Camryn quietly listened to what Serenity said. She had a very good memory, so she remembered everything after Serenity said it once.

“Ms. Camryn, can you remember the route I told you about?” Serenity asked with concern.

Camryn replied warmly, “Thank you, Mrs. York. I can remember it.”

“Then, I’ll get going now.”

Serenity had to go up to the top floor to find Zachary. She would be taking a different elevator.

“Okay. I’ll walk slowly. Mr. Callum said I have to walk by myself and can’t let anyone lead me.” Serenity felt that her brother-in-law was courting death by causing trouble for Camryn. Camryn thought the same.

She did not know when she had offended Callum.

Callum wanted to make things difficult for her, so he threw a bait to lure her.

The business of her flower shop had been average lately. Except for that one day when someone came to her store to buy all the roses, there were usually not many people who bought flowers.

When Callum suggested that he would recommend the Marshalls buy flowers from her store to decorate the banquet site, Camryn was tempted.

The place the Marshalls were holding their banquet, Wiltspoon Hotel, was huge. The people on the guest list were all dignified bigshots in Wiltspoon’s business world, so a large amount of flowers and plants would be needed to decorate the venue.

If she could cinch that order, she would earn enough to make it through the month. She would be able to pay the wages of her two workers and still have some money left to spend.

That was why even when the conditions proposed by Callum were harsh for a blind person, Camryn agreed.

She often bumped into Callum when she went out in the morning, and he always had a way to provoke her into getting into his car and letting him send her to the store.

Camryn felt that Callum was not a bad person, but after receiving his request for her to personally send the flowers, she did not understand what he wanted to do. Was he trying to make things hard for her? Or was there another reason?

“I’ll go then. Take care. If you don’t remember the directions, then stop and ask someone. They’ll tell you where to go.”

Serenity went straight to Camryn the moment she got out of her car and talked to Camryn for a long time. Everyone else could see that Camryn was someone whom Mrs. York knew.

They would not dare neglect her.

Even if the two women did not know each other, the staff of York Corporation would still be kind to Camryn. If they treat visitors with a bad attitude, it would ruin York Corporation’s reputation. The company would not want such uncouth staff.

Serenity said a few more words to Camryn before leaving first.

When she entered the office building, she told the receptionist to show Camryn the way if the latter needed help.

After Serenity left, Camryn calmed down before going forward again.

She heard Serenity’s footsteps and remembered which direction to go. She closed the distance of hundred and fifty feet without issue and knew that she reached the entrance of the office building when her white cane touched the steps.

She walked very slowly as she went up the steps; it was the easiest place for her to trip.

Fortunately, there were not many steps at the entrance, and she finished climbing them without a hitch. As she stood at the entrance, she listened quietly again and heard footsteps walking toward her. She turned in another direction and determined the way forward.

“Hello, Ms. Newman.”

A receptionist came over and greeted Camryn with a smile.

“Hello.”

Camryn faced the receptionist, who was a little surprised to see her wearing sunglasses and holding a white cane like a blind person. However, the receptionist quickly snapped back to her senses.

It was no wonder Mrs. York told them to look after her.

It turns out that Ms. Newman was blind.

Why did the COO tell a blind person to send him flowers?

The receptionist scolded Callum in her heart but a smile remained on her face. She said to Camryn, "How may I help you, Ms. Newman?"

"I'm fine, thank you."

Camryn remembered the distance between the entrance to the elevator. There was no need to bother the receptionist.

"Very well. Please approach us if you need any help, Ms. Newman." The receptionist said with a smile. She watched Camryn hold the bouquet of flowers and slowly walk forward while scanning with her cane. She waited until Camryn was far away before returning to her post.

Then, she said to her colleague, "How could the COO ask for a blind woman to send him flowers?"

"Could he be interested in Ms. Newman? We've been working in the company for two years, but we haven't seen him interested in any woman before. No young woman has ever come to the company looking for him either."

The receptionist laughed. "I don't think so. Maybe he doesn't know that Ms. Newman is blind."

The COO was the second young master of the York family. How could someone of his noble status be interested in a blind woman?

However, that was his business. It had nothing to do with them.

There was no one in the elevator when Camryn entered it.

She fumbled around and touched the numbered buttons, feeling with her fingers for a while before confirming that this elevator was not able to go straight to the sixty-sixth floor. She pressed the last number instead.

