Chapter 1516

“Do you still get morning sickness, Ally? You’re three months along, right?” Old Mrs. York asked out of concern.

Alice, who was sitting nearby, answered, “Yes, it’s been three months. I still get morning sickness about half an hour after eating. I only feel more comfortable after vomiting. My mom said I might have to deal with morning sickness until I give birth.”

Although Alice had terrible morning sickness and felt awful every time she vomited, it did not stop her from loving the baby in her womb.

She would be able to feel fetal movement after some time..

When Alice hit three months, she went to the hospital for a checkup and ultrasound scan. She saw the doctor’s report. The doctor said her baby’s fetal movement was ideal.

However, she could not feel the movements as they were still subtle.

According to books, fetal movements could be felt after sixteen weeks. As the fetus grew, the movements would become more detectable.

Back then, Clive had wanted her to abort the child. However, upon getting the ultrasound report three months later, he kept staring at it. Although he did not understand the report, he could not bear to let it go.

Alice knew that Clive was looking forward to the child. He was simply worried sick about her morning sickness that he desperately wanted her to get an abortion.

Luckily, he did not suggest getting an abortion anymore after everyone’s persuasion.

Whenever Clive saw her vomiting her guts out, he would be concerned about her while scolding the baby in her womb.

He would say, “I’ll spank your little butt after you’re out, little one. Look how much you’re torturing your mother.”

Alice touched her belly.

Grandma May said, “Nothing can be done about morning sickness. Some people do continue having it until they give birth. I remember Tania vomiting badly when she had Kevin. It carried on until she gave birth. She didn’t have morning sickness at all when she was pregnant with Zack and Peter. It only happened when she was pregnant with Kevin.

“Tania even thought her third child would be a daughter because of the different reactions. However, it was still a son in the end.”

Hearing those words, Alice smiled and said, “I guess I’ll be having morning sickness until my due date too.”

“Being a mom isn’t easy.”

Grandma May sighed.

“You can’t let yourself go hungry even if you vomit, Ally I think you got thinner. Fetuses require increasingly more nutrients after they’re three months old. If you don’t eat, the baby will absorb nutrients from the mother’s body. You’ll get even skinnier.”

Mrs. Stone chimed in, “Alice doesn’t vomit much if she takes soup. I’ve been asking her to have more soup every meal.”

Alice said, “I’ll eat, Grandma May. I do vomit a lot, but I have a good appetite. I crave everything.”

Grandma May nodded. “That’s great.”

A maid walked over and said to Mrs. Stone, “The food is served, madame.”

Mrs. Stone nodded. The maid retreated.

“Let’s have our meal first, Old Mrs. York.”

Grandma May did not refuse. She said with a smile, “River and I will be getting a free meal here then.”

Mr. and Mrs. Stone smiled. “You honor us by staying for a meal, Old Mrs. York.”

“Don’t talk about honor. We’re relatives now and will interact with each other a lot. You two must have lots of free time as you’re retired and staying home. Do come and visit us often. My sons and daughters-in-law have also retired. They’re bored at home.

“You’re peers and can get along with each other well. You may invite them whenever there are events.”

Mrs. Stone nodded. “I’ll go over and play poker with them soon. Your three daughters-in-law and I make up a good number of players.”

Grandma May grinned. "I haven't played poker in a long time."

Chapter 1517

"I'll play poker with you whenever I'm free in the future." Mrs. Stone agreed with Grandma May.

Regardless of their past relationship, they had become relatives.

Relatives only got closer if everyone visited each other more.

Mrs. Stone was a representative of Serenity's family. She had to support Serenity. Additionally, she needed to have more frequent interactions with the York family to prevent people from saying Serenity was not on good terms with her in-laws.

"Okay."

Grandma May agreed happily.

"Let's go and have our meal," Mrs. Stone said again.

Grandma May gave a hum of approval. She only stood up after Mrs. Stone got up.

Elisa was the closest person to Grandma May. She went forward to help her.

