the door, sat by the bed, and looked down at the man on the ground.

She finally figured out the issue and also discovered who this strange man was.

He was Earley Wynters, or Earl Winters, the young master of the Winters family, who was also Duke's elder brother.

If this was Earley, where was Duke?

Where did Duke go?

Adina looked at the knife on the tea table and really wanted to put the knife against Earley's neck.

But she could not

If this was a well-planned set-up, her actions could put Duke in a dangerous situation.

She had to take it slowly.

First of all, she had to find Duke's whereabouts.

Adina got up and pulled the man up before she laid him on the bed. Then, she took off all his clothes and put a blanket over him.

She lay on the other side of the bed and closed her eyes as the night sky grew darker.

Earl pressed his dizzy head while he opened his eyes slowly.

He saw a strange ceiling, a soft blanket, warm-toned curtains, and a woman sitting in front of the dresser while putting on makeup.

He immediately sat up straight.

He had slept so soundly last night.

Ever since that incident, he had never slept so soundly before. "Are you awake?"

Chapter 634

Adina turned around.

She was holding an eyebrow pencil while drawing her eyebrows.

The morning sunlight shone in from the balcony and fell on her side profile.

The golden light made the delicate hair that fell on her face visible. She flashed him a bright smile, and his figure was reflected in her indifferent eyes.

Right then, Earl's mood became bright.

Just as he was about to pull the blanket away and get off the bed, he realized that he was naked.

Slowly, memories of last night flooded his mind.

Something had apparently happened between him and this woman.

He curled his lips. "Get a shirt for me."

Adina put down her eyebrow pencil before she picked up a lipstick. She scoffed and said, "Don't you have hands? Can't you get it?"

She looked so lively and agile, which was completely different from her gloomy self a few days ago.

Earl felt a light shining into his heart.

He had always been a jerk, but he wanted to be responsible for last night.

He got up and put on his clothes. By the time he washed up, Adina had already put on makeup and gotten changed.

He walked over and held her by the waist.

She did not resist and just looked to the side at him. "Are you going to the company directly or are you going after breakfast?"

"I'll have breakfast with you and the kids before I go to work," Earl whispered into her ear.

Adina suppressed the urge to push him away, and she asked with a coquettish smile, "Are you coming back tonight?"

"Of course."

Earl wanted to bite her ear, but she avoided it.

When he recalled their steamy encounter last night, he realized that he could not remember anything.

He must have been drunk, so his memories had been engulfed by his intoxication. When he came back tonight, he should not drink.

The two of them went downstairs with different thoughts.

The children had woken up early, and they were now sitting at the table while having breakfast. Mabel and Mr. Brown were taking care of them.

When they heard footsteps, all the six people at the dining table raised their heads in unison.

They noticed that the man had his arm wrapped around the woman's slim waist while the two of them walked down the stairs. They spoke happily as they made their way down, a picture of harmony and beauty.

The gloominess in Mabel's eyes instantly disappeared. "Addy, Duke, come and have breakfast."

"Wow! Daddy and Mommy have reconciled!" Harold's crinkled eyes revealed his joy. "Daddy, you have to be nice to Mommy. You can't bully her anymore."

Earl curled his lips slightly. "Okay, I'll try not to make your mommy angry again."

Adina raised her eyebrows and looked at him. "You better remember what you've said."

The two of them looked into each other's eyes as if they were flirting

Mr. Brown let out a long sigh of relief.

After he spoke to the madam last night, he felt slightly regretful. He regretted telling her the Winters family's secret.

However, when he saw that the master and madam had reconciled, he felt that it was worth revealing the secret last night.

The family sat at the dining table for breakfast.

As they were about to finish breakfast, Adina said, "I received a call from the foreign educational institute yesterday. It was Alden and Melody's teacher."

Mabel put down her cutlery. "Is there an important reason for the call?"

Adina nodded. "Mel wasn't in good health in the past, and she received treatment in that educational institute. I also helped Alden enroll in an early educational class there. A few months ago, I came back in a hurry, so I didn't manage to complete some of the procedures. They called me over to finish the final procedures. I'd like to bring Alden and Melody along too."

Mabel frowned. "Just let Mr. Brown go."