When the elevator took her to her floor, she quickly stepped out.

Several people who wanted to ride the elevator happened to be there.

Camryn asked them which elevator to take in order to reach the sixty-sixth floor directly.

When the person saw that Camryn was facing another direction and holding a walking cane while talking to him, he guessed that she was blind. He could not help but wave his hand in front of her eyes. When Camryn did not respond, he confirmed that she could not see.

“Follow me. I’ll take you there,” the man said kindly.

Camryn turned around when she heard the man’s voice. She faced him and followed him forward.

The man led her to another elevator and pressed the open button for her. When she entered, he said to the people inside, “This lady wants to go to the sixty-sixth floor. She can’t see.”

Then, someone helped Camryn press the button for the sixty-sixth floor and said, “Do you need me to take you to the sixty-sixth floor?”

“Thank you. Does this elevator go straight to the sixty-sixth floor?”

“Yes. The highest it can go to is the sixty-seventh floor.”

Camryn hummed, thanked the man again, and politely refused to be accompanied by him. She was afraid that Callum would be unhappy if he saw someone take her upstairs and refuse to introduce her business to the Marshall family.

As the elevator went up, the people inside went out one after another.

Soon, Camryn was the only one left in the elevator.

She listened to the movement around her quietly. After making sure that there was no one around, she guessed that she was the only one going to the sixty-sixth floor. That meant she could exit the next time the elevator door opened.

The door opened again in less than two minutes.

Camryn quickly went out.

Remembering, what Serenity told her, she walked slowly after she got out of the elevator.

“Hello, who are you?”

She stopped when she heard a gentle male voice.

"I'm from the florist. Mr. Callum York called my store and asked me to send him a bouquet of flowers."

Camryn explained the purpose of her visit and her identity.

Callum's secretary looked at the bouquet Camryn was holding and said warmly, "Please wait a moment. I'll call and ask Mr. Callum."

The secretary had not received the news, so he had to ask Callum for confirmation before. he could let Camryn in to see him.

"Of course."

Camryn stood there quietly, waiting for the secretary to use the intercom to confirm with Callum.

Soon, he walked up to her and said warmly, "Please come with me."

"Thank you."

Camryn thanked the secretary as she followed him.

When they came to his office, the secretary knocked on the door and went in first to announce that Camryn had arrived.

"Let her in."

Callum was still busy, so he responded in a deep voice without raising his head.

The secretary invited Camryn to enter the office before retreating.

Camryn listened attentively to which direction Callum's voice resounded from when he talked to the secretary.

She walked straight in that direction after entering the office.

When she encountered something along the way, she avoided it. Although she walked very slowly, she managed to make her way to Callum's desk.

The reason she was sure she reached his desk was that her walking stick poked Callum's foot under the desk. She hurriedly retracted the cane.

Callum only looked up when his foot was poked by her cane.

“Why are you so late? I was just about to leave work.”

Callum complained about Camryn’s tardiness the moment he opened his mouth.

Camryn fumbled and leaned the white cane against his desk, then handed the bouquet to Callum and said apologetically, “I can’t see, so I walk slower than normal. That’s why I’m late. This is the bouquet you asked for on the phone.”

“Tell me. How did you come here?”

Callum took the flowers and casually placed them on the table. He did not like flowers. He was just looking for an excuse for Camryn to come over.

“I had one of my assistants drive me to the entrance of the office building, then I walked myself in.”

“No one led you here?”

“No, I only asked how to get to your office from the entrance.”

Callum hummed and looked at her for a moment before saying gently, “Have a seat.”

Huh?

Camryn was a little stunned. She thought Callum would let her go back after she delivered the bouquet and received the payment from him.

“Since you’re here, sit down for some water.”

Callum got up as he spoke and walked around the desk to pour a cup of warm water for Camryn.

Camryn felt around for a chair and carefully sat down. She hurriedly thanked Callum when he handed her a cup of warm water.

“If I tell you not to let your assistant drive you here, can you take a car to my company?” Callum asked as he returned to his seat.

Camryn paused before saying, “Is there a bus that stops in front of your company?”

“There are several buses that pass by the entrance of my company.”

“If someone can send me to the bus stop, I can reach your company without needing my assistant to drop me off.”

After staring at her for another moment, Callum pursed his lips and said, "Try coming by yourself next time. Tell your employee to stop Bus No. 6 for you. That one can reach my company."