Grandma May only let Elisa support her slightly. She smiled. "I can still walk swiftly without a walking cane."

She did have a walking cane, but it was used to hit people. It could be due to her practicing martial arts and having a special identity back when she was young that made her body healthy.

Her daughters-in-law could not even beat her when they went hiking.

"You won't have to use a walking cane even after eight to ten years, Grandma May." Elisa smiled and added, "After Serenity and the rest have children, the children will start climbing around. When that time comes, you might have to use a walking cane. It'll be used to chase after those naughty kids."

Grandma May imagined the scene of her holding a walking cane and chasing her great-grandchildren. She beamed from ear to ear.

She patted Elisa's hand.

Elisa looked toward her.

"There are many good men around. Feel with your heart. You'll find that the person who suits you best is right by your side."

Grandma May whispered to Elisa secretly and did not let anyone hear her. After speaking, she also glanced at Remy.

Mrs. Stone did not invite Remy to join the meal, but he was already used to scrounging food. He did not need Mrs. Stone's invitation. He automatically followed the Stones into the dining hall.

The maids did not dare refuse Remy his utensils.

With Elisa present, Mrs. Stone would not show Remy that she was unhappy. She would be less than enthusiastic at most.

Elisa was taken aback. Under Grandma May's hint, she glanced at Remy too.

The old lady patted the back of Elisa's hand again.

It was not that the feisty girl of the Stone family did not match Grandma May's tastes. Instead, the girl was not to the liking of her grandsons. Therefore, Grandma May never considered Elisa when picking out granddaughters-in-law.

Moreover, the Stones and the Yorks used to be business rivals.

If it were not for Serenity suddenly becoming Mrs. Stone's niece, the two families' relationship would never ease.

Elisa had been obsessed with Zachary for many years. After discovering Zachary and Serenity's relationship, everyone witnessed her reaction and performance. That girl was clear-headed.

Serenity sincerely hoped Elisa could find her happiness.

Grandma May felt Remy was a good match for Elisa.

Remy even asked Grandma May previously to recommend a suitable girl to him if she saw one.

In fact, Remy did not need Grandma May worrying over him. He had his target set.

"Grandma May."

Elisa said softly, "Remy and I are friends."

They simply got along well.

The old woman smiled and did not say a word.

Chapter 1518

After the meal, Grandma May and Mrs. Stone had a chat before the former left the Stones' residence with River.

Everyone saw the grandmother and grandchild out. After River drove away with Grandma May, Mrs. Stone turned to look around. When she saw Remy, she pressed her lips together. Ultimately, she did not say anything and went back into the house.

Alice had to take a nap after having a meal.

Mr. Stone went to accompany his wife.

Elisa and Remy were the only ones left in the garden

"Do you want to go for a walk?" Elisa asked.

He smiled gently. "It's said that taking a walk after meals promotes longevity."

Elisa looked toward his smiling face. He gave off a gentle and elegant aura. Whenever he talked to her, he would have a gentle smile. That smile felt like the spring breeze, soft and warm.

They walked out of the Stones' manor.

In one of the rooms on the second floor, Mrs. Stone stood by the window. She watched her lovely daughter walk outside with Remy.

She said to her husband with a tight expression, "That Johnson boy asked Elisa to go on a walk with him again."

Mr. Stone walked over and looked outside. He saw his daughter walking with Remy side by side.

They were in a conversation and laughed as they walked.

Mr. Stone tore his gaze away from them. When he saw his wife's tense face, he said, "If you don't like them talking to each other, just make it clear. You're making this displeased expression in front of me, but your daughter and the Johnson boy can't see it."

"That boy must be blind. He always comes over during mealtimes. He doesn't even seem to understand when I frown at him.

"Elisa said she's friends with him, and they get along well. It's not nice for me to scowl in front of Elisa 100."

Mrs. Stone used to dominate the business world alongside her husband, but she was utterly clueless about Remy approaching her daughter.

Elisa treated Remy as a friend.