"Mr. Brown can help me do it, but the teachers in the institute miss Mel and Alden." Adina smiled and said, "When I was alone with the kids, I had to work all the time. The teachers of the institute took good care of them so they could grow up well. I was thinking that I should take them to visit the teachers as a show of gratitude. What do you think, Duke?"

She looked at the man beside her, seemingly asking for his opinion.

Earl pursed his lips. He did not care about where the kids went.

If the children stayed in the Winters family, he would be more distracted, as he had to deal with them.

"You're their mother. I have no problem with wherever you want to take them," he said indifferently.

"But..." Mabel disagreed. "Alden and Mel are still so young. It's too tiring for them to go abroad. It's also easy for them to fall sick when entering a new environment."

“Grandma, Mel and I have lived abroad for many years. We want to go back and take a look,” Alden said obediently. “Mel and I planted a tree at the back of the house. I’d like to know if the tree is still alive too.”

Melody blinked and said, “I also carved a bunny on the tree.”

“Wow! Really?” Harold curiously said. “I want to go and see the bunny that Mel carved.”

George paused for a while before he said, “Grandma, Dad, I’d also like to go abroad and see where Mommy, Alden, and Mel used to live.”

Earl cast a glance at him. “Have you forgotten what I arranged for you?”

George clenched his fists.

He had tried his best to guess the safe deposit box’s password, but he still could not figure it out.

Was he that stupid? Had he let his dad down?

He lowered his head and twisted his hands anxiously.

Adina felt her heart seize up.

She patted George on the back before she looked at Earl and chuckled. She said, “Duke, can you not put so much pressure on the kid? Whatever it is, can you wait until the kids and I return?”

It seemed like she was trying to sound cute.

No man could resist a beautiful woman who acted adorably.

Earl instantly gave in. “Okay, we’ll talk about it after you return.”

“Yay! Awesome! I can go abroad with Mommy!” Harold jumped up high and ran around the living room.

George smiled as well.

Since the two of them had already agreed to it, Mabel had no right to object anymore.

After breakfast, Earl went directly to the company.

Meanwhile, Adina stayed behind to pack the children’s clothing.

Mabel walked over and helped her sort out their daily necessities. "Addy, are you in a hurry? D

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 636

Chapter 636 Adina nodded. "We'll only arrive at the airport tomorrow morning if we leave today. After I handle the procedures, the kids and I will hang out there for a few days. Mom, don't worry. I'll take care of them."

Mabel let out a long sigh.

She was not worried about Addy not being able to take good care of the children. She just had an inexplicable nervous feeling in her heart

Adina folded the clothes while she said, "Mom, I had a funny dream last night. I actually dreamed that Duke had a twin brother. I gave birth to quadruplets, so I must have always felt that Duke has a sibling too. Oh, Mom, why do you look pale? Did I say something wrong?"

"No... No." Mabel forced a smile. "Why did you dream of that?"

"Maybe... Duke's personality has changed too much recently, so it's made me feel like he's a different person." Adina smiled as if she was mocking herself. "When we weren't married, he always took care of me. He tolerated me and protected me. Now, it's more like me tolerating him. It's as if he suddenly changed from being a caring older brother to a younger brother."

Every word she said made Mabel's complexion turn paler. "Addy, I suddenly feel a little unwell. I'll go back to my room and rest. You can ask the chauffeur to take you to the airport."

Mabel put down the clothes before she turned around and left the room.

Adina's expression instantly turned hostile.

So, Mabel was in on the trap too, was she not?

Perhaps she should feel glad. If Mabel was involved, Duke was probably not in great danger for the time being.

She had to hurry up and send the four kids away sooner.

Adina packed the children's daily necessities as quickly as she could before she carried two huge suitcases downstairs.

The four children had already gotten changed, and they were standing at the entrance excitedly.

Mr. Brown took the two suitcases from her and respectfully said, "Madam, do you need our bodyguards to tag along?"

Adina paused before she asked, "Are there any new bodyguards who have been recruited to the house in the last month?"

"Half of them were recently recruited by the master," Mr. Brown said. "I have to say that these bodyguards whom the master recruited are really good. They look like demons whenever they stand at the mansion's door."

Adina pursed her lips. "In that case, I don't need them. I can take care of the kids alone."

Those were spies whom Earley had planted in the Winters family. She would be crazy to let those people follow her and her children.