Camryn was silent for a moment before asking, "Mr. York, did I offend you somehow?"

"No. We've only met a few times. How could you have offended me?"

Even if she had offended him, he would be tolerant. After all, they would spend the rest of their lives together.

He would not hold it against her.

"If I haven't offended you, why did you want me to personally send the flowers over? You also wanted me to come here by myself and not let others lead me."

Callum said, "You'll be coming here often in the future. I hope you can remember the route you need to take to reach me. Once you're familiar, it's easier for you to come over."

Camryn was speechless.

Why would she come to see him?

Plus, why did he say she would come here often?

"Some of the potted plants in our company have died. Maybe they died of radiation because there are too many computers. I want to help everyone change their potted plants.

Callum stopped to look at her.

Camryn thought, 'What a great business opportunity!'

"Okay, I'll take the bus myself next time I come over. I know where to go after reaching the building entrance since I remember the route. I'll come quicker next time. I won't keep you waiting."

"Mr. York, if your company wants to change your potted flowers, you can come to Spring Blossoms. Our store has many potted plants suitable for the office."

Callum smiled and said, "Sure. Send over all green potted plants suitable for the office. tomorrow. We want as many as you have. Size doesn't matter. There's a small park in front of the office building. You can place them there."

Camryn responded, "Okay.

'Mr. York...

"Call me Callum. Mr. York sounds awkward."

Camryn was a little taken aback, but she soon smiled faintly and uttered, "Mr. Callum."

It would not sound as awkward if she used his first name, right?

Callum thought about how they had only known each other for a short amount of time. She would find it inappropriate to just address him by his name, so he did not say more and acquiesced to her adding a Mr to his name.

"Mr. Callum, about the Marshall family..."

Callum said, "Since you sent the bouquet over as I requested, I'll keep my promise. I'll call the hotel manager later and have him send someone to buy flowers from your store."

The Marshall family told the hotel to set up the venue on their own. They informed the hotel what they wanted, and the staff would set up the place according to their requests. The staff guaranteed that the banquet would be grand and magnificent.

"Thank you, Mr. Callum."

Camryn was happy. She felt that the trip made today was not in vain.

She was able to receive two large orders.

Seeing her good mood, Callum was happy too.

"If there's nothing else, I'll be going now, Mr. Callum. I won't disturb your work."

Camryn felt for her white cane and held it before standing up to leave. However, she did not forget to remind Callum, "Mr. Callum, you haven't given me the money for the flowers."

Callum did not withhold the payment from her and pulled out two hundred dollars from his wallet to hand to her.

He told her to wrap a bouquet worth two hundred dollars for him.

After receiving the money, Camryn placed the cash into her trouser pocket and once again turned to leave.

Callum picked up the bouquet of flowers, walked around the desk, and stuffed it into Camryn's hands. "This is for you. Let's go out together. It's time for dinner, so I'll treat you."

Camryn was dumbfounded by his actions.

He called and told her to personally send over a bouquet of flowers, which she did. She thought he was giving the bouquet to a girl he fancied. She did not expect him to give it to her so casually.

The money for the flowers went into her pocket, and the bouquet returned to her hands too.

"Mr. Callum?" Camryn called out in bewilderment.

"I don't like flowers, and I don't have a girlfriend. Telling you to send a bouquet over was just a way for you to get yourself acquainted with the route to come see me. That way, it'll be easier for you in the future."

Callum explained with a smile, "But your silly look is quite funny. Since you amused me, I'll treat you to dinner. Let's go."

Camryn scolded him in her heart, 'You're the fool!'

He did not play by the rules. She was completely flabbergasted by him.

On the surface, Camryn recovered her calm demeanor and followed Callum out while declining his invitation to dinner.

"You'll just order takeout if you go back anyway. It's not good to eat takeouts often. If you don't want me to treat you, then you treat me instead. I gave you two big business opportunities, so it's natural you treat me to a meal."

Camryn choked. After a moment, she said, "I only have a few hundred dollars with me. I might not be able to treat you, Mr. Callum."

He was from the York family and usually ate at Wiltspoon Hotel. Wiltspoon Hotel belonged to his family, so it was only natural for him to eat there.

She had been there before. It was for a dinner before she went blind and she was aware that a meal there would cost at least several hundred dollars.

