Chapter 1557

Camryn was the wife that Grandma May chose for Callum, so Rosella paid more attention to the Newman family. She was a bit curious about the reason for the sudden visit of Camryn's two aunts.

By the time Camryn's aunts came in, Rosella had already finished her breakfast.

She sat on the sofa in the hall, flipping through a fashion magazine.

Mason personally led the two ladies in..

"Madam, Mrs. Chandler and Mrs. Joyner are here."

Rosella hummed and closed the magazine before placing it on the coffee table. She stood up and looked at the two with a smile.

"Mrs. York."

Although the two Newman sisters mingle in the circle of wealthy ladies from time to time, they were unable to enter the circle of real noblewomen. They could not squeeze into the circle the ladies of the Yorks belonged to.

The sisters came over today without saying anything but were made to wait outside the manor for several hours.

They came too early. They thought Rosella was like them who had to get up early to prepare breakfast for the family.

Unexpectedly, Rosella had just woken up.

They waited for several hours in vain.

"Please have a seat."

Rosella looked at the siblings and wondered which one was the older one.

Brenda pulled her younger sister over and introduced herself first. "Mrs. York, I'm Camryn's eldest aunt. My husband's last name is Chandler. This is my sister. Her husband's last name is Joyner."

Rosella smiled and waited for their introduction before asking them to sit.

Then, she ordered the maid to serve tea, snacks, and fruit.

After everyone exchanged a few courtesy greetings, Amy tugged on the hem of her elder sister's shirt.

Brenda understood the gesture and smiled at Rosella, saying, "Mrs. York, we apologize for the unannounced visit today, but there's something we would like to mention to you."

Rosella maintained her smile. In the sisters' eyes, her smile was truly graceful and noble.

"Please speak, Mrs. Chandler."

Brenda thought of Camryn gaining Callum's fancy and went mad with jealousy. How could a blind person obtain the favor of the second young master of the York family?

Her daughter was just not as pretty as Camryn, but she was better in everything else.

However, she could not even meet Callum.

The main point was that Camryn was not on their side. Camryn had Abel's blood, who was closest to Evelyn. Brenda and Amy did not help Camryn when she had a bad childhood.

There was no affection between the aunts and their niece.

Since they were on different sides, they could not let Camryn climb over them.

If Camryn did not have Callum's backing, how would a blind person like her be able to compete with them over the Newman family property?

At that thought, Brenda did not beat around the bush but stated her purpose directly.

"The thing is, Mrs. York, I saw that my niece, Camryn, is obsessed with your eldest son. He's not some nobody, is he? My niece is too ambitious. She's just a blind girl. How can she be worthy of Mr. York?"

"As her aunts, we've tried to persuade her before, but she refused to listen. She's intent on using your son to elevate her status. Thus, we decided to be the baddies and talk to you to prevent that girl from falling deeper.

"Mrs. York, everyone knows about Camryn's condition. She's not a bad girl, but she's blind. How is she worthy of Mr. York?"

Amy echoed, "Yes, our Camryn is not worthy of Mr. York. I believe your family would not be able to accept that she's blind too. She even sued her own mother. She's lacking in virtue and isn't good enough for Mr. York."

It seemed that that was their purpose.

Rosella understood what the women came here for today.

They could not stand to see Callum treating Camryn well, so they came here to wreak havoc and ruin Camryn's reputation in front of her. They wanted to use her to break up Callum and Camryn.

Were they really Camryn's biological aunts?

They could not stand to see Camryn doing well.

"Is that how you feel about your niece and Callum?"

The smile slipped from Rosella's face.

"Do you think Camryn is unworthy of Callum? Do you think she lacks virtue? I heard about her suing her own mother. If her biological father truly did die at her mother's hand, then she did the right thing by choosing justice over family.

"I think that as her aunts, you should take her side instead. After all, her father is your brother. You all have the same parents, right?"

Brenda and Amy were speechless.

"Or do you think your sister-in-law killed your brother because he deserved to die? I haven't heard of the late Mr. Newman committing any heinous crime that warranted death.

"Besides, as children, can you really do nothing if you find out that your father died at the hands of your mother? Would you let your father die in vain? Although it's difficult to place righteousness over family, if someone is able to do it, anyone with a conscience should support that person. Everyone is equal before the law."