Mr. Brown wanted to say more, but he dared not make another peep when he saw Adina's cold expression.

He then drove the five of them to the airport.

Adina pushed the two suitcases and brought the four children into the airport's lobby, attracting the attention of countless people.

Luckily, all of them were wearing caps, so they were not recognized

Harold sat on a suitcase and swung his legs as he happily said, "This is my first time traveling abroad with Mommy. I'm so excited!"

The other three kids were also in a great mood.

Adina's heart was filled with guilt.

She took the children to a remote corner and squatted down. "I'm going to say something very important now. You have to listen to me carefully," she slowly said.

The four of them began to appear serious at the same time. Four pairs of black eyes were fixed on Adina, and her figure was reflected in them. "Mommy might not be able to go abroad with you."

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 637

Chapter 637

Their expressions darkened at the same time, and their eyes were full of disappointment.

Alden pursed his pink lips.

He had already felt that something was wrong when he heard his mom speak during breakfast.

Melody had never received any treatment in any institution, and he had never enrolled in any early education class either. His mom was clearly deceiving his grandma when she said those words.

mom was

He thought his mom wanted to go abroad to handle some personal affairs, so he quietly corroborated his mom's story.

But his mommy was actually saying that she was not leaving now.

Did that mean his mommy had tried her best to lie just to send the four of them away?

Why?

Adina's mouth was full of bitterness when she saw her children's doubtful gaze.

She had to continue her lie. "I was initially going to follow you abroad, but there's been a last-minute problem with my project, so I have to stay and deal with work first. But I've asked Uncle Flint to accompany you. Do you all know Uncle Flint?"

Harold stomped his feet unhappily. "I don't know him. I don't know Uncle Flint! I just want you, Mommy! If Mommy isn't going, then I'm not going either!"

"Hal, you're a good boy. Please listen to Mommy." Adina patiently coaxed them. "Go abroad with Uncle Flint today. I'll go over tomorrow and look for you, okay?"

George frowned. "Can't we stay in Sea City and wait for you, Mommy?"

Adina just chuckled in resignation.

One more day of waiting meant one more day of danger.

Earley was vicious and unpredictable. If he could hurt his own brother, he could also hurt his brother's children.

She could not risk the children's safety.

She could only expose Earley's true face without worry after she sent the kids away!

"I'm standing here as a living person, but you don't see me. It's an insult to my existence!"

Flint showed up from nowhere. He stood behind the five of them and spoke in a joking manner, dispelling the unhappy atmosphere.

The four children raised their heads and looked at him.

Alden and Melody were familiar with him, but George and Harold had not officially met him yet.

"Aren't you going abroad to have fun? Why do you look so dull?"

Flint bent down and carried the little girl. "Mel, do you still remember when you were little, I took you to see a meteor shower? Check this out. There will be another meteor shower tomorrow night, so we have to take this flight and go over now, or else, we won't be able to catch it."

Melody's eyes lit up. "I want to see the meteor shower!"

Harold's interest was also piqued. "I've never seen a meteor shower. Can I make a wish when I see the meteor shower?"

"Of course you can!" Flint reached out to carry Harold as well. "If you make a wish during the meteor shower, it'll come true."

"Wow, let's get on the plane and see that meteor shower," Harold urged.

George pursed his lips and said, "Don't worry, Mommy. I'll take good care of my brothers and Mel."

Alden was silent

His sixth sense told him that his mommy had to deal with something more important than the four of them.

It was definitely not work because work always ranked after them for her.

So, what was making his mother send the four of them abroad?

Could it be...

Alden looked down.

His dad and mom had looked really close in the morning, but he had noticed his mom's clenched fists.

In other words, his mommy had purposely acted as if she was in a loving relationship with his dad in front of them.

If his mommy had decided to divorce his dad, sending them away would be the only way to settle the matter smoothly.

After Alden figured it out, he felt relieved. He smiled obediently and said, "Mommy, we'll make a move first. We'll wait for you to come and pick us up." The four kids waved goodbye to Adina, and her tears almost fell.

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 638

Chapter 638 Ever since Alden and Mel were born, they had never left her even for a night

She had just been reunited with George and Harold for a short time, and they were being forced to separate again.

