Novel Chapter 1715 -Elisa and Serenity each drove a car into the Stone family's big villa.

As soon as the two people's vehicles were parked in the small open-air parking lot, the neighbors had been staring at them for a long time, and Remy, who was waiting, came over.

Remy was also holding a bouquet of bright roses and a set of jewelry.

Elisa got out of the car and saw an unfamiliar car parked not far away. It looked familiar but she couldn't remember whose car it was.

She turned her head to ask the maid who opened the door for her, but seeing Remy walking towards her with a bouquet of flowers and a red bag in her hand, she couldn't help laughing.

Elisa: "Remy, you're here!"

After Remy came from Annenburg, the two had a meal together. Remy needed to be busy for a while, and Elisa wisely didn't disturb his work, besides She and Serenity were also very busy.

When Elisa was busy with her career, she really didn't have much time to think about love.

"I just came here." Remy walked up to Elisa, handed the dazzling bouquet of roses to Elisa, and said, "I came from the company, passed by a flower shop, and saw the roses in the flower shop were very beautiful, and I bought a bunch for you."

"Why don't you buy it for me?" Elisa teased him while taking the bouquet.

Remy smiled, "No, as long as I am in Wiltspoon, I will send you flowers every day. Even if I am not there, I will call the flower shop to order a bouquet and ask them to deliver it to you."

He replied that's what Annenburg did during that time.

People were not in Wiltspoon, but the pursuit of her would not stop.

Remy handed the set of jewelry to Elisa again, and said, "This is a newly designed style in the jewelry store opened by my sister-in-law in Meadspring. It is not yet on the market. I bought a set from my sister-in-law. Here it is."

Elisa took the set of jewelry again, "Isn't your sister-in-law still in confinement, and still manages the business of the jewelry store?"

Elisa was aware of Jane's long residence in Annenburg and the fact that her twin brother handled the majority of the Meadsprings' business.

"Mrs. Lafayette delivered it. Young Master Lafayette instead took his newlywed wife on her honeymoon while Mr. Lafayette had originally planned to take Mrs. Lafayette on a world tour. The family business has no one to manage it. The Lafayettes will hold off until their sister-in-law gives birth to a baby."

Young Master Lafayette and his wife went out for their honeymoon, and they left for half a year, making his father half dead with anger.

Young Master Lafayette argued that if he didn't take the chance to play for a few more months, how would he have time to spend with his wife in the future? He would assume responsibility for being the family's head when he returned.

When Young Master Lafayette's father left the house later, it didn't really matter because he could travel the world with his lovely mother since his father was about to retire.

On the contrary, Young Master Lafayette and his wife were newlyweds, so the influence would be greater.

Elisa let out a cry.

Jane had a jewelry store in Meadspring, and Mrs. Lafayette was the chief designer. She heard that Mrs. Lafayette used to learn jewelry design, but she was favored by the head of the blue house early on, and married back home to become the head of the house. She was a noble lady at home, and then went crazy for more than 20 years.

Fortunately, Jane has been found, and the Mrs. Lafayette is well. When Jane wanted to invest in a jewelry store, Mrs. Lafayette acted as a jewelry designer for her daughter, Jane. In fact, it was a partnership between mother and daughter.

But Mr. Lafayette didn't approve of his wife showing up in public to do business, but since it's rare for the couple to reunite, Mrs. Lafayette didn't dare to stop his wife from doing business anymore. Lest Mrs. Lafayette divorce Mr. Lafayette.

The children were all on the side of Mrs. Lafayette.

Novel Chapter 1716 -Elisa heard Remy mention the old couple, and was very interested in the story of the Lafayette family master and his wife, but it was the story of the Lafayette family master, and no one would dare to dig deeper unless he told it.

The two walked to the villa together.

Remy saw Serenity who was waiting not far away, holding Sonny by her arm, and asked Elisa with a smile, “Are you and Mrs. York going to discuss business again?”

It’s marketable. In a few days, we’ll probably have a business trip, so we can’t just make money from people in Wiltspoon.”

Both Elisa and Serenity were ambitious and planned to expand their business to other cities and villages.

Remy immediately proposed and said: “You can go to Annenburg for investigation. Many rural fields in our area are also deserted. The young people go out to work, and the old people take care of their grandchildren at home and grow some vegetables to eat. They seldom farm anymore.”

Elisa smiled and said, “Annenburg is a little far away from Wiltspoon. Our plan is to develop neighboring cities first, and then gradually expand to further cities.”

Remy: “Let’s see how competitive the market in Annenburg is.”

Elisa was not the only one investing in vegetable farms, there were vegetable farms in many places.

“Thank you in advance.” Elisa thanked him.