The two ladies were wordless.

After a long time, Brenda said, “Yes, Camryn put righteousness over her family, but putting that aside, she can’t see. She’s not worthy of Mr. York. We imposed on you today because we want to save our niece.”

Amy said, “That girl is very single-minded when it comes to relationships. Once she falls in love with someone, she’ll love them for the rest of her life. If it were anyone else, we wouldn’t worry and try to be the villains.”

In the end, they just could not stand to see Callum and Camryn being together.

Their words were disparaging Camryn for being unworthy of Callum.

However, how many ladies in Wiltspoon were really worthy of the York family?

It was enough as long as the York family did not dislike the lady.

Rosella said faintly, “I understand what you mean. You just think that your niece is not good enough for my Callum, right?”

“Yes, Camryn is not worthy of Mr. York,” Brenda said honestly.

Amy echoed, “Our Camryn isn’t bad, but she can’t see. She’s blind. Even ordinary people would dislike her because of that, let alone Mr. York.”

“Can’t her eyes just be cured? Is there no chance of her regaining her sight?”

The two women choked.

They did not know if Camryn could regain her sight. They only knew that Evelyn had been trying to help Camryn treat her eyes. For ten years, she took Camryn all over the country to various hospitals. Whenever she heard of a good ophthalmologist, she would take Camryn to see them.

However, even after ten years, Camryn was still blind.

Amy said, “Camryn has been blind for ten years and has seen countless eye specialists, but she still can’t see. I think it’s difficult for her to regain her sight.”

After a moment of silence, Rosella said, “The York family has always been open-minded. The elders won’t meddle in the relationships of the younger ones. If Callum likes Camryn, that’s his business. All I have to do is wait to become a mother-in-law.

“It doesn’t matter if Camryn can’t see. It’s not like she needs to do anything after marrying into the York family. She just needs to be a good wife and be able to spend money.”

Brenda and Amy were rendered speechless.

Chapter 1559

After Rosella finished speaking, she looked at Brenda and Amy.

The Newman sisters did not know what to say.

No matter how dumb they were, they could tell that Rosella did not disdain Camryn’s blindness.

They also heard that the elders of the York family were very open–minded, but they did not expect it to this extent. Callum was an excellent man, but not even his mother minded that he liked a blind woman.

Mothers–in–law from rich families were supposedly difficult to get along with.

“Is there anything else you wish to say, Mrs. Chandler and Mrs. Joyner?”

Rosella added politely, “If there’s nothing more, I won’t keep you any longer. I have to go out.”

It was an expulsion order.

Brenda quickly said, “We don’t need anything else. Since you don’t disdain Camryn for her blindness, we won’t meddle anymore. Sorry for bothering you, Mrs. York.”

Then, she got up and motioned for Amy to stand.

The sisters said goodbye to Rosella and walked out of the magnificent hall under Mason’s lead.

Rosella waited until they left before her expression sank.

Not long after, Mason entered.

“Tell the security that there’s no need to inform me if Mrs. Chandler and Mrs. Joyner come again. I don’t want to see them.”

Mason answered respectfully.

“Has Callum not come home?”

“Not yet, but the other young masters are coming back one after another.”

Rosella hummed and picked up the magazine. She flipped through a few pages before tossing it back to the coffee table, then took out her phone and called Callum.

Mason saw her on the phone and silently withdrew.

Callum quickly answered his mother’s call.

“Mom.”

He was quite surprised.

His parents rarely called him. They did not care about him unless something important happened.

“Zack and the others have already returned to the manor. Aren’t you coming back?”

“I won’t be back for a while. Did something happen?”

After a moment of silence, Rosella said, “It’s nothing. It’s the holidays and all your brothers are back to get together. They learned from Mason that you weren’t back yet, so I called to ask what’s keeping you busy.”

“I’m busy chasing your daughter-in-law.”

Rosella laughed and said, “If you fail to catch my daughter-in-law, don’t tell anyone that you’re my son. It’ll be too embarrassing.”

Callum was speechless.

“I met two individuals earlier.”

Callum asked, “Were they Camryn’s aunts?”

“How did you know?”