“It’s fine. I can lend you the money to treat me.”

Camryn was speechless.

Callum turned to look at her stunned expression and grinned. “Your choice. Is it your treat or mine?”

Either way, he wanted her to accompany him to dinner.

If they got used to each other earlier, they would get along better later.

He could also learn what food she liked.

“Actually, there’s no need to order too much food since it’s just the two of us. A main and several side dishes would be enough. It’s not like everything on the menu in Wiltspoon. Hotel is expensive. There are affordable choices too.”

At those words, Camryn gritted her teeth and said, “It’ll be my treat, Mr. Callum, as thanks. for giving me two big business deals.”

“Sure.”

The money she would be paying for the meal was the money he gave her anyway, so he did not mind.

They would be husband and wife in the future, and there was no need for a family to draw such clear divides. His belongings were hers, and hers were his; they were each other’s.

Callum took Camryn to the elevator and went to the first floor.

There, he met his brother and sister-in-law.

“Callum and Ms. Newman,” Serenity greeted them with a smile.

She thought Camryn had left. She did not expect her to come down with Callum.

Callum was tall and handsome, and Camryn looked petite and delicate standing beside them. As Serenity saw them walking together, she felt that they looked like a good match. “Serenity.”

“Mrs. York.”

Callum greeted Serenity back.

On the other hand, Camryn addressed Serenity politely. Callum looked at her and wanted to correct her form of address, but he remembered that she was not his wife yet. Thus, she could not call Serenity so familiarly.

He had always treated her as his wife and was practicing how to be a good husband to her, but she treated him like a stranger.

The person who caused this situation was his darling and respectable nana!

Callum remembered that his nana followed Kevin to Jensburg and felt that he was better off than Kevin. Although Camryn had not regained her sight yet and faced many inconveniences in her daily life, at least she was right under his watch. On the other hand, Kevin had to take a flight in order to meet Mr–No, Ms. Queen.

His nana still loved him more.

“Zachary,” Callum greeted.

Zachary glanced at Camryn and the bouquet of flowers she was holding, then his eyes returned to his younger brother. He sighed faintly, hugged Serenity’s waist, and said, “We’re leaving now.”

Without waiting for Callum to reply, he left with Serenity in his arms.

Serenity turned to look back as she walked.

Zachary used his hand to push her face forward and said in a low voice, “I’m more handsome than Callum.”

“I’m not looking at Callum; I’m looking at Camryn. Wait, why do you sound jealous?”

“You’re looking at another man. Even if he’s my brother, I’ll still get jealous.”

Serenity was speechless. “If we have a son in the future and I treat our son well, will you be jealous of him too?”

“I won’t get jealous if we have a daughter.”

“I also want to have a daughter and break your family’s record. Who knows if I’ll have the chance? I’d better prepare for a son. If you’re going to be jealous of your own son, then I hope you’re prepared to be jealous for the rest of your life.”

Zachary’s expression turned sullen. He seemed very unhappy.

He thought, ‘If we have a baby in the future, and that baby turns out to be a boy, he’ll take away my wife’s attention. Maybe Seren will treat the baby better than she treats me. Should we use birth control for now? I still want to spend time alone with her.’

“I told Josh to help me find out if there’s a fortune teller to divine the fate of our family. Maybe there’s something preventing the York family from having girls.”

Zachary still very much wanted a daughter.

That was not only his wish, but also the wish of the York family for several generations.

“Did you find one?”

“Not yet. Real diviners are hard to invite even if we can find them, but I’ll find one and ask for their help no matter how much money I have to spend. Let’s see if our generation can conceive a girl.”

Serenity said, “I heard that fate is also important. If the diviner doesn’t want to come, then we can’t force them. Ask Nana if she knows any fortune tellers.”

The couple chatted as they walked out of the office building and toward Zachary’s car.

The bodyguards brought the car that Serenity drove over back.

After getting into the car, Zachary said, “I heard she called a fortune teller over once to Whitmore Mansion, the place where we spent our New Year. She also invited him to Wildridge Manor when it was first built.

“But she said the diviner was already in his seventies when she invited him to Wildridge Manor. I guess he must have already passed by now.”

Wildridge Manor was built decades ago.

Serenity sighed.

She liked to listen to pseudoscience. Although she did not understand, it was quite interesting.