She used all her strength to suppress her tears before she looked at Flint and said, "Thank you so much for this. Once I take care of this, I'll repay you."

Flint waved casually. "Just call me if something comes up. I'm on call."

Adina watched him bring the children into the airport.

As soon as the kids disappeared past the boarding gate, her eyes unwittingly turned red. Tears filled her eyes and streamed down her cheeks.

She needed to send the kids away because she had run out of solutions.

She had called Flint for help because she truly could not find anyone else.

She did not know how to thank Flint, and she did not know what to do next either.

She had to be careful with each step.

Adina took a look at the time. That man should be in the company at this time.

She had to make a big fuss before the kids got off the plane.

Adina entered the restroom, took a basin of water, and directly poured it over her body.

She had not rested well for many days, and she was experiencing high psychological stress. Besides, she had suppressed her emotions for a long time. Therefore, she had a blocked nose only ten minutes after she drenched her clothes in water.

She felt dizzy. Without any need to pretend, she blacked out and fell in the restroom.

Thud! The

woman in the next cubicle was startled before she screamed in shock, "Someone, help! Someone fainted!"

In the Winters Corporation building, a transnational meeting was ongoing.

Earl sat in the CEO'S seat while his eyes were filled with impatience.

He was never professionally trained, and nobody had ever trained him since he was little, so he did not understand what the executives were reporting.

However, he needed to sit there patiently and listen to the company's business report.

The executives sitting there were trembling.

They used to think Mr. Winters was cold and not easy to deal with, but they realized that Mr. Winters had become even more indifferent now. He was like an evil asura that crawled out of hell.

His eyes were especially cold and filled with ruthlessness, as though he would get angry the moment anyone said something wrong.

Buzz!

Right then, Earl's phone vibrated on the desk.

He took a look at it and felt slightly surprised.

It was a call from that woman.

It was his first time receiving a call from Adina ever since he became Duke.

His mood improved quite a bit, and he picked up the call after he gestured for the rest to be silent.

"May I know if you're this lady's husband? She's been sent to Sea City General Hospital. Please come here as soon as possible."

Earl immediately stood up. "What's wrong with her?"

"She fainted from a fever. She's receiving an IV drip now, and we need a family member to sign her checkout."

Earl picked up his coat and walked out of the meeting room.

But Arden immediately ran after him. "Boss... Mr. Winters, the meeting is only halfway done."

"Listen to the report on my behalf. If there are any questions, contact me later." Earl entered the elevator without turning back.

Arden was speechless.

He was just a gangster, so he did not understand a thing. He should just record the reports and send them to Earl.

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 639

Chapter 639

The smell of disinfectant in the ward filled his nasal cavity, and he heard the dripping sounds of medicinal fluid.

Earl sat beside the hospital bed as he stared at the bedridden woman with a blank expression.

This morning, the spy he had placed in the Winters family's mansion called and told him that this woman had taken the kids to the airport.

Neither the children nor the woman deserved his attention, so he did not take them seriously.

Unexpectedly, he received another call saying that she was hospitalized.

Was she not supposed to be on the plane now? Why would she faint at the airport?

Where were the children? Did they board the plane?

Who took them abroad?

Earl touched his lips before he habitually took out a pack of cigarettes and lit one up. He frowned while he smoked.

He had always assumed that he had her fooled, but now, he realized that things were not as simple as he thought.

Otherwise, she would not have sent the children away.

“Cough!”

The unconscious bedridden woman suddenly coughed, and Earl subconsciously put out his cigarette.

Then, he chuckled in resignation.

When did he care about others when he smoked? But he actually controlled his smoking addiction because of this woman’s cough.

When he saw Adina’s eyelashes trembling aggressively, he quickly threw the cigarette butt into the trash can.

But the woman did not wake up.

Instead, her expression suddenly changed, and she struggled on the bed.

“Don’t... Don’t hurt my kids...”

“Give me back my babies ... Dew Daugherty, give me back my babies...”

“Georgie, Hal, I’m sorry. I couldn’t protect you...”

She would seem sad in one moment and she would go crazy or appear to be in pain in the next. She just curled into a small figure on the bed.

Earl’s heart suddenly tightened.

He remembered the information that he had previously looked up.