Chapter 1560

Callum said, "Lucky guess. Her eldest and second aunts went to her house last night to make a stink, and Camryn ordered the bodyguards to drive them out. I was with Camryn then. They told me to my face not to be with Camryn, saying that she was blind.

"I'm not surprised at all that they went to the manor to find you. What did they say to you, Mom?"

"In a nutshell, they just said that Camryn is unworthy of you. They said that not only was she blind, but she also sued her mother and harmed her stepfather. They also called her an ungrateful wench with no morals. They hoped I would stop you two from being together."

Callum guessed that Camryn's aunts would go to the manor. However, his expression still grew dark when he heard his mother's words.

Not even he could bear to scold Camryn.

However, her aunts kept scolding her, calling her blind left, right, and center.

The next time he were to see them, he would not be a gentleman anymore. He would just tell the bodyguards to kick them out!

Callum asked his mother, "How did you refute them?"

He did not think that his mother would listen to the two women.

Rosella said, "I told them that we're very open-minded parents. As long as you like Camryn, your dad and I won't intervene in your emotional affairs. I also said there's nothing wrong with Camryn being blind.

"She doesn't need to do anything after marrying into our family. All she needs to do is spend money."

Callum laughed.

"You're awesome, Mom!"

Rosella snorted. "Although you haven't succeeded in wooing your wife, you're trying to pursue her. Camryn will be my daughter-in-law sooner or later. If I don't disdain her, how can they have the right to? They're her biological aunts, but they can't stand to see her doing well. Camryn is better off without them."

"Camryn has three aunts, and only her youngest aunt, Evelyn, had a good relationship with her father. Evelyn cares about Camryn. On the other hand, her two older aunts are on the same side as her uncle. They want to go back to their maiden home to compete for the property. They just can't stand to see Camryn doing well."

"They want to come home to fight for the property? Who does the Newman family property belong to now? If it's still under the names of Camryn's grandparents, then her aunts might be able to win over some shares."

Callum replied, "Camryn said that the Newman family villa was left to her by her father. The company should also have been taken over by her father, but it fell into the hands of Mr. Newman after her father was killed. Now that I think about it, most of the Newman property should be under Mr. Newman now."

"Mr. and Mrs. Newman got married when Camryn was just two years old. Even if they greatly disliked Camryn, she grew up by their side. It's only natural to form a relationship between a ward and her caregivers. Camryn is Mr. Newman's stepdaughter and also has the right to inherit the property. Besides, the Newman Enterprise that Mr. Newman took over should have belonged to Camryn's father in the first place."

"Didn't Mr. and Mrs. Newman have a son and daughter after getting married? Mr. and Mrs. Newman haven't been sentenced yet. If Mr. Newman is sentenced to death, it might be possible for his two sisters to fight for the property after his death. However, he's not dead yet. Why did they come back to fight for property?"

Callum said, "That's why Camryn fell out with her two aunts. Now, Newman Enterprise is temporarily controlled by Camryn and Dalton Mitchell. Dalton is the deputy managing director of the company and was deeply trusted by Mr. Newman. However, he has known Camryn for many years and treats her like a younger sister. I only recently learned of their connection."

Rosella was silent for a moment before saying, "I didn't expect Camryn to have this trick up her sleeve. It's no wonder your nana chose her, Callum, since this has to do with your wife's family, you should help out more. Don't let your future wife suffer."

"Of course. Don't worry, Mom. I won't let your future daughter-in-law suffer."

As expected of mother and son.

Camryn had not accepted Callum's feelings yet, but Rosella already regarded her as her future daughter-in-law and protected her. She was afraid that Camryn would suffer losses in the fight over inheritance.

"Ask Zack if you need help, or tell me if you need me to come forward. I'll never let my future daughter-in-law be bullied by others."

Once again, the York family's protectiveness was vividly showcased.

When Tania protected Serenity, the latter had already become the former's daughter-in-law. It was natural for a mother-in-law to protect her daughter-in-law.

However, Camryn had not married into the York family yet, but Rosella already treated her as a daughter-in-law and watched over her.

Callum smiled. "I'm relieved by your words, Mom."

Deep down, he was actually a little worried that his parents would not be able to accept a blind woman as their daughter-in-law.

His mother's words gave him assurance.