Even though she was slightly afraid of the paranormal, she still liked to hear about it.

“We’ll just have to take our time to look for one.”

Serenity said, “At most, we can try again for a girl the second time.”

Zachary’s palm covered her flat belly for a moment before he retracted his hand. He said enviously, “If only we could be like Remy’s brother and sister-in-law. His sisters-in-law both had twins for their first pregnancies. His second sister-in-law had identical twins, and his oldest sister-in-law is almost due too.”

Serenity laughed. “Having one son is enough to make you jealous. It’ll be worse if we have twin boys.”

Zachary was speechless.

He was hoping they could have fraternal twins, or a pair of identical girls instead.

The York family had more boys than the Johnson family in Annenburg. Zachary secretly vowed to find a particularly powerful fortune teller to do a divination for their family. Was there a problem that caused their family to be unable to conceive girls?

“Babe, what do you think of Callum and Camryn now? I think Callum is courting death.”

Serenity changed the topic.

She did not want her husband to keep bringing up the mention of having a baby girl and stress her out.

“They’re a good match. It’d be better if Ms. Newman regained her sight. What do you mean Callum is courting death?”

Zachary still did not know what his brother had done.

Serenity told him, “He called the flower shop and told Camryn to send him a bouquet of flowers. And he told her not to let anyone lead her and asked her to walk by herself. He’s not considerate at all of the fact that Camryn can’t see.

“Isn’t that courting death? I bet he’ll regret his decision every day in the future.”

Zachary felt a flush rose to his cheeks at the mention of regretting one’s decisions as he too did many things he had come to regret.

“It’s his funeral. He doesn’t know how to learn from the example I set for him, I won’t entertain him if he comes to us for help in the future.”

Serenity looked at him and grinned.

Zachary knew what she was smiling at and felt a little annoyed and embarrassed. He pressed her into his arms, pinned her head, and leaned down to seal her mouth so she could not laugh at him again.

Callum guessed that his brother and sister-in-law were talking about him, but he did not care.

When they first got married, Callum and his brothers avidly discussed the couple. Everyone wondered if Zachary would be conquered by Serenity.

What Callum regretted the most was that he did not make a bet with his brothers. If he did, he would have won.

He bet Zachary would fall in love.

However, it seemed like all his other brothers also thought Zachary would be conquered by Serenity.

Alas, his oldest brother was not tough enough. If he was, he would be able to go eight to ten years without falling in love with Serenity... However, Zachary succumbed in less than half a year!

Callum walked out of the office building with Camryn under the gaze of countless employees.

Camryn could feel the numerous eyes on her. Fortunately, she remained focused and calmly followed Callum.

“Mr. Callum, my shop assistant is still waiting for me outside. I’ll go out and tell her to go back to the store first. Why don’t we meet in front of the building?”

Camryn could not see everyone’s expressions, but she could imagine what she looked like following Callum with a bouquet of flowers in her arms. The scene could be easily misunderstood.

“It’s dinner now, and there are too many people around. You’ll bump into people easily since you can’t see. We’ll leave in my car, and I’ll stop for you to talk to your assistant. Isn’t that much more convenient than you walking out by yourself?”

Camryn fell silent.

She did not want to leave in Callum's car.

After thinking about it, she realized that she would be treating Callum to dinner. She still had to sit in his car after leaving the company.

Thus, Camryn calmed down.

A few minutes later, Callum saw a girl on a motorcycle staring at the people leaving and entering the building. He guessed the girl was Camryn's assistant and stopped the car as he reached her.

He lowered the window and asked, "Are you the girl working in Spring Blossoms?"

"Yes, who—Boss."

The girl saw Camryn sitting in the passenger seat.

"You head back to the store first. I'm buying Mr. York dinner."

Camryn told the girl to go back to the store first when she heard the latter's voice. There was no need for her to continue waiting here.

The girl was aware that Camryn was sending the flowers over in order to get a large business order. Since Camryn said that she was treating Callum to dinner, it meant that she had successfully gotten the order. She must be treating him to dinner as repayment.

The girl did not think much about it and rode back to the store when Callum drove the car away.

Ten minutes later, they arrived at Wiltspoon Hotel.

Callum booked a private room.

After the two sat down at the table, he turned his head to look at the waiter, who immediately handed him the menu.

The waiter thought in confusion, 'Mr. Callum eats here every day. Why does he need the menu?'