There was softness and a hint of passion in his gaze toward her. He doted on her a lot too. He obviously liked her, but he had not confessed.

Mrs. Stone loved Elisa the most among her three children. She knew her daughter did not have many friends. If Mrs. Stone were to stop them from seeing each other, it would probably start a conflict between herself and Elisa, as Elisa thought of Remy as a friend.

She decided to talk to Remy.

Mrs. Stone had requested Zachary to talk to the boy, but nothing had changed.

When Remy came, she would hint Remy to leave while her daughter was not paying attention. However, that boy's face was thicker than a wall. Regardless of whether she was being direct or indirect, he continued drinking and eating.

As long as Elisa did not chase him away, he could stay from morning till night. It was to the point where it felt as if he wanted to take a bath at the Stones' manor before heading home.

"Actually, Remy isn't bad. He's not inferior to Zachary by much. I admire him," Mr. Stone said.

"I know Remy is decent, but he's from Annenburg. It's so far away. We only have one daughter. I can't bear Elisa marrying off to a faraway place."

Mrs. Stone was fixated on that.

Mr. Stone could not bear his daughter being married off to a distant place too.

"The new house Remy bought is right beside ours..."

Mrs. Stone glared at her husband. "Are you thinking of giving your permission? Yes, he did buy a house beside ours. He lives in Wiltspoon long-term too. However, who can guarantee he won't bring Elisa back to FC Manor after marrying her?"

"Maybe he just bought that villa to coax us into agreeing to Elisa marrying him. Will we be able to decide where he brings Elisa after she marries him?"

Mr. Stone said, "You should talk to Remy about that."

"Clive came back today. We can get Clive to find some time to go to Remy's company and chat with him so that Elisa doesn't find out."

Mrs. Stone did not want her daughter to know that their family did not accept Remy.

Chapter 1519

Elisa had no clue that her family was worried about her being taken away by Remy.

After she and Remy left the villa, they walked slowly along the concrete road.

Usually, Elisa would enter and exit the villa in a car. She had never admired the scenery around the villa properly before.

"After living here for so many years, I just found out that the scenery here is quite pretty. The greenery is great, and there are many benches by the road for people to sit and rest if they're tired. There are also gazebos built within certain distances of each other."

There was a garden upon entering the vast area of the villas. It was filled with lush green trees. It also had fitness equipment and a children's playground.

The Stones had bought a few smaller villas and connected them to build a bigger villa. They had a complete range of sports and entertainment facilities.

Therefore, Elisa rarely walked around the garden in the estate area. In her own words, she simply glanced at the passing scenery when she exited and entered her villa in the car.

"The environment here is great, so I quickly bought your neighbor's house when I knew it was going on sale. Besides the surroundings, the security here is excellent, and the area is spacious. Although it's pre-owned, I think it's worth it."

Remy talked as he walked. It felt as if he had picked up a treasure when he bought the pre-owned house.

To him, it was indeed a steal.

That was because he was aiming for Elisa.

“You did get lucky buying the villa beside my family’s. That villa takes up a wide area. Our family wanted to buy it too, but you snatched it up too quickly.”

While walking, Elisa smiled and said, “When my brother found out that the house was sold, he was surprised that there was someone quicker than us. I thought about who it could be, but you completely did not cross my mind. You have an excellent eye for things, Remy. Buying that villa is definitely not a loss.

“You even hired someone to bless the house. After moving in, your work will surely sail smoothly. The branch of FC & Co. here might even develop into a mega-corporation.

“The person you like will definitely adore the huge villa you prepared for her too.”

Remy had asked Elisa’s opinions on his refurbishing plans for the villa. She did not hold back and discussed it with him. In the end, a refurbishing plan that everyone agreed on was used.

Elisa thought she had sophisticated tastes and that as long as she approved of it, Remy’s crush would feel the same as well.

“Mhm, I hope she’ll like it.”

Elisa turned to look at him. She said with a smile, “Remy, we know each other so well now. I truly treat you as a close guy friend. Be honest with me. Who’s the girl you like? I’m quite curious about what the girl you fell for looks like.”