Remy smiled: “It’s a trivial matter, you’re welcome, I also have selfish intentions.”

Remy hope that Elisa’s business would develop into Annenburg, and they would become husband and wife in the future. Even in Annenburg, Elisa would still be busy with her own affairs, lest she felt too bored.

Remy: "You can also think about investing in other businesses. You are setting up a fruit and vegetable company. With vegetables, you can also grow fruits. That's worthy of the name."

Elisa replied: "Fruit cultivation yields a slower return."

Not as guaranteed as vegetable farming was the harvest. It was simple to have no harvest when the wind and rain were not always smooth.

"I'll think about other investments." Since Elisa stepped into this circle, she naturally wouldn't stop at one project.

Not to mention her, Serenity was also ambitious.

Zachary sometimes complained about the two, but now they got into the money pile, only thinking about how to develop their business and earn more money.

They were not short of money yet.

Elisa felt that she and Serenity liked that sense of accomplishment.

"Remy." Serenity approached the two of them, and she greeted Remy with a smile.

Sonny also politely called "Uncle Remy."

Remy took two steps forward and hugged Sonny.

"Sonny, I haven't seen you for a while. I miss you, Sonny."

Sonny looked at Remy and said, "Uncle, I also miss you. Uncle, where have you been recently?"

"Your Uncle stayed home, because your uncle has become a real uncle, and two cute babies have been added to our family."

Sonny asked very interestedly: "Uncle, Why didn't you bring two cute babies over for me to see? I also like cute babies."

Remy smiled and said, "The babies are still very young and not suitable for going out. When the babies grow up a bit, I will bring them over to play with you. Sonny, when the time comes, you'll play with the two little babies."

Sonny nodded fiercely, and promised: "I will give them my toys to play with."

Novel Chapter 1717 -Remy: "Sonny, you're so kind, your uncle thanked you for the two babies."

Sonny smiled happily.

Remy put down Sonny, Serenity took Sonny and went into the house with Elisa and the others.

When Mrs. Stone heard that Serenity and Sonny were coming, she was very happy at first, and even greeted her at the door with a smile on her face.

But when she saw Remy was also together, Mrs. Stone's smile faded away.

Mrs. Stone thought that Remy had quit in spite of the difficulties, but later she found out that it was the youngest mistress of the Johnson family who had given birth.

As soon as Remy returned to Wiltspoon, he had the cheek to visit again within two days.

"Auntie."

"Auntie."

Serenity and Sonny greeted each other one after the other.

"Auntie." Remy also greeted with a smile.

Mrs. Stone glared at Remy, then turned to Sonny, bent down to hug Sonny, and smiled, "Sonny, you haven't come to play at your aunt's house for a long time, your aunt miss you."

Sonny said childishly, "I miss you auntie."

As Sonny spoke, he even blew a kiss to Mrs. Stone, which made Mrs. Stone very happy.

She turned around holding Sonny and went back to the house, but didn't pay attention to Remy.

Serenity glanced at Remy, and saw that Remy's expression had not changed, and Remy still had his usual smile on his face.

Zachary said that when chasing his wife, his face could be compared with the city wall, because men understood men.

Serenity followed Mrs. Stone's footsteps.

Mrs. Stone complained softly to her: "Remy is really thick-skinned."

Serenity also whispered: "It shows that Remy is sincere to Elisa and really likes Elisa. For Elisa's sake, it's okay to be cheeky."

"What? If it's because Auntie doesn't want him to come, he won't, and his feelings for Elisa are fake and you just spoke for him, I don't agree with any of the positive things you say about him because it's too far away."

Serenity: "Auntie, Elisa is not a child; she is fully aware of this. I believe Elisa has a good eye for people, as the men she likes are all excellent. Yes, everyone knows that Remy is a good person."

Mrs. Stone choked, but could not refute her words.

After a long while, Mrs. Stone said helplessly: "How dare I stop so abruptly? Mrs. Lewis is my historical lesson. Now I only dare to move based on emotion and logic, and I no longer dare to stop abruptly."

Mrs. Stone had to ask Andrew for help.

She tried her best to match Andrew and Elisa, but neither of them called, alas.

Andrew was indistinguishable from Remy in every respect, and he was a native of Wiltspoon. If Elisa were with Andrew, she would support the initiative with both hands and feet.

Mrs. Stone saw Andrew as a son-in-law, and the more she saw him, the more she liked him.

"Where's your sister?" Mrs. Stone asked about Liberty.

Serenity then told Mrs. Stone that Mrs. Lewis asked Liberty for help.

Mrs. Stone hugged Sonny and sat down on the sofa. After a moment of silence, she sighed, "It's fine if you feel that you have a clear conscience."

Serenity said, "I told my sister the same way."