Callum did not care what the waiter was thinking. He opened the menu, read the names of the dishes and the prices to Camryn, and let her order.

“You can order whatever you want, Mr. Callum.”

The meal was Camryn’s treat, so she told him to order what he wanted.

“You only brought a few hundred dollars. I’m worried the food I order will be too expensive.” Camryn was silent before saying, “Didn’t you say you could lend me the money?”

Callum laughed. “I did say that, but you look like you don’t want to owe me money. We’ll just order some cheaper dishes.”

Camryn did not object as she listened to him listing off a few dishes that were not too expensive.

The waiter took down the orders and said respectfully, “Please wait a moment.”

Callum said, “There’s no need to rush. I don’t have plans later, so it doesn’t matter if the food comes out slow.”

Camryn spat in her heart, ‘You’re not in a rush, but I am.’

However, she was the host now and could not say such a thing.

After the waiter left, Callum asked, “How has business been recently?”

“Competition is tough. Where do you get your goods from?”

Camryn asked, “Why are you asking all this, Mr. Callum? Do you want to open a flower shop?”

“I was thinking of helping you find a cheaper supplier so you can make a greater profit.”

“Thank you, but I’ve been working with my supplier for years, and he has always given me the best prices.” The supplier gave her the best price after finding out that she was blind.

They worked together well for many years, so Camryn had no intention of changing her supplier.

Furthermore, she would owe Callum a favor if she accepted his offer.

He gave her two large orders, and she was repaying the favor by treating him to a meal. She did not want to owe him another after just returning one.

Most importantly, she was not close to him.

Even now, she still had not figured out what Callum wanted with her.

She was only the eldest daughter of the Newman family in name. Everyone knew she was even worse off than a servant. There was no merit in Callum approaching her.

With his status, he did not need to use her to achieve some kind of goal, right?

“That’s good.”

Callum thought of asking the housekeeper in charge of the flowers and plants in the manor to deliver them to her and charge her only a small amount. However, he felt that she would definitely refuse. Since she wanted to remain the same supplier, he did not push it.

“Mr. Callum, may I ask you a question?”

“Sure.”

“Why do you want to help me?”

Callum smiled. “Have a guess.”

Camryn said honestly, “I can’t.”

“If you can’t guess, then that’s fine. In any case, I won’t harm you.”

Camryn was silent for a moment and said, “But I don’t want to owe you a favor.”

They were not related to one another in any way. He was definitely after something by helping her, but he refused to say, and she could not guess.

Camryn did not like this feeling of being in the palm of his hands.

Most of the readers are now reading this novels:-

Callum did not speak.

Camryn remained silent when she did not get an answer.

She could feel Callum's gaze on her.

After a while, the waiter served the food.

"Let's eat."

Callum finally opened his mouth but did not answer Camryn.

Camryn could not see, so he filled her bowl with soup and placed it in front of her. "Have some soup first. I'll serve you the other dishes when you're done."

"Thank you, Mr. Callum."

"You're welcome."

Callum also served himself a bowl of soup and ate while occasionally putting more food on Camryn's plate.

Camryn usually ordered fast food where all the side dishes were placed together, so she could just eat slowly.

Now that she was eating with Callum, she did not know where the food was. Even when she reached out to stab the food with her fork, she did not know what she would be eating.

She could only accept Callum's care.

If it could be avoided, she never wanted to eat with Callum again in her life.

"Do you like shrimp?" Callum asked as he finished the soup and placed the bowl down. Without waiting for her answer, he put on a pair of disposable gloves, grabbed a few shrimps to peel off the shells, and dipped them into the sauce before placing them on Camryn's plate.

"I deshelled the shrimp and dipped them in the sauce for you. You can eat them straight."

If Grandma May were here to see Callum's actions, she would praise him for being thoughtful. He was much better than Zachary was in the past.

Back then, Zachary still needed Grandma May to hint at him. He was proud and unwilling to admit that he cared about Serenity, so he used Sonny as an excuse. Grandma May wanted to kick him.

"Thank you, Mr. Callum."

Camryn expressed her gratitude.

She used to eat shrimp with shells on without the dipping sauce because it was inconvenient.

However, she usually did not eat seafood at home. They would not give her the chance to.

All they gave her was plain pasta. If her stepfather was home, she would get a few meatballs.