Remy stopped and met her gaze. He was still smiling warmly. “Do you really want to know?”

“I’ve wanted to know since ages ago. You’re the one who refused to tell me.

“You made it so mysterious. I went through all the daughters of wealthy families that I know of, but I can’t make a guess. You smile at everyone during banquets. It’s difficult to guess the answer through your attitude toward others.”

Remy laughed. “Let’s sit there and have a slow chat.”

Elisa had no objections.

They went to the stone bench Remy spoke of and sat down.

The ornamental trees there had luxuriant foliage and provided some shade.

Remy took out the packet of tissue he had brought with him. He used the tissue and wiped the stone bench clean before letting Elisa sit on it.

Seeing his actions, she praised him, "Remy, you're really attentive and considerate. The girl who'll have your love is really fortunate. She'll gain the envy of many when she marries you, just like Zachary and Serenity.

"We're neighbors. Please stay away from me when you husband and wife are being lovey-dovey. Don't upset a single lady like me."

Remy smiled and said, "Don't worry. Even if I upset someone, it'll never be you."

Chapter 1520

Elisa sat on the bench. "That's great. I can't stand the provocation from seeing you people being lovey-dovey now. I feel jealous every time I see Serenity and Jasmine."

"Elisa, you don't have to be envious of them. You'll be as happy as they are in the future."

"Who can be certain about the future? However, if I were to be unhappy, I wouldn't compromise. If my future husband doesn't treat me well, I'll divorce him and return to my family. My two brothers can support me for the rest of my life."

The confidence of a married woman came from her family's support.

Elisa felt that her family was very supportive.

"That won't happen. Your in-laws will be great people."

Remy felt the elders in his family were nice.

No one would make things difficult for their daughter-in-law.

“Let’s stop talking about me. Tell me. Who’s the lady on your mind? It must be someone from Wiltspoon, right? Did you buy a house here because of her?”

Remy nodded and admitted it honestly. “Yes. I did it for her. I wanted to be nearer to her, see her frequently, and interact with her in close proximity. She also approved my refurbishing plans for this villa after a discussion together.”

Elisa said, “Remy, are you hinting at me?”

Remy looked toward her and said seriously, “Elisa, this isn’t a hint. It’s you. You’re the person I like. I bought this villa to be closer to your house. We’ll be neighbors in the future. I’ll be able to interact with you up close.

“If we can be together, we’ll live in that villa long-term, so it’ll be convenient for you to visit your family.”

Elisa was speechless.

She was surprised, yet at the same time, she did not find it shocking.

During the meal, Grandma May had hinted to her about it. She was shocked at that moment. However, she also thought the old lady was right after thinking about it.

Remy’s actions were intentional.

He kept holding off his confession. Elisa was too lazy to overthink and did not dare develop feelings for him as she feared it was wishful thinking.

“Elisa, I like you. No, I love you.”

Remy confessed in earnest. “Can you give me an opportunity to pursue you? If you can’t accept my feelings, let’s remain friends. Please don’t sever our friendship. It’s my first time loving a girl seriously and wholeheartedly.

“Once a man of the Johnson family marries a wife, he’ll be loyal to his family and marriage for the rest of his life. We won’t betray our wives and treat love seriously. We never mess around.”

Elisa was a person who expressed her love and hate daringly.

She was not a fool. She had thought about the good things Remy had done for her.

However, she did not dare take the initiative anymore after suffering a setback with Zachary. She was scared it would all be in vain again.

Elisa was not afraid of failure.

Nevertheless, it was demoralizing to experience failures repeatedly.

Since Remy had confessed, she would consider it thoroughly.

“I know the Johnson family upholds great family values. In Annenburg, many young girls dream of marrying into the Johnson family to have a loving husband, not riches.”

Remy felt relief upon hearing Elisa’s words.

Luckily, the rumors of his family’s good values had spread all the way to Wiltspoon.