Five years ago, after this woman slept with a strange man, a reporter photographed her, and she became the biggest joke in Sea City

Then, she got pregnant, and the Daugherty family locked her up in their warehouse for eight months. She gave birth to four babies in the warehouse, but two of them were not breathing when they were born. They were even taken from her by force.

She had to bear the pain of losing her eldest sons while she tried her best to give birth to another son and a daughter.

She was just an ordinary woman, but the pain she endured was great

Earl pursed his lips and slowly held her cold fingers. "I'm here. Don't be scared. No one will snatch your kids again."

Adina gradually calmed down in bed.

Her breathing slowly stabilized, and her furrowed eyebrows loosened up.

Earl's phone suddenly vibrated. He picked up his phone and took a look at the caller ID before he prepared to step out and answer the call.

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 640

Chapter 640

He realized that he was still holding Adina's fingertips. At this time, the passive woman had become proactive, as she held his index finger.

He moved a little, and she held his finger more tightly.

The feeling of being needed and relied on made Earl feel happier than he ever felt before.

He sat by the bed, answered the call, and softly asked, "What's the matter?"

"Boss, we found that the young masters and lady were taken abroad by Flint, the young master of Morton Corporation. Their destination is the small town where the madam used to live for four years."

"Get a few people to follow them," Earl said coldly. "Keep an eye on them at all times."

As soon as he spoke, he felt the hand around his finger loosen.

When he looked down, he saw that the woman was staring at him with indifferent and emotionless eyes.

He suddenly felt guilty, so he raised his hand and hung up.

"Who were you... talking to on the phone?"

Adina spoke, and her voice was extremely hoarse. It sounded like she had squeezed the sentence out of her throat.

Earl pursed his lips uncomfortably. "It was a call from my assistant."

"Did you ask them to tail the kids?" Adina stared at him and slowly said, "Yes, I sent the kids away on purpose."

Earl narrowed his eyes, and they were full of vigilance. "Why?"

"Don't you know why I'm doing this?!" she yelled, her voice becoming hoarser. "It's only been a month since we got married, but you've had an affair. A marriage like that won't last long. Instead of arguing over custody of the children, why don't... I just hide them in advance? Yes, I'm a despicable person. Duke Winters, that's how despicable I am! I went through pain to give birth to the kids, so I won't let you take them!"

She immediately sat up and pulled the needle off the back of her hand.

Blood instantly burst out, and Earl's white shirt was stained in red.

He frowned and pinned her down. "Are you mad? When did I agree to a divorce? When did I try to compete for custody against you? Stop being paranoid!"

"You're just going to steal the kids from me!" Adina shook her head hastily, but her face was pale and weak. "Dew Daugherty wanted to steal George and Harold, but you're worse than her. You even want to snatch Mel and Alden from me. You married me because you wanted to have our four kids, right? Duke Winters, I'm telling you that unless you step over my dead body, I'll never give them to you!"

"Calm down!"

Earl was shocked when he saw the blood gushing out of the back of her hand.

Had this woman not always been very calm and aloof? Why would she lose her mind like this when it came to the kids?

"I'm just asking my people to secretly protect the kids. I'm not fighting against you for custody." Earl pressed her shoulders and said, "Lie down first. I'll ask the nurse to treat your wound."

“No, no!” Adina widened her eyes and shook her head hard. “You’re lying! You’re making a fool out of me! It’s just like how Dew Daugherty lied to me about George and Harold’s death. All of you are lying to me.”

She rolled down from the bed and tried to run out.

But Earl pulled her into his arms. “Addy, I’ve never thought about stealing the children from you. Tell me what to do so that you’ll believe me.”

“Call your assistant in front of me and tell him not to send anyone to follow the kids!” Adina grabbed his collar and slowly said, “If you dare to send anyone to follow the kids, I’ll die right in front of you this instant!”

Earl frowned.

He had asked Arden to get some people to follow the kids because he thought Adina had discovered his identity and wanted to hide the kids.

However, this woman had clearly sent the kids abroad because she was just afraid of a divorce and a fight for custody.

As long as his identity was not revealed, he could turn a blind eye to many things.

“Okay, I’ll call Arden.”

Earl compromised as he took out his phone and made the call.

Adina looked down slightly. Her jaw tightened as though she would not have lasted if things had dragged on a little longer.