Her mother said that she was blind and could not see the food she was eating, so it was good enough that she had pasta to eat. At least she would not starve to death.

Callum was much nicer to her than her family.

Camryn was grateful for his thoughtfulness, but she wondered why he was doing this. It could not be because he fancied her, right?

Before she lost her sight, she knew she was very good-looking. Her stepfather said that she took after both her parents' best features. She looked like her father and mother at the same time.

Carrie was extremely jealous of her good looks.

However, with Callum's status, he should have seen all kinds of beautiful women out there. How could he fancy a blind person like her?

Even if... Even if he fancied her now, it was short-lived. It was just for the novelty.

At that thought, Camryn told herself, 'Don't get captivated by Callum's momentary thoughtfulness. He will never marry a blind person. He's just in it for the novelty.'

Callum did not know that Camryn had built up a wall in her heart to keep him out and make his road to court her even more arduous.

After he peeled the shrimp for her, he gave her a drumstick and a fish filet. "I'm a gentleman. I'm not doing this as a favor to you. I'm taking care of you because this was how I was raised. You don't need to feel indebted to me."

Camryn smiled faintly. "Thank you, Mr. Callum. Am I really not in your debt if you do this for me?"

"You're not."

"I'm relieved."

If he told her that she was indebted to him and asked her to buy him another meal, she would have words with him.

The two enjoyed their meal.

When it was time to bill, it was naturally Camryn who paid since it was her treat. "I'll send you back to your shop, Ms. Newman."

Callum took Camryn out of the hotel and said he would send her back to the flower shop.

"Thank you, but there's no need. You can just help me stop a bus that will pass by my shop."

Callum thought of how she would have to come out often and take the bus by herself, so he said, "All right. I'll take you to the bus stop."

"Thank you."

Camryn thanked him again.

Since she met him, the words she said most often to him were 'thank you'.

Fortunately, Bus No. 6 was arriving just as they walked to the stop. Callum helped Camryn hail the bus and watched her board before turning around to head back to the hotel.

He met his loving brother and sister-in-law in the small parking lot in front of the hotel again.

"Callum, where's Ms. Newman?" Serenity asked right off the bat when she only saw him. without Camryn.

She knew that Callum and Camryn ate together

"She went back."

Callum stopped to answer Serenity and asked Zachary, "Are you sending Serenity back?"

"Yeah," Zachary answered faintly.

Serenity admonished Callum. "Ms. Newman can't see. It's not convenient for her to travel. Why didn't you send her to her store and let her take the bus back by herself?"

"I walked her to the bus station. She said she didn't need me to send her back."

Serenity and Zachary were speechless.

Camryn said she did not need him to send her back, and he actually did just that. Was he not worried that something would happen to her on the way back?

Callum guessed his brother and sister-in-law's thoughts and said, "Camryn can't see, but she can move freely if she's familiar with her environment. Once she's used to the route from Spring Blossoms to our office, she can come to find me anytime she misses me."

Serenity was at a loss for words.

Zachary laughed snidely and mocked his brother, "You might miss her, but she won't miss you."

Camryn had no idea that Callum was approaching her to try to cultivate their feelings.

Callum was already treating Camryn as his wife but in Camryn's heart, Callum was nothing at all.

"That's fine. If I miss her but don't have time to find her, I can just tell her to send over a bouquet of flowers so I can see her—like what I did earlier."

Zachary and Serenity were speechless.

"Well, whatever floats your boat."

Zachary pulled his wife to the car. He could not be bothered with Callum's private affairs.

Callum was the one chasing after his wife now, not him. All he had to do was wait to be invited to the wedding. He was just not too sure whether the wedding could be held in a year's time.

The time limit that Grandma May set for his cousins was one year.

Zachary felt like he drew the short end of the stick.

His nana did not give him time to woo his wife and made him marry Serenity immediately.

Of course, now that the couple was in love, Zachary had no complaints for his nana.

“Babe, let’s go to Spring Blossoms.”

Callum was not worried about Camryn, but Serenity did. She wanted to go over and see if Camryn returned to the shop safely.

“I want to buy some flowers for you,” Serenity added.

Zachary said indulgently, “Even if you don’t buy flowers for me, I’ll accompany you wherever you want to go.”

Serenity gave him a quick kiss and smiled. “I’m serious about buying you flowers, but if you don’t want it, then...”
